

WRESTED SCRIPTURES

A Christadelphian Handbook of Suggested Explanations to Difficult Passages

Published by

THE CRISTADELPHIANS
Box 1066
Pasadena, California 91102

Printed By

GEDDES PRESS, Printers
Pasadena, California

FOREWORD

Peter commenting on the epistles of Paul, said that there “are some things hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest, as they do also other scriptures, unto their own destruction.”¹ Since Peter’s time, there have been few Christadelphians who have not at some time or another found themselves tangled up in discussion about some principle of the Truth, and there are few who have not been, at some time or another, compelled to admit, to themselves, if not to others, that they have been lamentably ill-prepared for such responsibility. As one Christadelphian of long preaching experience put it:

It is not sufficient, as one finds to one’s cost, to be able to quote: “the dead know not anything”. It is quite another matter that one should cope convincingly with the thief on the cross; the spirits of just men made perfect; Paul’s desire to depart and be with Christ, and his manifest preference to be absent from the body and present with the Lord. It is one thing to know and believe: “Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord”. But to reason cogently concerning Isaiah’s Messianic prophecy about a Mighty God, with Thomas’ confession, or with the copious pre-existence passages in John’s gospel, is a different proposition altogether. Nor is it sufficient to fence with the copious problems of orthodoxy defensively. One must be able to carry the campaign into the home territory of ignorance and error. The chief function of light is that it will shine in darkness. It becomes, therefore, the responsibility of all Christadelphians, and not only of those who are speakers or campaigners, to acquaint themselves with the best available means of quenching all the fiery darts of the enemy. It should also be noted, that nothing imparts more confidence in controversy than a well-grounded knowledge of what the passage in question really means.²

This study commenced shortly after baptism and passed from personal needs to those of the contacts and new converts in Guyana (then British Guiana) during 1960-1961. Later, in Toronto, a number of “preliminary copies” were mimeographed and distributed to brethren throughout the ecclesial world. Their critical comments were solicited.

One unforeseen result of the distribution was the widespread interest in the project. The Spanish team working out of Bogotá, Colombia, translated the section on the “Trinity” and young people in the Toronto area made copious notes from the sections on passages wrested by Pentecostals and Evangelicals in preparation for open-air speaking in Allan Gardens, Toronto. The audiences, often numbering in the hundreds during a Sunday afternoon, presented problem questions, many of which found their way into this handbook. The instruction of these friends on a one-night-a-week basis resulted in the handbook being enlarged from a consideration of "wrested scriptures" to preliminary points and suggested strategies in reaching those with beliefs moulded by a religious organization.

¹ 2 Peter 3:16.

² H.W., “Wrested Scriptures”, The Christadelphian, XCIV, (April, 1957), 143.

Shortly after preaching work was undertaken in Allan Gardens, the Manitoulin Island Ecclesia (in Canada's Northern Ontario Region) began "spying out the land" in the local churches in search of good and honest hearts. The brethren attended public meetings and at the conclusion of the services attempted to persuade preacher and congregation of a more excellent way. Knowledge of wrested scriptures played an important part in this venture.

In the Great Lakes area, a full page advertisement in the Toronto papers (during the June 1967, Arab-Israeli War) resulted in many requests for the Bible Postal Course. A.S.K. (Advancement of Scriptural Knowledge) workshops were enlarged to process the correspondence. Many of the questions asked were the same as previous ones (e.g., "Thief on the cross", "Rich man and Lazarus"). If a standard answer were drafted, the few brethren working to answer questions could give more time to those questions requiring detailed research. Again the usefulness of a handbook on wrested scriptures became apparent.

It is the design of this handbook to provide a ready reference source of suggested explanations and strategies especially for young Christadelphians. The study is not, however, intended to encourage "potted thinking". The solutions outlined are suggested solutions. Christadelphians will no doubt want to modify and enlarge the list of passages considered. Many an undiscovered vein of Scriptural treasure awaits the investigation of these students.

It will be apparent, especially to older Christadelphians, that much of the analysis is not original. It is a synthesis in which explanations gleaned from reading or discussion have been used without acknowledgement except where reference is made to copyright material. It should not, however, be thought that the problems and solutions are the result of "armchair theology". For the most part, they are the result of real life situations—West Indian town-hall question periods, university campus discussions, and open-air disputations.

RON ABEL

HOW TO USE THIS HANDBOOK

1. An explanation to a “wrested scripture” can be found in two ways:
 - a) At the front of the handbook, the “table of contents” is divided into four sections. These are as follows:

Section A—passages which are wrested uniquely by a religious group. For example, “Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church” (Matt. 16:18) is used uniquely by the Roman Church.

Section B—passages used by many different religious groups. For example, “Verily I say unto thee, To day shalt thou be with me in paradise” (Lk. 23:43).

Section C—passages which appear to conflict with current scientific thinking. For example, “The sun stood still, and the moon stayed” (Josh. 10:13).

Section D—passages which appear to be inaccurate or contradictory. For example, the differing inscriptions on the “cross”.

- b) At the back of this handbook is a list of all the passages considered with the corresponding page number.

2. Certain abbreviations are used. These are as follows:

A.V.	— Authorized King James Version of the Bible.
cf.	— Compare
e.g.	— For example
ibid.	— Quoted from the same source as the previous footnote.
i.e.	— That is
J.W.	— “Jehovah’s Witnesses”
mg.	— Alternative translation given in the margin.
R.C.	— Roman Catholic
R.S.V.	— American Revised Standard Version of the Bible (1952).
R.V.	— Revised Version of the Bible (1885).
S.D.A.	— Seventh-day Adventist
vs.	— Verse, verses.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

SECTION A—PASSAGES UNIQUELY WRESTED BY RELIGIOUS BODIES

ROMAN CHURCH		Page
Preliminary Points		1
Suggested Strategy		1
Papal Infallibility
Matt. 16:18	Upon this rock I will build my church	4
Luke 10:16	He that heareth you, heareth me	7
Luke 22:32	Strengthen thy brethren	8
John 21:16	Feed my sheep	9
Transubstantiation
Matt. 26:26	This is my body	10
John 6:53	Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man	11
Purgatory
Matt. 12:32	It shall not be forgiven him	12
John 20:23	Whose soever sins ye remit	12
1 Cor. 3:13	It shall be revealed by fire	13
Celibacy
1 Cor. 7:1	It is good for a man not to touch a woman	14
Extreme Unction
James 5:14	Let them pray over him	14

MORMON

Preliminary Points		16
Suggested Strategy		18
"Prophecies" of Mormonism
Deut. 33:15	The ancient mountains and lasting hills	24
Isa. 29:4	Thy voice shall whisper out of the dust	25
Ezek. 37:19	The joining of the two sticks	27
John 10:16	Other sheep have I not of this fold	27
Rev. 20:12	The books were opened	30
Polygamy
Preliminary Points		31
The Argument		31
Isa. 4:1	Seven women shall take hold of one man	36
Baptism for the Dead
1 Cor. 15:29	Baptism for the dead	37

SEVENTH-DAY ADVENTIST

The Sabbath
The "ceremonial law" and the "moral law"		39
Origin and duration of the sabbath law		39
Matt. 24:20	Pray that your flight be not on the sabbath	42
Millenium
Isa. 24:1,3,19	Desolation of the earth	43
Jer. 4:7,23	The earth without form and void	44
Rev. 21:10	Jerusalem descending out of heaven	45

PENTECOSTAL		Page
Preliminary Points		46
Suggested Strategy		46
"Faith" Healing
Mark 16:17,18	These signs shall follow them that believe	51
	Tongues
1 Cor. 14:2	Speaking in tongues	54
	Substitution
Rom. 5:6,8	Christ died for us	56

"JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES"

Preliminary Points		57
Suggested Strategy		58
Natural Israel
Isa. 43:10	Ye are my witnesses	59
Matt. 23:37,38	Behold your house is left desolate	60
"144,000"
Rev. 7:4; 14:3	The number of the sealed — 144,000	62
Return of Christ
Matt. 24:3	What shall be the sign of thy coming?	65
Blood Transfusions
Gen. 9:4	The blood . . . ye shall not eat	66

HERBERT ARMSTRONG'S "BRITISH ISRAELISM"

Preliminary Points		68
Gen. 35:11	A company of nations shall be of thee	69
Ezra 1:5	Judah and Benjamin go up to Jerusalem	71
Ezra 2:1	They came again unto Jerusalem and Judah	71
Jer. 33:17	Never want a man to sit upon the throne	73
Jer. 43:5-7	The King's Daughters Go into Egypt	74

CHURCH OF CHRIST

Preliminary Points		77
Suggested Strategy		77
The kingdom of God		79
Josh. 21:43	All the land was possessed	82
Josh. 21:45	All came to pass	82
Josh. 23:14	All good things are come to pass	82
Neh. 9:8	Thou hast performed thy words	83
Isa. 66:1	The heaven is my throne, the earth my footstool	84
Jer. 22:30	No man of his seed shall prosper	84
Dan. 2:44	In the days of these kings	85
Dan. 7:7-9	The ancient of days did sit	86
Micah 4:1-2	In the last days	87
Matt. 3:2	The kingdom of heaven is at hand	89
Matt. 4:17	Jesus preached the kingdom is at hand	89
Matt. 11:12	The kingdom suffereth violence	89
Mark 9:1	The kingdom come with power	90
Luke 16:16	Every man presseth into it	89
Luke 17:20,21	The kingdom is within you	91
John 18:36	My kingdom is not of this world	93
Acts 15:14-17	The tabernacle of David	94
Rom. 14:17	The kingdom is righteousness peace and joy	95
1 Cor. 15:25	He must reign	96
Eph. 1:3	Spiritual blessings in heavenly places	97

	Page
Eph. 2:6	Sitting in heavenly places 97
Col. 1:13	Translated into his kingdom 98
1 Pet. 2:9	Ye are a royal priesthood 100
Rev. 1:9	John in the Kingdom 101
Rev. 5:10	Kings and priests 101
Musical Instruments
Col. 3:16	Psalms and hymns and spiritual songs 102

SECTION B

PASSAGES WRESTED BY MANY RELIGIOUS BODIES

	Page
IMMORTALITY OF THE SOUL
Preliminary Points	103
Gen. 35:18	Rachel's soul departing 103
1 Sam. 28:7	Witch of Endor and Samuel 104
1 Kings 17:21	The child's soul came into him again 105
Ecc. 12:7	The spirit shall return to God 105
Matt. 10:28	Not able to kill the soul 106
Luke 16:19-31	Rich man and Lazarus 107
Acts 7:59	Lord Jesus, receive my spirit 110
1 Thess. 5:23	Spirit and body and soul 111
Heb. 12:23	Spirits of just men made perfect 112
1 Pet. 3:19	The spirits in prison 113
Rev. 6:9	Souls under the altar 115

HEAVEN—PLACE OF REWARD

2 Kings 2:11	See explanation to Matt. 17:1-9 116
Matt. 5:12	Reward in heaven 115
Matt. 17:1-9	Transfiguration 116
Matt. 22:32	God is a God of the living 117
Luke 23:43	Today you will be with me in paradise 117
John 14:2	In my Father's house are many mansions 119
2 Cor. 5:8	Absent from the body 121
2 Cor. 12:2-4	Caught up to the third heaven 122
Col. 1:5	The hope laid up for you in heaven 125
Phil. 1:21-23	To depart and be with with Christ 126
Phil. 3:20	Our conversation is in heaven 127
1 Thess. 4:17	Caught up to meet the Lord 128
Heb. 11:5	Enoch was translated 129
2 Pet. 3:10	The earth shall be burned up 130
Rev. 5:10	We shall reign on the earth 131

