

But among the Laodiceans the Antipas are not found. Their existence is a supposition, as, “If any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me.” The Satan was triumphant there, and the faithful witnesses reduced to such an insignificant minority as to be noticeable in the prophecy only as an hypothesis. They were “a contemptible few” not submerged in “the depths of the Satan as they speak;” but not enough of them to save the ecclesia from being spued out of the Spirit’s mouth. A few did hear the Spirit’s voice among the Laodiceans, and became fugitives in consequence. They were no longer found in “the churches,” but in their own peculiar place, “in the wilderness;” where, as “the Woman” and “the Remnant of her Seed, which keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Anointed,” they were “nourished” for 1260 Years “from the face of the Serpent,” become a Catholic of the Laodicean type—Rev. 12:14, 17, 9, 10.