HELL—PLACE OF TORMENT

Matt. 25:46	Everlasting punishment 131
Mark 9:43-48	Fire is not quenched 133
Luke 16:19-31	Rich man and Lazarus 107
Rev. 14:10,11	Tormented with fire and brimstone 134
Rev. 19:3	The smoke of her torment 134
Rev. 19:20	Lake of fire burning with brimstone 135
Rev. 20:10	Tormented day and night for ever and ever 134
Rev. 20:14	Lake of fire 135
Rev. 21:8	Lake which burneth with fire and brimstone 135

RESURRECTION

Immortal Emergence
1 Cor. 15:52	Raised incorruptible 137
Phil. 4:3	Names written in the book of life 139
1 John 1:9	If we confess our sins 140

	Page
Only Baptized Raised
Psa. 50:5	141
Heb. 13:20	143
1 Cor. 15:22	145
Resurrection of Non-Responsible
Matt. 2:17,18	146
Jn. 5:28,29	146
1 Cor. 7:14	147
1 Jn. 2:2	148
The Rest of the Dead
Rev. 20:5	149
 BAPTISM
Matt. 18:4	150
Mark 7:4	150
Mark 10:14	150
Luke 11:38	150
John 4:2	151
Rom. 10:9	152
Rom. 10:13	152
1 Cor. 1:17	153
	150
	150
	150
	150
	151
	152
	152
	153
 "SAVED" (ETERNAL SECURITY)
Preliminary Points	154
Suggested Strategy	155
John 3:36	157
John 6:47	157
John 6:54	157
John 10:28	158
John 11:26	159
Eph. 2:8,9	160
1 John 5:11	157
1 John 5:13	157
	157
	157
	157
	158
	159
	160
	157
	157
 SATAN, DEVIL, DEMONS
Preliminary Points	162
Demons
Preliminary Points	163
Gen. 3:4-5	164
Gen. 6:2	165
Job 1:6	166
Isa. 14:12-14	168
Ezek. 28:13-16	170
Matt. 4:1-11	173
Matt. 12:43-45	174
Luke 10:18	175
Luke 22:3	176
Luke 22:31	176
John 12:31; 14:30;	176
16:11	176
John 13:2	176
John 13:27	176
2 Cor. 11:14	177
James 2:19	178
1 Pet. 5:8	178
2 Pet. 2:4; Jude 6	179
Jude 9	181
Rev. 12:7-9	182
	164
	165
	166
	168
	170
	173
	174
	175
	176
	176
	176
	176
	176
	176
	176
	177
	178
	178
	179
	181
	182

	Page
"PRE-EXISTENCE" AND "DEITY" OF CHRIST
Preliminary Points	185
Suggested Strategy	186
Gen. 1:26 Let us make man in our image	187
Isa. 9:6 The mighty God, The everlasting Father	188
John 1:1-3 In the beginning was the Word	189
John 3:13 He that came down from heaven	191
John 5:23 All men should honour the Son	191
John 6:33,38,51,58 The bread which came down from heaven	192
John 6:62 Ascend up where he was before	192
John 8:23 I am from above	193
John 8:58 Before Abraham was, I am	194
John 10:17,18 I have power to take my life again	194
John 10:30 I and my Father are one	195
John 14:9 He that hath seen me hath seen the Father	196
John 17:5 The glory which I had with thee	197
John 20:28 My Lord and my God	198
Rom. 9:5 Christ, God blessed for ever	199
Col. 1:15,16 The firstborn of every creature	201
Eph. 4:8-10 He led a host of captives	203
Heb. 1:2 By whom he made the worlds	205
Heb. 1:8 Thy throne, O God, is for ever	205
Heb. 1:10-12 Thou, Lord in the beginning	206
Heb. 7:3 Without father, mother or descent	207
Heb. 10:5 A body hast thou prepared for me	208
Rev. 3:14 The beginning of the creation of God	209

PERSONALITY OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

Preliminary Points	211
General Solution	212

SECTION C

CONFLICTS BETWEEN THE BIBLE AND "SCIENCE"

THE MIRACULOUS

Miracles and the "uniformity of nature"	215
Gen. 1:16 And God made two great lights	216
Gen. 3:1 The serpent	216
Josh. 10:13 The sun stood still and the moon stayed	218

EVOLUTION

Preliminary Points	220
Suggested Strategy	221
Bibliography	225

CARBON-14 DATING	226
-------------------------------	-----

CREATIVE DAYS

Gen. 1:5 The evening and the morning	228
Gen. 2:4 In the day the Lord God made the earth	229
Gen. 4:14 Everyone that findeth me will slay me	229
Gen. 4:16,17 Cain's wife	230

SECTION D

BIBLICAL INSPIRATION

	PAGE
PARTIAL INSPIRATION	231
1 Cor. 7:25 I have no Commandment of the Lord	234
"Non-propositional" Revelation	236
ALLEGED CONTRADICTIONS AND INACCURACIES
Preliminary Points	238
Exod. 6:3 By my name Yahweh was I not known	239
Exod. 33:11; 33:20 Moses spake with God face to face	239
1 Sam. 15:35; 19:24 Samuel came to see Saul no more	240
1 Kings 15:14; 2 Chron. 14:5 Asa's removal of the high places	240
2 Kings 18:5; 23:25 There was none like him	241
2 Kings 24:6; 2 Chron. 36:6; Jer. 22:18,19; 36:30; Ezek. 19:9
The death of Jehoiakim	242
Matt. 2:1; Luke 2:4 The birthplace of Mary and Joseph	242
Matt. 17:1; Mark 9:2; Luke 9:28 After six days	243
Matt. 19:16; Mark 10:17; Luke 18:18 Good Master	243
Matt. 20:29-34; Mk. 10:46-52; Luke 18:35-43 Healing of the blind men	244
Matt. 27:6,7; Acts 1:18 Purchase of the field	244
Matt. 27:37; Mk. 15:26; Luke 23:38; Jn. 19:19 Inscriptions on the cross	245
Matt. 28:7; Luke 24:33 The disciples—in Galilee or Jerusalem?	245
Mark 2:26; 1 Sam. 21:1-6 The priest—Abiathar or Ahimelech?	246
Mark 16:7,8; Luke 24:8,9 Told all these things	246
John 2:13-16; Matt. 21:12-13 Cleansing of the temple	248
James 1:13; Gen. 22:1 God tempts no one	248

ROMAN CATHOLICISM

PRELIMINARY POINTS

In a Roman Catholic publication bearing the imprimatur¹ of the Bishop of Fort Wayne, U.S.A., the priest says: "I'll show you why you can't appeal to the Bible against the Church . . . In fact, I'll show you why the Bible is an authority only as long as the authority of the Church is admitted . . . Reject that authority . . . and the authority of the Bible as the inspired word of God falls to the ground."²

Sooner or later in his discussion with a R.C. the Christadelphian must settle the fundamental question of "authority" (i.e., as to whether or not the papal claim of infallibility is a valid one). The following dialogue illustrates this point:

- Christadelphian: "Mr. Roman Catholic, how do you know that purgatory really exists?"
- Roman Catholic: "Because my Church teaches that it does."
- Christadelphian: "But how do you know that what your Church teaches is right?"
- Roman Catholic: "Because my Church has the Pope who is infallible on matters like this."
- Christadelphian: "But how do you know that he is infallible?"
(The discussion often terminates here if the R. C. insists that this must be accepted on "faith"). The discussion may, however, continue —
- Roman Catholic: "Because Jesus gave this infallible authority to Peter and his successors, the bishops of Rome, as recorded in Matt. 16:18; Luke 22:32, and John 21:15-17."

SUGGESTED STRATEGY

1. The crucial question of authority must be settled. If the R.C. is agreeable, passages traditionally used by his church (and considered in this handbook) might be examined. In stressing the necessity of individual interpretation of the written Word the following might be helpful:
 - a) Show that Jesus Christ appealed to the reason of his hearers in stating his case from the Scriptures:
 - "Have ye not read . . ." (Matt. 19:4).
 - "If they hear not Moses and the prophets . . ." (Luke 16:31).
 - "Is it not written in your law . . ." (John 10:34).
 - b) The Apostle Paul likewise appealed to his readers' individual judgment of the Word:

1 "Imprimatur" is an official license to print granted by the Roman Catholic Church. The reason for its use here is to indicate that the quotation cited has been officially sanctioned by the Roman Catholic Church.

2 John A. Obrien, What's the Truth About Catholics? An Exposition of Catholic Belief and Practice, (Indiana: Our Sunday Visitor Press, 1950) p.90.

- “These were [Jews at Berea] more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the scriptures daily, whether those things were so.” (Acts 17:11). This passage reveals God’s attitude toward those who examine the Scriptures.
 - “I speak as to wise men; judge ye what I say.” (1 Cor. 10:15).
 - “Prove all things: hold fast that which is good.” (1 Thess. 5:21).
 - “ . . . the holy scriptures which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus. All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: that the man of God may be perfect [complete], thoroughly furnished unto all good works.” (2 Tim. 3:15-17).
2. It is sometimes helpful to show that support for the Roman position on Papal infallibility often rests on a petitio principii fallacy.³
 - a) The R.C. says: “I am absolutely certain that I am right in my religious views because I believe what the Pope says, and he is absolutely certain not to say what is wrong.” But how can one be absolutely certain not to believe wrong? It is not possible to answer this question without arguing in a circle, i.e., stating one’s own infallibility.
 - b) The R.C. may also say: “The Church is infallible because the Scriptures testify that this is so and the Scriptures testify this because the Church infallibly declares that such is their meaning.” It is sometimes argued another way by the R.C.: “The Pope always speaks infallibly except when he makes a mistake. When he makes a mistake he is not speaking ‘ex cathedra’.” Both these arguments by a R.C. are tautological. The fallacy in the argument is evident from a mathematical parallel: A=B because I say that B=A. I know that B=A because A=B.
 3. R.C. apologists⁴ make appeals to the size and duration of the Roman Church as proof of its divine founding and guidance through the authority invested in the bishops. It is relevant to show that there is no necessary connection between size and duration of a religious organization and the truth of its claims. Jesus said, “Enter ye in at the strait gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat: Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it.” (Matt. 7:13-14). Judaism and Buddhism are both older than Roman Catholicism but this does not necessarily mean that their religious claims are true.
 4. Roman Catholic literature often points to the divisions within Protestantism (or even within the Christadelphian Body) as proof of the inadequacy of the exercise of private judgment on religious questions. The Roman faith is presented by contrast as a haven of rest where uniformity of practice and loyalty of allegiance prevail. But this claim is inaccurate. Consider the following examples:

³ A “petitio principii” is the logical fallacy of arguing in a circle and “begging the question”.

⁴ “Apologists”, as used here, does not refer to Roman Catholics who regretfully acknowledge but rather to those who defend by argument.

- a) During the Great Schism of the West (1378-1417) there were three rival Popes, each claiming to be the real Pope, and each excommunicating the others.⁵
 - b) Until recently the Uniat Church in Galicia was an integral part of the Roman Communion yet followed Eastern Orthodox rites and had a married priesthood.⁶
 - c) The unity of the Roman Church is only superficially impressive. Conformity has often been achieved by scandalously unscriptural means.⁷
 - d) The predictions of the coming apostacy within the early ecclesia (Acts 20:29-30; 2 Peter 2:1-2; 1 Tim. 4:1-3) conflict with the Romanist claim of "unity" and a "haven of rest". By the time John wrote his first epistle it was necessary for the believer to "try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world." (1 John 4:1).
5. Very devout R.C.'s may be reticent to speak about their beliefs (especially in countries where illiteracy is high) through fear of excommunication. Heresy is considered a mortal sin for which the punishment is excommunication and relegation to the fires of hell for eternity. The bulls "In Caena Comini" or the annual cursings were renewed by the bull "Apostolicae Sedis" 1869. In this bull all who deny the Pope's universal authority and all who harbour the least doubt on any point which has been decreed by a Pope, are ipso facto excommunicated. This explains, in part, the difficulty in reaching some Roman Catholics. They fear to incur the mortal sin of heresy and consequent excommunication, if they listen, or if they entertain the slightest question as to any one of the decrees of the Popes.

⁵ See, for example, William Shaw Kerr, A Handbook on the Papacy, (London: Marshall, Morgan and Scott, 1962), chpt. 51.

⁶ Alexander Stewart, Roman Dogma and Scripture Truth, (London: The Inter-Varsity fellowship, 1951) p. 17.

⁷ The Council of Ephesus is an example. Bethune Baker, in Early History of Church Doctrine, writes: "Dioscorus was attended by a strong body of Egyptians, bishops and monks, who all behaved with scandalous violence. The signatures of many other bishops were extorted by threats and physical force; it seems certain from the evidence, even when allowance is made for some exaggeration, that the result was only reached by insolent intimidation which proceeded to personal violence." p. 284.

THE PETRINE THEORY

MATT. 16:18 “Thou art Peter and upon this Rock I will build my church.”

PROBLEM: The Roman Catholic interpretation of this is:

1. “Christ appointed the Apostle Peter to be the first of all the Apostles and to be the visible Head of the whole Church, by appointing him immediately and personally to the primacy of jurisdiction. According to Christ’s ordinance, Peter is to have successors in his primacy, over the whole Church and for all time. The successors of Peter in the Primacy are the Bishops of Rome.”¹
 2. “If anyone says that the blessed Apostle Peter was not constituted, by Christ our Lord, Prince of all the Apostles and visible Head of all the Church Militant [i.e., Church on earth]; or that he [Peter] directly and immediately received from our Lord Jesus Christ a primacy of honour only and not one of true and proper jurisdiction, let him be anathema.”²
 3. In summary then, the Roman Catholic position may be stated: Christ gave absolute spiritual authority in the Church to Peter. Peter passed this spiritual authority on to his successors—the Bishops of Rome.
-

Therefore the Pope in any age has the right to spiritual authority over Christendom.

SOLUTION:

1. The rock on which the Church is founded is not Peter, but Peter’s confession, “thou art the Christ”. (Matt. 16:16.) The following is the evidence:
 - a) Matt. 21:42; Acts 4:11; 1 Cor. 10:4; Eph. 2:20; 1 Peter 2:6-8 unambiguously state that Christ is the Rock. Paul explicitly states, “For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ”. (1 Cor. 3:11). To take Peter as the foundation flatly contradicts this passage.
 - b) The Roman Church emphasizes John 1:42 in stating that Jesus gave the name “Rock” (Petros) to Simon at the very start. But in Matt. 16:18 the Greek is:
“Thou art Petros, and upon this petra I will build my Church.”
Two different Greek words are employed with two different connotations:
petros (masc.), detached stone.

¹ DeFide, quoted in Ludwig Ott. Fundamentals of Catholic Dogma, ed. in English by James Canon Bastible, and tr. from the German by Patrick Lynch, (St. Louis, Mo.: Herder, 1954); Nilil Obstat and Imprimatur, (Oct. 7, 1954), pp. 279-282.

² Vatican Council of 1870: Denziger, par. 1823.

petra (fem.), living rock, solid rock.³

It is clear that a difference between Peter and the foundation is meant or the word "petros" would simply have been repeated. "Petros", therefore, shows Peter's instability, (e.g., Matt. 16:22-23) while "petra" indicates the immovable rock-like character of Christ, or the confession of Peter, "thou art the Christ."⁴

2. The power of the keys⁵ given to Peter (Matt. 16:19) gave him no unique authority—no authority which the other apostles did not possess as well—Matt. 18:18 (cf. vs. 1); John 20:22,23.
 - a) "Keys"—keys to knowledge of the Kingdom (Luke 11:52; cf. Matt. 23:13). The keys were used by Peter in preaching to the Jews on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2); to the household of Cornelius (Acts 14:27 cf. Acts 10); and to the Gentiles (Acts 11:18).
 - b) "binding"—e.g., Ananias and Sapphira—Acts 5. Here Peter's condemnation uttered on earth was immediately enforced in heaven.
 - c) "loosing"—e.g., palsied Aeneas loosed at Lydda. (Acts 9:32-35). Peter said, "Jesus Christ maketh thee whole" verse 34; Jesus in heaven "loosed" the paralytic. See also Acts 5:12-16.
 - d) "gates of hell"—the grave of Isaiah 38:10,17,18. Christ's Ecclesia will prevail against "hades"—(1 Cor. 15:53-55).
3. Peter did not receive infallible authority from Jesus, even in matters ex cathedra, for Paul wrote: "But when Peter was come to Antioch, I withstood him to the face, because he was to be blamed." (Gal. 2:11). Note how Christ also reproved Peter in Matt. 16:22,23.
4. There is not a particle of historical evidence that Peter passed on any authority to anyone; and, what is more important, there is no New Testament evidence at all that Christ commanded Peter to pass on any authority. Without such a clear command of Christ, the "successors" of Peter must be regarded as having arrogated authority to themselves, rather than having received it from Christ.

³ Liddell, (authoritative lexicographer of classical Greek), Intermediate Lexicon, founded upon the 7th ed. of Liddell and Scott. Also, G. Abbott-Smith, (Professor Hellenistic Greek, McGill University), Manual Greek Lexicon of the New Testament, 3rd ed., and Bullinger, Figures of Speech.

⁴ Some Roman Catholics may argue that the difference in Greek words is only for stylistic variation. But the burden of proof does not rest on the interpreter who says that two different words have at least connotative distinctions of meaning; it rests on the one who argues that the difference is of no consequence and that style explains all. Some argue that the use of two words in the Greek is of no consequence, for the original dialogue between Jesus and Peter took place in Aramaic, and undoubtedly but a single word (Kepha. "Cephas") was used in the Aramaic conversation. The fallacy in this argument (as in virtually all arguments based on proto-Aramaic New Testament conversations) is that it involves a reasoning from the unknown to the known rather than from the known to the unknown. The only means we have of knowing what in fact Jesus said to Peter on the given occasion is via the Greek record. Thus, if a valid distinction is made in the Greek, we must assume that a like distinction was made in the original conversation.

⁵ Roman Pontiffs claim the custody of "Peter's Keys" i.e., the supernatural capability of opening the doors of life and death. It is inherent in the powers claimed by the Bishop of Rome that he has "jus vertendi cardinus"—the power of "turning the hinge" of the doors of heaven and hades. The Pope is assisted by the Grand Council of State, or College of Cardinals. The name "Cardinal" is derived from "cardo", a hinge. Papal Cardinals are, therefore, "priests of the hinge".

Some Additional Points:

5. Since the 15th century, with one exception, no one but an Italian has been made Pope.⁶ Why must the “vicar of Christ” generally be an Italian Pope? Is it not a claim of the Roman Church to be universal?
6. The Roman Church stresses the position of Peter but note the influence of Paul:
 - a) Paul went to Rome. (Acts 28:14-31); there is no certain Scriptural evidence of Peter having gone there.
 - b) Paul wrote to the ecclesia at Rome. (Rom. 1:1,7); Peter did not.
 - c) Paul had important jurisdiction and authority. For example:
 - i) 1 Cor. 7:17—“ . . . as the Lord hath called everyone, so let him walk. And so ordain I in all churches.” See also 1 Cor. 14:37,38.
 - ii) 2 Cor. 11:28—“ . . . that which cometh upon me daily, the care of all the churches.”
 - iii) 2 Cor. 13:10—“ . . . according to the power [“my use of the authority”—R.S.V.] which the Lord hath given me.”
 - iv) Gal. 2:11—“But when Peter was come to Antioch, I withstood him to the face, because he was to be blamed.”
7. If the Roman Church is the custodian and preserver of absolute truth, why did it take nearly 1900 years, until this was officially declared in 1870?
8. Matt. 18:1; Mark 9:34; Luke 22:24 all record a dispute among the disciples as to who should be the greatest. This dispute is important for two reasons:
 - a) It is apparent that if Peter had been given the kind of authority asserted by Roman Catholics then it is very unlikely that a dispute as to who was to be accounted the greatest would have arisen.
 - b) Jesus’ reply, in Luke 22:25-30, does not mention the primacy of Peter, and further suggests that there would be no distinction among the apostles, when they would “sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel”. (vs. 30).
9. A similar argument can be advanced, on the request of the mother of James and John, for the two highest positions in the kingdom. (Matt. 20:20-23). Would they be ignorant of Peter’s appointment to the supreme place if this was in fact the case?
10. Peter never indicates any personal superiority in his epistles. He refers to himself as “an apostle”, (1 Pet. 5:1) “an elder”, (“a fellow elder”) (1 Pet. 5:1 R.S.V.), and instructs the elders not to be “lords over God’s heritage,” but to be “ensamples to the flock.” (1 Pet. 5:3).
11. In the creed of Pope Pius IV, (which is obligatory on all ecclesiastics and on all “who promise and swear that they will continue in obedience to Rome”) it is professed, concerning Holy Scripture, “nor will I ever understand or interpret it, except according to the unanimous consent of the holy Fathers.”

Archbishop Kenrick, in his speech prepared for, but not delivered in the Vatican Council, but published at Naples in 1870, counts the following five different patristic interpretations of Matthew 16:18:

 - a) “That St. Peter is the Rock, taught by seventeen Fathers;

⁶ William Shaw Kerr, A Handbook of the Papacy, (London: Marshall, Morgan and Scott, 1962), p. 8.

- b) That the whole Apostolic College is the Rock, represented by Peter as its chief, taught by eight;
- c) That St. Peter's faith is the Rock, taught by forty-four;
- d) That Christ is the Rock, taught by sixteen;
- e) That the rock is the whole body of the faithful."

Several who teach a) and b), also teach c) and d), and so the Archbishop sums up thus: "If we are bound to follow the greater number of Fathers in this matter, then we must hold for certain that the word Petra means not Peter professing the Faith, but the faith professed by Peter."⁷

LUKE 10:16 "He that heareth you heareth me; and he that despiseth you despiseth me; and he that despiseth me despiseth him that sent me."

PROBLEM: This passage is interpreted by Roman Catholic expositors to support their position on papal infallibility. It is argued that the authority of Jesus Christ is guaranteed in this passage to the legitimate successors, i.e. the Bishops of Rome.

SOLUTION:

1. The above words are directed specifically to the seventy (vs. 1,17), not to a single supreme head and his "legitimate successors."
1. This passage has no application to the Roman Church since those to whom the words, "He that heareth you heareth me . . ." were given, were instructed to:
 - a) "Carry neither purse, nor scrip, nor shoes . . ." (vs. 4). Is this the way R.C. emissaries are sent forth?
 - b) "Heal the sick that are therein." (vs. 9). Do the proselytizers of the Roman Church heal the sick in the cities they visit?
 - c) "Be as lambs among wolves." (vs. 3). Can it be said of the Roman Church that its Popes have been "lambs among wolves"? The facts of history as recorded by both Roman Catholic and non-R.C. historians amount to a thorough refutation of the claim of the Roman Church to these words of the Lord.¹
3. Even if this passage were intended to give unique authority to specially chosen successors, the Roman Church has no claim to this authority, since she has spoken contradictorily about the same things. Two examples illustrate the point:
 - a) Eugene IV (1431-1447) condemned Joan of Arc to be burned alive as a witch, while another pope, Benedict XV, in 1920, declared her to be a saint.

⁷ Friedrich, Docum ad illust. Conc. Vat. 1, pp. 185-246. For a fuller elaboration of this point, see John Carter, Parables of the Messiah, (Birmingham: The Christadelphian, 1954), pp. 118-123, and William Shaw Kerr, A Handbook of the Papacy, (London: Marshall, Morgan and Scott, 1962), pp. 44-49.

¹ The incompatibility of this statement of the Lord with the official practice of the Roman Church is borne out in the following quotation: "Those are not to be accounted murderers or homicides who, when burning with love and zeal for their catholic mother against excommunicated persons, shall happen to kill a few of them." This was the decree of Pope Urban II in 1088 A.D. and is embodied in the canon law of Rome, as Cause xxii quest. v., chpt. 47, Excommunicamus from which the quotation is taken. When the canon law was revised by a commission of cardinals, under Pope Gregory XIII in 1580, this decree was left in, and was made an article of faith.

- b) Sixtus V (1585-1590) recommended the reading of the Bible but Pius VII (1800-1823) condemned the practice.
-

LUKE 22:32 "But I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not; and when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren."

PROBLEM: This is another passage considered by the Roman Church to support the doctrine of papal infallibility. To put it in R.C. terminology: "Knowing most fully that the See¹ of Holy Peter remains ever free from all blemish of error according to the divine promise of the Lord our Saviour made to the prince of His disciples. I have prayed for thee that thy faith fail not, and when thou art converted confirm thy brethren."²

SOLUTION:

1. The New Testament word "sterizo", translated in the A.V. "establish" or "strengthen", implies no unique authority for Peter since the word is used of other believers.
 - a) Paul longed to go to Rome to "establish" [sterizo] the brethren. (Rom. 1:11).
 - b) Paul sent Timothy to "establish" [sterizo] the faith of the Thesalonians. (1 Thess. 3:2).
 - c) The angel (messenger) of the ecclesia at Sardis is commanded to "be watchful and strengthen [sterizo] the things which remain, that are ready to die . . ." (Rev. 3:2).
2. The early history of the Ecclesia fails to vindicate the Romanist interpretation of this verse. No such primacy for Peter is recorded in Scripture. For example:
 - a) Although Peter dominates the first chapters of Acts of the Apostles—at Pentecost and the opening of the door to the Gentile convert—Cornelius—he is sent with John by the Apostles at Jerusalem to go to Samaria. (Acts 8:14).
 - b) At the Jerusalem Council James, not Peter, presides and formulates the terms of the decision (Acts 15:13,19). This is noteworthy since Peter was sent specifically to those of the circumcision (Gal. 2:7). The decree indicates an astounding oversight of Peter's office if he were the "Pastor" and "Ruler" of the Ecclesia.
3. To see in these words of Luke 22:32 a guarantee that Peter was to be divinely protected from error is as foundationless as seeing in them a similar guarantee for the prelates³ of the Roman See. It is probable that "faith", as used in the Lord's remark, "I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not", applies to Peter's trust in his Master and his faithfulness to his teaching. Subsequently Peter denied his Lord three times. (Luke 22:55-62).

1 "See", as it is used here, refers to that which is committed to a Bishop. The "Holy See", for example, refers to the Pope's court in Rome.

2 Quoted in William Shaw Kerr, A Handbook of the Papacy, (London: Marshall, Morgan and Scott, 1962), p. 50.

3 A prelate is a high ecclesiastical dignitary, e.g. a bishop.

JOHN 21:16 “... Feed my sheep.”

PROBLEM: The Roman Church finds in this passage support for its papal doctrine of infallibility for Peter and his “legitimate successors”, the bishops of Rome. The Vatican Decrees assert: “It was upon Simon alone that Jesus after His resurrection, bestowed the jurisdiction of Chief Pastor over His fold in the words: ‘Feed my lambs; feed my sheep.’”¹

SOLUTION:

1. This passage contains no such monopoly conferred upon Peter as decreed by the Vatican. Feeding the sheep is enjoined upon others as well as Peter:
 - a) Paul instructed the elders at Ephesus, “Feed [poimaino] the church of God . . .” (Acts 20:28).
 - b) Peter exhorts the elders, “The elders which are among you I exhort, who am also an elder² . . . feed [poimaino] the flock of God . . . neither as lords over God’s heritage, but being ensamples to the flock.” (1 Pet. 5:1-3). Peter considers himself a “fellow elder” R.S.V., not the “Pastor” and “Ruler” of the ecclesia.
2. The word “feed” (poimaino) relied upon by R.C.s to establish unique authority for Peter is used by Peter of the elders to whom he writes. (1 Pet. 5:2). Why interpret it in John 21:16 as imparting exclusive sovereignty of jurisdiction and not in the other?
3. “Feed my sheep” gave Peter no superior jurisdiction over the rest of the apostles. It would appear that Jesus in this passage reconfirms Peter after his threefold denial (Matt. 26:33-34) hence Peter’s threefold confession in this passage. The interpretation of his role as a “fellow elder” is in keeping with other New Testament references which give him a place of reward alongside the other apostles but not a position of superiority. For example:
 - a) In Matt. 19:27,28, Peter questions the Lord, “Behold, we have forsaken all and followed thee; what shall we have therefore?” The Lord’s answer contained no hint of any unique place reserved for Peter—nothing beyond what all the disciples were given. “Ye (plural) which have followed me, in the regeneration when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel.”
 - b) “The wall of the city had twelve foundations, and in them the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb.” (Rev. 21:14). Peter is a foundation-stone alongside the other apostles; he is not considered to be the cornerstone or even the chief foundation stone.

¹ Quoted in William Shaw Kerr, A Handbook on the Papacy, (London: Marshall, Morgan and Scott, 1962), p. 52.

² Roman Catholic writers dismiss this as merely an indication of Peter’s humility. If Peter were commissioned to be Christ’s vicar then it was his duty to make this known. If he had been appointed “Ruler” and “Teacher” why should he disguise what has been stridently proclaimed by his alleged “successors” as an essential part of God’s plan for the salvation of the world?

4. The role of Peter in the early ecclesia is one of prominence but not of monopoly:
 - a) Although Peter proposes that one be appointed to fill the place of Judas (Acts 1:15) he does not attempt to fill the vacant place on his own authority (as do the Popes of the Roman Church in appointing cardinals). The final selection was made by lot (vs. 22-26).
 - b) Peter expresses concern in his Epistle for the continuance of the purity of the gospel (II Pet. 2:1,2) yet he never once exhorts the flock of a "legitimate successor" whom they were to follow when he passed away. (It seems Peter was nearing his death when he wrote this Epistle, see II Pet. 1:13-15).
 - c) In Acts 6:2 it was the twelve who called the multitude together and appointed the seven to administer the welfare needs. Peter is not singled out as having a monopolizing voice in what was to be done.
 - d) Paul warned the Ephesian elders of heresies and disunity (Acts 20:29,30), but he omits to tell them to cling to Peter, the supreme "Pastor" and infallible "guide of the whole church militant."
-

MATT. 26:26 " . . . this is my body."

PROBLEM: Roman Catholics understand this passage to teach that when the appropriate words are uttered by the priest, the Wafer is changed into the real body of Christ. This is the doctrine of Transubstantiation.

SOLUTION:

1. At the time these words were uttered Jesus was there present with the disciples; he had not yet died.
2. There is an abundance of passages, similar to this one, where the verb "to be" is used, for "to mean, to symbolize"; e.g.,
 - i) "I am the door." (John 10:7).
 - ii) "I am the true vine." (John 15:1).
 - iii) "That Rock was Christ." (1 Cor. 10:4).
 - iv) "The seven heads are seven mountains." (Rev. 17:9).
3. If the Romanist insists that "This is my blood" means literally that the wine is transformed into Christ's very blood; then "this cup is the new testament" (covenant) must mean that the literal cup becomes a literal covenant (1 Cor. 11:25).
4. The Lord's Supper is a commemoration of a sacrifice, not a repetition of it.
5. When it is realized that the doctrine of transubstantiation means that the wafer is changed into the whole Being of Christ, which is then offered as a propitiatory sacrifice, it is important to point out that Christ has been offered "once for all". (Heb. 10:10; cf 7:27). The sacrifice needs no repetition.

JOHN..6:53 “Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you.

PROBLEM: The Roman Church uses this passage to support the declaration of the Council of Trent that “by the consecration of the bread and wine, a conversion is made of the whole substance of the bread into the substance of Christ our Lord, and of the whole substance of the wine into the whole substance of His blood; which conversion is, by the holy Catholic Church, suitably and properly called Transubstantiation.”¹

SOLUTION:

1. The R.C. interpretation of this passage involves the impossible—to believe that the whole substance of his body and blood can be in every particle of the “consecrated” bread and wine on thousands of altars while his literal body is in heaven at the same time.
2. The R.C.s (as did the Jews) misunderstand the teaching of Jesus in this passage. The question of the Jews was: “How can this man give us his flesh to eat?” (vs. 52). Jesus did not reply by telling them that there would be a transubstantiation, i.e., that the literal bread would become his literal flesh throughout the ages; or that the literal wine (of which, however, the common people were not to partake) should similarly become his literal blood in quantities enough for thousands of mortals. Jesus suggests the explanation to his “hard saying” when he questioned: “What and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where he was before? It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing; the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life.” (vs. 62,63)
3. Even if one could eat the literal flesh of Jesus and drink his literal blood, he would be no nearer the kingdom, unless he masticated² and assimilated the words which Christ spoke. Judas ate the passover but he was still a “son of perdition”. (John 17:12). One can eat damnation to himself if he does not discern the Lord’s body. (1 Cor. 11:29).
4. The words, “except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink his blood ye have no life in you” are metaphorical for the words which Jesus Christ spoke. Consider the following:
 - a) “The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life.” (John 6:63).
 - b) Notice the relevance of Peter’s comment “to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life.” (John 6:68).
 - c) “Now are ye clean through the word which I have spoken unto you.” (John 15:3).
 - d) “This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent.” (John 17:3).
 - e) “Sanctify them through thy truth. Thy word is truth.” (John 17:17).

1 Session XIII, On the Eucharist, chpt. 4. Waterworth’s translation.

2 The Greek word “trogo”, (John 6:57)—“So he that eateth me, even he shall live by me,” means to “gnaw, chew, devour”—Robert Young, Analytical Concordance To the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965).

5. The position of the Roman Church on transubstantiation casts serious doubt on its claim to authority. It was not until A.D. 1215 that transubstantiation was made an article of faith in the Roman Church. A doctrine which might be rejected with impunity prior to that date must now be accepted in peril of eternal damnation.
6. There is further reason for denying the doctrine of transubstantiation. The bread not eaten by R.C.s at masses becomes mouldy like any other bread, but the literal body of Jesus was preserved from corruption at death (Acts 2:31, cf. Psa. 16:10), and is not now corruptible. Therefore the interpretation placed upon this passage in John by R.C.s cannot be the one intended by Jesus.
7. There has not been any validated evidence that bread "consecrated" by a R.C. priest, when eaten by R.C.s, becomes anything other than what it is—natural bread assimilated by the body. This amounts to a complete denial of the claim that the literal bread ever becomes the literal body of the Lord.

MATT. 12:32 "It shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, neither in the world to come."

PROBLEM: This passage is sometimes quoted by Roman Catholics to support the idea of purgatory. The Roman Catholic Church teaches that the undying souls of men leave their bodies at death. The wicked (those who die in mortal sin) go to hell for eternal torment. The righteous, dying with unforgiven venial sin or undischarged temporal punishment, go to a painful purification before being fit for heaven.

SOLUTION:

1. Purgatory presupposes the doctrine of the immortality of the soul. If there is no immortal soul then purgatory becomes an invention.
2. If sins are not forgiven, either now or in the future, why send the sinner to purgatory? (Matt. 12:32).
3. See the parallel passages in:
 Mark 3:29—"But he that shall blaspheme against the Holy Spirit hath never forgiveness, but is in danger of eternal damnation."
 Luke 12:10—" . . . but unto him that blasphemeth against the Holy Spirit it shall not be forgiven."
 These are conclusive, there is not even a hint of purgatory.

JOHN 20:23 "Whose soever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whose soever sins ye retain, they are retained."

PROBLEM: The Roman Catholic Church uses this passage to justify its teaching that the key of purgatory lies in the hand of the priest. In this unseen region of suffering he is said to open and shut, bind and loose. It is also held to lie within the priest's power to lessen the duration and severity of the suffering.

SOLUTION:

1. This passage has specific reference to the apostles. This is indicated by Jesus "breathing" on them. (vs. 22).
 2. The promise of this passage was to the apostles. (vs. 20). If the Roman Church has any claim to the promise it must first demonstrate the existence of apostles. Paul instructed the Corinthians: "Truly the signs of an apostle were wrought among you in all patience, in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds." (II Cor. 12:12). Where is the R.C. priest who can, in God's name, strike an Elymas blind, (Acts 13:11); raise a Eutychus from the dead, (Acts 20:10-12); or suffer no harm after being bitten by a viper, (Acts 28:3-5)? These were the signs of an apostle.
 3. When claims to the tremendous power outlined in the problem are vested in the hands of ordinary men or as may happen, in the hands of mercenary and unscrupulous men, imagination can scarcely exceed the historical abuses.
 4. The New Testament refers to only one sacrificing priest, Jesus Christ (Heb. 10:12) and to a "royal priesthood" of all believers. (1 Pet. 2:9). There is no exclusive order of priests officiating for a laity in New Testament arrangements.
-

I COR. 3:13 "Every man's work shall be made manifest for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire, and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is."

PROBLEM: This passage is used to support the Roman Catholic doctrine of a discipline in purgatory, which takes place immediately after death, and endures for an unspecified and varying period.

SOLUTION:

1. Note the context; the passage is speaking about a "day" (although likely longer than 24 hours) and not a period of long duration. See the use of the same Greek word, "hemera" in Matt. 7:22; 12:36; John 9:4; 11:9; 12:48; II Cor. 6:2. This "day" is defined in Mal. 3:2; 4:1-3; cf. 2 Thess. 1:8-10.
2. The Roman Catholic argues for the burning up of the "wood, hay, stubble," (I Cor. 3:12) as the purging of man's soul of all that is unworthy. A man in purgatory should be glad to get rid of these impurities, to be fit for eternal happiness, but Paul says he "shall suffer loss". (1 Cor. 3:15).
3. What the passage does mean:
 - a) There were divisions in Corinth and Paul discusses the relationship of a man and his converts to Christ. (1 Cor. 1:10; 3:3-8).
 - b) "Every man's work shall be made manifest." The Day of Judgment will reveal the spiritual quality of a preacher's converts, whether gold, silver, precious stones, for the eternal temple of God or cheap (wood) unenduring (hay, stubble).

- c) "If any man's work abide [if his converts endure to eternal life] he shall receive a reward" (1 Cor. 3:-4)—the reward of seeing, in the Kingdom of God, the fruits of his labour and travail. (see 1 Thess. 2:19.)
- d) "If any man's work shall be burned [if his converts are unworthy before the Judge of all] he shall suffer loss" (1 Cor. 3:15)—the loss of seeing his labour come to naught.
- e) "But he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire." (1 Cor. 3:15). The same fire of judgment that devoured his converts will have to be endured by the preacher also. And even though all his converts should perish, he himself may yet stand approved, because of the faith and zeal with which he has lived and worked in all good conscience before God.

1 COR. 7:1 ". . . It is good for a man not to touch a woman."

PROBLEM: "The Roman Catholic Church uses this passage to support its concept that celibacy is necessary for single-minded devotion to ministerial office.

SOLUTION:

1. Celibacy is not a necessary pre-requisite for single-minded devotion to ministerial office. Celibacy, in Scripture, is left to the free decision of those concerned, without forbidding those who marry to assume ecclesial offices. (Matt. 19:12; 1 Cor. 7:6-9).
2. Peter was married, (Matt. 8:14); as well as other apostles. (1 Cor. 9:5).
3. There were also married bishops. (1 Tim. 3:2; Titus 1:6).
4. The Apostle Paul clinches the argument—"Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils; speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their conscience seared with a hot iron, forbidding to marry . . ." (1 Tim. 4:1-3).

JAMES 5:14 "Let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord . . ."

PROBLEM: This passage is used to support the doctrine of "extreme unction". Extreme unction is described as "the anointing by the priest of those in danger of death by sickness, with holy oil, accompanied with a special prayer. . . . It is called Extreme because administered to sick persons when thought to be near the close of life."¹

¹ Loraine Boettner, Roman Catholicism, (London: The Banner of Truth Trust., 1966), p. 248.

SOLUTION:

1. The passage in James is no sanction for the R.C. practice for the following reasons:
 - a) Extreme unction is administered only to those who are expected to die, not for those who are expected to recover, (it is intended as a preparation of the soul for its last passage). The purpose of the instruction in James is that the “prayer” of faith shall save the sick.” (vs. 15).
 - b) The concern, in the administration of extreme unction, is for the soul. The passage in James is concerned with physical infirmities. This is indicated by verse 15, “The prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him.”
 - c) The Roman Church sends a priest. James instructs that the elders (plural) be called.
2. Notice that the R.C. teaching on extreme unction depends for its rationale on the doctrine of the immortality of the soul. When the immortality of the soul is shown to be non-scriptural, the underpinnings for extreme unction are destroyed.

MORMONISM

PRELIMINARY POINTS

The Mormon church was founded in 1830 by Joseph Smith and his followers. It was claimed for the church that it was a restoration of primitive Christianity as it had been lived in the time of the Apostles with the addition of more recent revelation.

Today, there are two major groups¹ claiming allegiance to Joseph Smith. The differences between the two groups are summarized as follows:

Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Brighamites)

1. Followed Brigham Young on the death of Joseph Smith.
2. Headquarters at Salt Lake City, Utah.
3. Believe in the revelations regarding polygamy (but do not officially practice it).
4. Reject the official use of Joseph Smith's *Inspired Translation*³ of the Bible.
5. Accept the Adam-god doctrine as taught in Doctrine and Covenants.

*Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Josephites)*²

Claimed that succession must be through the seed of Joseph Smith, therefore rejected Brigham Young and chose the son of Smith as head of the church.

Headquarters at Independence, Missouri.

Reject polygamy and the Brighamite claim that Joseph Smith wrote "Revelation on Celestial Marriage".

The *Inspired Translation*³ is published and officially accepted.

Reject the Adam-god doctrine but retain the belief in gods with flesh and bones. Reject Section 132 of Doctrine and Covenants.

1 There are other factions, such as, "The Church of Christ" (Temple Lot or Hedrickite) with headquarters at Independence, Missouri. This group, though small, is vigorous and claims to be the only true church by reason of its possession of the temple lot designated by Joseph Smith in 1831 as the site of "the Temple of Zion".

2 In Ontario, Canada, the Reorganized Church has membership in areas of Christadelphian ecclesias at Grand Valley and Manitoulin Island. A special responsibility is felt by Latter-day Saints to preach to their "Lamanite" brethren, the American Indian, purportedly apostate descendants of Hebrews to whom Jesus supposedly preached on this continent.

3 Parallel translations of Gen. 2:5 illustrate the way in which the "Inspired" Version distorts Biblical passages:

Inspired Version

"For I the Lord God created all things of which I have spoken, spiritually, before they were naturally upon the face of the earth . . . in heaven I created them. . . ."

King James Version

"And every plant of the field before it was in the earth, and every herb of the field before it grew: for the Lord God had not caused it to rain upon the earth, and there was not a man to till the ground."

It is apparent that the Inspired Version incorporates into the text the Mormon doctrine of pre-human spirits. Similarly, the life of Enoch in the Bible is expanded in the Inspired Version to give support to the communistic "Order of Enoch" attempted, but later abandoned, by Smith and Rigdon. (Rigdon was an ex-Cambellite of the Disciples of Christ and convert to Mormonism.) The account of Melchizedek and the Epistle to the Hebrews are likewise imaginatively enlarged to provide a "scriptural" basis for the Mormon priesthood.

6. Practice secret rites in temples.⁴

No secret temple rites. In the Kirtland Temple all meetings are open to the public.⁵

MORMON "REVELATION"

Continuing revelation is held by Mormons to be an essential characteristic of their faith. The following are considered to be divine sources of revelation:

1. The Bible—The official version is the Authorized "King James' Version. It is authoritative insofar as it is translated accurately.
2. *The Book of Mormon*⁶—It purports to tell the histories of two nations which flourished in America as descendants of small colonies brought from the "eastern continent". The first of these—the Jaredite nation followed Jared from the Tower of Babel (2,250 B.C.). By 590 B.C. internal warfare led to the destruction of these people. The colonists are alleged to have crossed the Atlantic in eight cigar-shaped barges and located in Central America.

The second nation—the Nephites followed Nephi, the son of Lehi, who (it is said) left Jerusalem in the time of Zedekiah and migrated to the American continent arriving on the coast of Chile by 600 B.C. The golden plates on which this story was written were hidden by the last surviving Nephite, Moroni, (A.D. 421) in the Hill Cumorah in New York State. "In A.D. 1827, this same Moroni, then a resurrected personage, delivered the engraved plates to Joseph Smith."⁷
3. *The Doctrine and Covenants*⁸—All but two of the 136 sections are revelations allegedly given to Joseph Smith. A concluding "word and will of the Lord, given through President Brigham Young" is included. There is also an "official declaration" prohibiting polygamy, added by President Wilford Woodruff in 1890.
4. *The Pearl of Great Price*⁹—A small volume containing a "selection from the revelations, translations and narrations of Joseph Smith". It is usually bound with the Doctrine and Covenants. The thirteen Articles of Faith are included.

4 The only Mormon temple in Canada is at Cardston, Alberta. Cardston was founded by Charles Ora Card, who had three wives and trekked into Canada in 1886 (pursued by U. S. marshals) four years before plural marriage was ostensibly abandoned. MacLean's Magazine, (Jan. 15, 1951).

5 In the courts, the Reorganized Church was awarded title to the Kirtland Temple as the legal successor to the original church founded by Joseph Smith.

6 There were many errors and awkward phrases in the first edition of the work, but many of them have now been removed. See William Alexander Linn, The Story of the Mormons, (New York, 1902). For example: "And they having been waxed strong in battle." "We did arrive to the promised land" p. 260. "Yea if my days could have been in them days" p. 449.

7 Book of Mormon, preface.

8 This is an edited and altered text of an earlier book of "revelation" called the Book of Commandments. The changes are noted in Thomas O'Dea, The Mormons. (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1957), p. 162.

9 "The Book of Abraham", included in the Pearl of Great Price, is claimed to be a "Translation of some ancient Records, that have fallen into our hands from the catacombs of Egypt. The writings of Abraham while he was in Egypt . . . written by his own hand, upon papyrus." (Pearl of Great Price, p. 29) The papyri were found in the wrappings

5. Pronouncements by the President—The Mormon church has twelve “spirit-guided apostles” and a president “like unto Moses . . . a seer, a revelator, a translator, and a prophet, having all the gifts of God which he bestows upon the head of the church.”¹⁰ The president is to Mormons what the pope is to Roman Catholics.

SUGGESTED STRATEGY

The basic question of authority must first be settled with Mormons as with Roman Catholics. While it is claimed by Mormons that the Bible is the word of God, the claim has little practical value since the real stress is placed on the later “revelations”. A Mormon course of study for the Melchizedek priesthood” gives the following instruction:

“In general, it is well not to use a single passage of scripture in proof of a point, unless it is confirmed by modern revelation. If a single quotation is confirmed by modern revelation, we may be sure of its interpretation . . . ”¹¹

It is not usually advisable to condemn Mormon books outright on the basis of Rev. 22:18, “If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book”. Mormons interpret this verse as only applying to the Revelation. Their stock rejoinder is to quote Deut. 4:2, “Ye shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish ought from it . . . ” They then ask whether or not the later writings of Joshua, Judges, the Prophets and the New Testament are accepted as inspired revelations.

A more fruitful approach utilizes the small common ground that a Christadelphian shares with a Mormon—the belief that the Bible is the Word of God. The Bible can then be used to test the claims of the Book of Mormon, the Doctrines and Covenants, and the Pearl of Great Price. This approach has the advantage of discussing the basic issues of Gospel doctrines rather than disputing, for example, whether or not the Indians of the Americas of certain Egyptian mummies which Smith purchased from a traveling showman named Chandler. The mummy, on which the writings of Abraham were allegedly found, was claimed to be that of Pharaoh's daughter. Smith claimed to translate the Egyptian (but not by divine revelation, as he claimed, with the use of the two stones Urim and Thummim, to translate the “Egyptian characters” on the plates of Moroni). Smith's claim to translate the Egyptian was credible since in 1820 an Egyptian grammar had not been published. By 1836, however, Champollion's grammar was published and subsequent Egyptologists such as Dr. W. Flinders-Petrie of London; Dr. James H. Breasted of Chicago; Dr. Arthur Mace of New York; and Dr. John H. Peters of the University of Pennsylvania (cited in Gordon R. Fraser, Is Mormonism Christian? (Chicago: Moody Press, 1965), p. 29), have rejected Smith's translation as utterly incorrect. The Egyptologists have pointed out that Smith's papyri were no more than ordinary documents used in the funeral rites of the Egyptians. Thousands of these are in existence and displayed in museums. The Reorganized Church has recognized the force of these arguments and has ceased to regard the “Book of Abraham” as inspired.

10 Doctrine and Covenants, Section 107:91-92, p. 197.

11 James L. Barker, The Divine Church: A course of study for the Melchizedek priesthood. Quorums for the year 1952. (Deseret News Publishers), p. 9.

could have used steel swords.¹² The Christadelphian argues on his strong, familiar territory, not on historical and anthropological details. Arguments about the latter inevitably degenerate into a battle of “authorities” with each citing what the “scholars” say.

BASIC APPROACH

1. Since Mormons and Chrisadelphians have the common ground of the Bible as an accepted authority, the Bible can be used as a criterion to test the validity of the Book of Mormon.
2. The Apostle John instructs, “believe not every spirit, but try the spirits . . .” (1 John 4:1), and Paul admonishes, “Prove all things; hold fast that which is good.” (1 Thess. 5:21). This is the test to be applied to Joseph Smith’s, Book of Mormon.
3. Contradictions Listed:

*The Book of Mormon*¹³

1. Man is an immortal soul tabernacling in a fleshly body

—“his immortal soul”
(Mosiah 2:38, p. 139)

—“the soul could never die”
(Alma 42:9, p. 299)

—“their immortal souls”
(Helaman 3:30, p. 365)

2. Heaven promised to the righteous

—“those that keep the commandments of God . . . if they hold out faithful to the end they are received into heaven, that thereby they may dwell with God in a state of never-ending happiness.” (Mosiah 2:41, p. 139).

The Bible

Man is mortal, does not have an immortal soul

—Word “soul” is used in different ways, but never in the sense of immortality.

—“utterly destroyed . . . the souls”
(Josh. 10:28)

—“the soul that sinneth, it shall die” (Ezek. 18:4,20)

Earth, not heaven promised

—“The heaven, even the heavens, are the LORD’S: but the earth hath he given to the children of men.” (Psa. 115:16).

—“ . . . the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the . . . saints” (Dan. 7:27)
—“we shall reign on the earth”
(Rev. 5:10)

12 Many commentators have pointed out what appear to be anachronisms in the Book of Mormon. These have included the steel sword of Laban (592 B.C., 1 Nephi 4:9, p. 7), and the finding of horses in the New World. (It is generally accepted that horses were introduced by the Spaniards many years later.) It has also been pointed out that the American Indians (unlike the Jews of the Mediterranean) lack facial hair growth, and have distinctly different facial features (thereby indicating that the Jews of Palestine are not of the same racial stock as the American Indian).

13 Unless otherwise stated, all quotations are taken from The Book of Mormon: An Account Written By The Hand of Mormon Upon Plates taken from the Plates of Nephi, translated by Joseph Smith, Jun., (Salt Lake City, Utah: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1964).

3. Eternal hell-fire torment

—"which lake of fire and brimstone is endless torment" (Jacob 6:10, p. 122-2)

—"his final doom is to endure a never-ending torment" (Mosiah 2:39, p. 139).

4. The devil is a fallen angel

—" . . . an angel of God . . . had fallen from heaven; wherefore, he became a devil . . . " (2 Nephi 2:17, p. 54)

—" . . . that angel who fell from before the presence of the Eternal God, and became the devil" (2 Nephi 9:8, p. 67)

5. Pre-human existence of Christ

—"Is the Son of God the very Eternal Father? . . . Yea, he is the very Eternal Father of heaven and of earth . . . " (Alma 11:38,39, p. 223)

Annihilation of wicked

—"This is the second death." (Rev. 20:14).

—"the wicked . . . shall be destroyed [not destroying] for ever." (Psa. 92:7).

—"Since man does not have an immortal soul there is nothing to burn eternally.

Devil—a term used to describe man's wickedness (or sin in the flesh)

—"It is never used to describe a fallen divine angel.

—"wives be grave, not slanderers" (devils) (1 Tim. 3:11)

—"Have not I chosen you twelve, and one of you is a devil?" (Jn. 6:70).

Christ did not have a literal pre-human existence

—"His life began when born in the days of Herod. "thou shalt conceive", "shall be born", indicate beginning of life. (Luke 1:31,35).

4. Contradictions between other Mormon writing and the Bible:

1. God, a progressive being —"What sort of being was God in the beginning? God himself was once as we are now, and is an exalted man and sits enthroned in yonder heavens." (Joseph Smith)¹⁴

—"As man is, God was. As God is, man may become." (Lorenzo Snow)¹⁵

—"Remember that God our heavenly Father was perhaps once a child, and mortal like we are, and rose step by step in the scale of progress in the school of advancement; has moved forward and overcome until he has arrived at the point where he now is." (Orson Hyde)¹⁶

God, unchanging in nature

—"with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." (James 1:17).

—"For I am the LORD, I change not" (Mal. 3:6)

14 Joseph Smith, The King Follett Discourse, ed. B. H. Roberts, (Salt Lake City, 193?).

15 Lorenzo Snow, quoted in Milton R. Hunter, Gospel Through the ages, (Salt Lake City: Steven and Wallis Pub. Co.), p. 105-6.

16 Orson Hyde, Journal of Discourse, Vol. 1, p. 123. Quoted in Gordon Fraser, Is Mormonism Christian?, (Chicago: Moody Press, 1965), p. 43.

2. Revival of the Aaronic Priesthood

—“Upon you, [Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery] my fellow servants, in the name of Messiah, I [John the Baptist] confer the Priesthood of Aaron . . . and this shall never be taken again from the earth . . .” (Doctrine and Covenants, Section 13, pp. 20, 21)

3. Sabbath Observance mandatory —“And the inhabitants of Zion shall also observe the Sabbath day to keep it holy.” (Doctrine and Covenants, Section 68:29, p. 112).

4. Restrictions on meats and drinks

—“ . . . flesh also of beasts and of the fowls of the air . . . should not be used, only in times of winter, or of cold, or of famine.” (Doctrine and Covenants, Section 89:12, 13, p. 155).

—“That inasmuch as any man drinketh wine or strong drink among you, behold it is not good, neither meet in the sight of your Father. . . . hot drinks are not for the body or belly.” (Doctrine and Covenants, Section 89:5, 9, p. 154).¹⁷

5. Site of Zion to be Independence, Missouri

—“ . . . this is the land of promise, and the place for the city of Zion . . . Behold the place which is now called Independence, is the centre place.” (Doctrine and Covenants, Section 57:2,3, p. 89).

6. Resurrection of the non-responsible

Priesthood of all believers

—“Ye also . . . are built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices . . .” (1 Pet. 2:5).

—In this dispensation the revival of the Aaronic priesthood is contrary to the teaching of Heb. 7:18, 19; 10:1.

Sabbath observance not binding

—“Let no man therefore judge you . . . of the sabbath days: Which are a shadow of things to come . . .” (Col. 2:16,17).

—See also Rom. 14:5,6; Gal. 4:10, 11.

Liberty is granted¹⁷

—“For every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused, if it be received with thanksgiving.” (1 Tim. 4:4,5).

—“The kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Spirit.” (Rom. 14:17).

—See also Rom. 14:1-4, 14; Col. 2:16,17, 20-22; Mark 7:19 R.S.V.

Site of Zion to be Jerusalem in Palestine

—“ . . . Jerusalem; for it is the city of the great King.” (Matt. 5:35).

—“ . . . the law shall go forth of Zion, and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem.” (Micah 4:2).

—Zech. 14:4,5,9, 14-17 indicate that Matthew and Micah refer to Palestine.

Resurrection is only for the responsible

¹⁷ Drunkenness is condemned in Gal. 5:21, and respect for the prejudice of one's brethren is required in I Cor. 8:9-13.

¹⁸ The Mormon theologian, Talmage, indicates the importance given by Mormons to dietary laws: “Through partaking of food unsuited to their condition [Adam and Eve] and against which they had been specially forewarned, the man and wife became subject to physical degeneracy.” James E. Talmage, The Vitality of Mormonism, (Boston: Richard G. Badger, publisher, 1919), p. 52.

—“And then shall the heathen nations be redeemed, and they that knew no law shall have part in the first resurrection . . .” (Doctrine and Covenants, Section 45:54, p. 72)

—“For as many as have sinned without law shall also perish without law.” (Rom. 2:12).

—“others which have no hope” (1 Thess. 4:13)

—“having no hope, and without God in the world.” (Eph. 2:12).

—“They shall not rise.” (Isa. 26:14).

7. Will resort to force

In this dispensation the use of force by believers is condemned.

—“It has always been a well understood doctrine of the Church that it was right and praiseworthy to kill every person who spoke evil of the Prophet. This doctrine had been strictly lived up to in Utah, until the Gentiles arrived in such great numbers that it became unsafe to follow the practice, but the doctrine is still believed, and no year passes without one or more of those who have spoken evil of Brigham Young being killed in secret manner.” (John Lee)¹⁹ —“ . . . resist not evil: but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also.” (Matt. 5:39).

—In The Mountain Meadows Massacre (1857) an entire group of non-Mormon immigrants on their way to California (during the gold rush) was murdered in Utah. The Government of the U.S.A. executed the Mormon, John D. Lee, in 1877, for his part in the massacre. (Juanita Brooks)²⁰ —“Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you.” (Matt. 5:44).

5. These contradictions between the Bible and the Book of Mormon leave only three possibilities:

I. The Bible is the Word of God.

II. The Book of Mormon is the Word of God.

III. Neither is the Word of God.

There is no possibility that both the Bible and the Book of Mormon are the word of God. As Scripture asserts, “God is not the author of confusion.” (1 Cor. 14:33). The Mormon claim that the Book of Mormon is inspired by God as is the Bible (“insofar as it is translated accurately”)²¹ is a completely untenable position.

¹⁹ John D. Lee, Mormonism Unveiled, (Omaha, Nebraska: 1891), p. 284. Lee was a Mormon who was executed by the U.S.A. Government for his part in the Mountain Meadows Massacre, and although he considered he was “sacrificed” in a “dastardly manner” by the Mormon church, he never relinquished his faith in Joseph Smith.

²⁰ Juanita Brooks, The Mountain Meadows Massacre, (Palo Alta: Stanford University Press, 1950). In 1838 the Mormons set up a secret police movement to support the Presidency of the church. “This group became known as the “Danites”, or Sons of Dan, Destroying or Avenging Angels, and Brothers of Gideon, as well as, somewhat inappropriately, Daughters of Zion. Shortly afterward the Danite bands were extended into the Armies of Israel or Host of Israel, which were organized into groups of tens, fifties, and hundreds, each with its captain. This was, in fact, a defensive army. . . .” [In 1838 the Mormons engaged a hostile group of Missourians who tried to prevent the Mormons from voting. The result was] “Mormon leaders encouraged resistance and aggression, which they unquestionably saw, not without justification, as counteraggression. Danite bands raided and looted . . .” Thomas O’Dea, The Mormons, (Chicago: Univ. of Chicago Press, 1957), pp. 46-47.

6. Joseph Smith claimed that he received instruction from a divine messenger who said that the churches had creeds which were an “abomination in His sight”.²² Since Joseph Smith continued to teach the immortality of the soul, heaven the home for the righteous, eternal hell-fire torment of the wicked, a fallen-angel devil (all of these doctrines Roman Catholicism shares with her Protestant offspring) then either Joseph Smith was a disobedient student or else he never received instruction from a divine messenger.
7. The King James translation was published in 1611, 200 years earlier than Joseph Smith’s, Book of Mormon (1830). The King James translators did not claim divine inspiration for their translation, yet Joseph Smith copied this version word for word in many places. He claimed there were no errors in the Book of Mormon because he translated under the direct supervision of God. Notice the way the following sections have been copied from the King James Version:
 - 2 Nephi 12-24 from Isaiah 2-14
 - Mosiah 13:12-24 from Exodus 20:4-17
 - 3 Nephi 24, 25 from Malachi 3, 4
 - 3 Nephi 12-14 (with slight variation) from the “Sermon on the Mount” (Matt. 5-7)
8. In passage after passage, the Book of Mormon reproduces the inaccuracies and peculiarities of the King James Version. For example:
 - a) 2 Nephi 13:17-26 (except for the omission of the italicized words) is identical with Isa. 3:17-26. More recent Hebrew scholarship, however, has shown that the K.J.V. rendering of this section is defective and the R.S.V. makes considerable alteration in its translation.
 - b) Isa. 6:13 (a very difficult Hebrew text to translate) contains no significant alteration in the Book of Mormon. (2 Nephi. 16:13; cf. changes in R.S.V.)
 - c) The K.J.V. renders Isaiah 5:25 incorrectly as “and their carcasses were torn in the midst of the streets.” The Hebrew word “suchah” means “refuse” not “torn”.²³ The R.S.V. reads, “and their corpses were as refuse in the midst of the streets.” The Book of Mormon in 2 Nephi 15:25 perpetuates the King James error.

Joseph Smith, working with a supposedly independent record in another language, dating from the 6th century B.C., and “inspired” to translate, succeeds in reproducing the errors of the K.J.V. Just when one would expect illumination from an inspired independent trans-

21 The official position of the Mormon Church is given as follows: “We believe the Bible to be the Word of God as far as it is translated correctly, we also believe the Book of Mormon to be the Word of God”. Article 8, “Articles of Faith”, Doctrine and Covenants.

22 “I was answered that I must join none of them, for they were all wrong and the Personage who addressed me said that all their creeds were an abomination in His sight . . .” Joseph Smith Tells His Own Story, (Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret News Press), p. 4.

23 Robert Young defines “suchah” as “filth, sweepings, scrapings”. Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965).

lation, the Book of Mormon contains only the faulty rendering of the K.J.V.²⁴

9. Joseph Smith (1841) insisted that "the Book of Mormon is the most correct of any book on earth, and the keystone of our religion, and a man would get nearer to God by abiding by its precepts, than by any other book."²⁵ But there have been more than 2,000 textual changes in the Book of Mormon since the original 1830 edition. Not all of these changes have been grammatical. Consider the following:
- a) "Behold, the virgin which thou seest, is the mother of God." (1830 edition, p. 25).
"Behold, the virgin whom thou seest, is the mother of the Son of God, after the manner of the flesh." (1 Nephi 11:18, p. 18, 1950 edition).
 - b) "And the angel said unto me, behold the Lamb of God, yea, even the Eternal Father!" (1830 edition, p. 25).
"And the angel said unto me: Behold the Lamb of God, yea, even the Son of the Eternal Father!" (1 Nephi 11:21, p. 19, 1950 edition).
 - c) "... that the Lamb of God is the Eternal Father" (1830 edition, p. 32).
"... that the Lamb of God is the Son of the Eternal Father" (1 Nephi. 13:40, p. 25, 1950 edition).
 - d) "... king Benjamin had a gift from God." (1830 edition, p. 200).
"... king Mosiah had a gift from God." (Mosiah 21:28, p. 176, 1950 edition).
 - e) "Yea, decreeth unto them that decrees which are unalterable" (1830 edition, p. 303).
Completely deleted in current edition. (See Alma 29:4, p. 267).

DEUT. 33:15 "And for the chief things of the ancient mountains, and for the precious things of the lasting hills . . ."

PROBLEM: The Mormons interpret this song of Moses as follows:
When the descendants of Joseph were led to this land of America about 600 B.C. they were told that it would be a land choice above all other lands. The reading of Moses' blessing to Joseph indicates that Moses was impressed with this fact and attempted to so describe it. He further indicated that it would be in the "ancient mountains" and the "lasting hills." The land to which they were led was in the western part of South, Central and North America, in the Rocky Mountains, which accurately answers Moses' description.¹

²⁴ Discrepancies also occur like "Son of Righteousness" rather than "Sun of Righteousness" when the Bible is quoted. See Malachi 4:2 K.J.V. and compare with the Mormon quotation in 3 Nephi 25:2, p. 447.

²⁵ Quoted in William J. Whalen, The Latter-day Saints in the Modern World, (Notre Dame, Indiana: Un. of Notre Dame Press, 1967), p. 49.

¹ LeGrand Richards, A Marvelous Work and A Wonder, (Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret Book Co., 1958), p. 64.

SOLUTION:

1. Mormons assert that the ancient mountains refer to the Rocky Mountains, but what is required is proof.
2. Richards asserts that the "descendants of Joseph were led to this land of America about 600 B.C.", but how does he know this for certain? Principally because the Book of Mormon allegedly records this migration. It can be seen that the validity of the Mormon interpretation of this passage stands or falls with the Book of Mormon. Once it is shown that the Book of Mormon is not divinely inspired (as is done elsewhere in this handbook), doubt is cast on all Mormon interpretations based on the Book of Mormon which are not capable of independent verification.
3. The Revised Standard Version translates verses 13-15 as follows: "And of Joseph he said, 'Blessed by the Lord be his [Joseph's] land . . . with the choicest fruits of the sun, and the rich yield of the months, with the finest produce of the ancient mountains, and the abundance of the everlasting hills . . .'" Can the Rocky Mountains be described as an area which produces "the choicest fruits of the sun"? Much of the region is uninhabited rock, not fertile agricultural areas² "accurately" answering "Moses' description".
4. The mountains of significance in the Bible are those about Jerusalem. (Psa. 48:1,2; 125:1,2; Isa. 2:2,3; 11:9).
5. There is circularity in the Mormon use of this passage. When pressed for evidence that the Bible refers to the Book of Mormon, this reference in Deut. 33:15 is cited as allegedly referring to Nephite migrations to America. But the passage in Deut. 33:15 merely refers to "ancient mountains" and "lasting hills" which in itself offers no proof of the Mormon interpretation. Recourse is then taken by the Mormon to the Book of Mormon to show what Deut. 33:15 "really" means. If the Bible refers to the Mormon records, this must be established independent of the Book of Mormon,

ISA. 29:4 "And thou shalt be brought down, and shalt speak out of the ground, and thy speech shall be low out of the dust, and thy voice shall be, as of one that hath a familiar spirit, out of the ground, and thy speech shall whisper out of the dust."

PROBLEM: Mormons claim this passage refers to the plates allegedly found by Joseph Smith at Cumorah Hill, N. Y. State. A Mormon Presiding "Bishop" (1952), LeGrand Richards, comments as follows:

"Now, obviously, the only way a dead people could speak 'out of the ground' or 'low out of the dust' would be by the written word, and this the people did through the Book of Mormon. Truly it has a familiar spirit, for it contains the words of the prophets of the God of Israel."¹

² Even the Rocky Mountain Forest region which extends from northern British Columbia southward into Mexico, to below the Tropic of Cancer "is not important agriculturally". "North America, flora", Collier's Encyclopedia, (1964), XVII, 601.

SOLUTION:

1. Since the Mormons cite this passage as a prophecy of the Book of Mormon the onus of proof rests with them.
2. The following require answers:
 - a) What proof is there from Isa. 29 that the people referred to (i.e., those who speak out of the ground) are dead?
 - b) Since it is "obviously, the only way a dead people could speak 'out of the ground'", how is Gen. 4:10 to be interpreted?
 - c) How is the term "familiar spirit" used elsewhere in Isaiah and in the Old Testament generally?
 - d) Since Isaiah used the terms "speak", "speech", "voice", "whisper" what proof is there:
 - i. that these words refer to a book?
 - ii. that the book referred to is the Book of Mormon?
3. The following information is useful:
 - a) "Familiar spirit" is translated from the Hebrew word, "ob", which means a necromancer² (the pretended power to foretell the future by communicating with the dead; magic). The expression "familiar spirit" occurs in Isa. 8:19-20 where the practice is condemned: "And when they shall say unto you, Seek unto them that have familiar spirits, and unto wizards that peep, and that mutter: should not a people seek unto their God? for the living to the dead? To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." Under the law of Moses death was the punishment for turning after familiar spirits. (Lev. 20:6). There is not one passage in the Bible in which "familiar spirit" occurs with the meaning given it by Mormons.
 - b) Isa. 51 is a commentary on Isa. 29. The following are the points of identification:
 - i. The subject of the prophecies is Jerusalem (Ariel) or Zion. (Isa. 29:1 and Isa. 51:17).
 - ii. Both passages refer to drunkenness but not with wine. (Isa. 29:9 and Isa. 51:21).
 - iii. Both passages refer to punishments of God by means of invading nations. (Isa. 29:3,7 and Isa. 51:19,23).
 - iv. Both passages speak of Jerusalem being debased to the ground. (Isa. 29:4 and Isa. 51:23).The reason for the inhabitants of Jerusalem speaking "low out of the dust" is not because the Book of Mormon would be discovered but because they were being "brought down", beaten into the ground by their enemies. (Isa. 51:23). The "whispering voice" of a necromancer is contrasted with the lifting of the voice when Zion will again be redeemed. (Isa. 52:9).

¹ LeGrand Richards, A Marvelous Work And A Wonder, (Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret Book Co., 1958), p. 69. Richards was ordained as one of the "twelve apostles" of the Mormon Church.

² Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965).

EZEK. 37:19 “ . . . Behold, I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, and they shall be one in mine hand.”

PROBLEM: This passage is understood by Mormons to predict the coming of the Book of Mormon. The passage is interpreted so that the “stick of Judah” refers to the Bible, and the “stick of Joseph” refers to the Book of Mormon. A Mormon expositor, LeGrand Richards (ordained as one of the “twelve apostles” of the Mormon Church) puts it this way:

“In ancient times it was the custom to write on parchment and roll it on a stick. Therefore, when this command was given, it was the equivalent of directing that two books or records should be kept . . . Now, granting that the Bible is the stick of Judah . . . could this promise be fulfilled in a more simple and perfect manner than it was through the coming forth of the Book of Mormon? . . . Now, the two records have been joined together, constituting a complete fulfillment of another great prophecy.”¹

SOLUTION:

1. The stick of Joseph and the stick of Judah are sticks, and not scrolls. The Hebrew word “ets” is translated “tree”, “wood”, “gallows” etc. but never scroll.² The Hebrew word for scroll is “sepher” (see Isa. 34:4).
2. The sticks do not represent the Bible and the Book of Mormon. They represent the divided state of Israel and their joining together portrays the future restoration of Israel under one king. Ezekiel is instructed to give this interpretation. “Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land: And I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and one king shall be king to them all: and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms an more at all.” (vs. 21, 22).
3. This passage offers no proof that the coming of the Book of Mormon is prophesied in the Bible.

JOHN 10:16 “And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd.”

PROBLEM: The Mormon interpretation of this passage is as follows:
“It should be noted that Jesus did not minister unto the

¹ LeGrand Richards, A Marvelous Work and A Wonder, (Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret Book Co., 1958), pp. 67-68.

² Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965). See use of “ets” in Nu. 15:32; I Kings 17:10; II Kings 6:6).

Gentiles although he did send his Apostles unto them after his crucifixion. This leaves us with the question unanswered, so far as the Bible is concerned: Who were the other sheep he promised to visit? For this information we must look to the restoration of the gospel and the coming forth of the Book of Mormon.

After Jesus had been crucified and had ascended unto his Father, he visited his 'other sheep' in America, known as the Nephites, and there chose twelve disciples and organized his Church, as he had done among the Jews, an account of which is given in some detail in Third Nephi of the Book of Mormon . . ."¹

SOLUTION:

1. Richards' suggestion that the identification of the "other sheep" is contained in the *Book of Mormon*² is worthless once it is demonstrated that the Book of Mormon is not an inspired revelation from God. This is done in the introduction to the Mormon section of this handbook.
2. The Mormon argument assumes that "they shall hear my voice" means Jesus would personally visit the "other sheep". But Jesus does not say he would personally visit the other sheep. Those who heard the gospel preached by the Lord's ambassadors heard his voice. Jesus said, "He that heareth you heareth me and he that despiseth you despiseth me; and he that despiseth me despiseth him that sent me." (Luke 10:16). Paul said, "Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us: we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God." (2 Cor. 5:20).
3. The "other sheep" are the Gentiles. Jesus in his earthly ministry was sent to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. (Matt. 15:24). It was prophesied, however, "He shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles" (Isa. 42:1), and that he would be given as "light to the Gentiles". (Isa. 42:6 R.S.V. cf. Matt. 12:18-21). The Gentiles heard the voice of the Shepherd through the labours of the Apostle Paul, a vessel specially chosen for this work. (Acts 9:15; 1 Tim. 2:7 cf. Acts 18:6). By about A.D. 63, (the time of Paul's letter to the Colossian brethren), Paul wrote that the gospel "was preached to every creature under heaven . . ." (Col. 1:23). No mention is made of "other sheep" yet to hear the gospel on the American continent.
4. Gentile sheep like Cornelius heard the voice of the Shepherd and followed in the one fold. The same cannot be said for the Nephites. Sheep worship God in spirit and in Truth. (Jn. 4:23,24). The following references taken from 2 Nephi in the Book of Mormon prove the falsity of the Mormon claim that the alleged descendants of Joseph were sheep in America: The proof rests on the fact that the

1 LeGrand Richards, A Marvelous Work and A Wonder, (Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret Book Co., 1958), p. 60. Richards refers specifically to 3 Nephi 15:11-24 in his identification of the "other sheep."

2 All references to the Book of Mormon are taken from The Book of Mormon: An Account Written By The Hand of Mormon Upon Plates taken from the Plates of Nephi, translated by Joseph Smith, Jun., (Salt Lake City, Utah: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1950).

Nephite "sheep" never knew the "voice of the Shepherd." (John 10: 16,27). The alleged covenant contains doctrines which are subversive of the Truth taught by Jesus Christ. The following quotations are also an indictment of the Mormon claim that Jesus ever appeared to these "sheep".³

- a) They misunderstood the nature of God and His relationship to his Son: "For it behooveth the great Creator that he suffereth himself to become subject unto man in the flesh, and die for all men . . . " (2 Nephi 9:5). The Shepherd said, "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." (Jn. 17:3).⁴ Why were the "Joseph sheep" in ignorance if Jacob (the alleged prophet who wrote this quotation) received his information by divine revelation?
- b) They misunderstood the nature of angels, and the devil: "For behold, if the flesh should rise no more, our spirits must become subject to that angel who fell from before the presence of the Eternal God, and became the devil, to rise no more." (2 Nephi 9:8). An angel who fell and became the devil is never mentioned by the good Shepherd in the New Testament.⁵
- c) They believed in the pagan idea of the immortality of the soul and eternal hell-fire torment for the wicked: "And they shall go away into everlasting fire; prepared for them; and their torment is as a lake of fire and brimstone, whose flames ascendeth up for ever and ever, and has no end." (2 Nephi 9:16).⁶ The Shepherd said that the wicked "have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone; which is the second death. (Rev. 21:8).
- d) They were confused over the time of the judgment: "And it shall come to pass that when all men shall have passed from this first death unto life, insomuch as they have become immortal, they must appear before the judgment-seat of the Holy One of Israel; and then cometh the judgment, and then must they be judged according to the holy judgment of God." (2 Nephi 9:15). The Shepherd taught that immortality would only be given after judgment. (Matt. 25:31-46).

Nephite "prophets" if they ever existed, were wolves in sheep's clothing—false prophets speaking lies. Upon such, the indictment of inspired Scripture rests. (Jer. 16:19; Gal. 1:8,9).

³ Jacob, the brother of Nephi, (2 Nephi 6:1), claims to be "called of God" and "ordained after the manner of his holy order." (2 Nephi 6:2). The quotations referred to are part of his alleged revelations from God. Jacob states his claim as follows: "And now, my beloved brethren, I have read these things that ye might know concerning the covenants of the Lord that he has covenanted with all the house of Israel—that he has spoken unto the Jews, by the mouth of his holy prophets, even from the beginning down, from generation to generation, until the time comes that they shall be restored to the true church and fold of God." (2 Nephi 9:1,2).

⁴ Scripture makes a clear distinction between Jesus whose literal origin began in the days of Herod when he was born (Lk. 1: 31-35; cf. Matt. 2:1) and Yahweh, his Father who is eternal. (1 Tim. 1:17 cf. 1 Tim. 2:5; 1 Cor. 8:6).

⁵ The origin of sin in Scripture is the heart of man. (Matt. 15:19; James 1:13-15). The word "devil" is used of humans. (Jn. 6:70; Titus 2:3—"false accusers" is translated from the same Greek word, "diabolos" cf. 1 Tim. 3:11).

⁶ See also Jacob 6:9,10).

REV. 20:12 “And the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life . . .”

PROBLEM: Joseph Smith and his followers interpret the reference to “the books” to be the Mormon records of proxy baptisms and other rites maintained by the secretaries in Mormon temples. Official Mormon “scripture” puts it this way:

“The books spoken of must be the books which contained the record of their works, [the dead who die without a knowledge of the Mormon gospel] and refer to the records which are kept on the earth.”¹

SOLUTION:

1. The Mormon case rests on two prior propositions:
 - a) That living persons can perform acts of eternal value for dead relatives.
 - b) That dead persons who die in ignorance of the gospel have a hope of salvation (i.e., by conscientious Mormon relatives performing proxy baptisms).Mormons should be pressed hard for Scriptural justification for such beliefs.
2. The onus of proof rests with him who asserts. Mormons must, therefore, justify the following assumptions in the above argument:
 - a) It must be shown that the books referred to by John are books kept by humans.
 - b) It must be shown that the books referred to are kept on earth.
 - c) It must be shown that the books referred to by John contain the works of those who died in ignorance of the gospel.
3. There is evidence against the Mormon interpretation. Scripture never presents the Judgment Day as depending on secondary sources of information (i.e., Mormon temple minutes). Consider the evidence:
 - a) John, writing of Jesus’ earthly ministry, says: “But Jesus did not commit himself unto them, because he knew all men, And needed not that any should testify [witness] of man; for he knew what was in man.” (John 2:24,25). Jesus will not need to rely on human testimony when he comes to judge “the quick and the dead”. Even in his earthly ministry he “knew what was in man”.
 - b) It is prophesied of the Messiah that “the spirit of the LORD shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the LORD; And shall make him of quick understanding in the fear of the LORD: and he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears . . .” (Isa. 11: 2,3).
 - c) The Apostle Paul wrote: “Moreover it is required of stewards that they be found trustworthy. But with me it is a very small thing that I should be judged by you or by any human court. I do not even judge myself. I am not aware of anything against myself, but I am not thereby acquitted. It is the Lord who judges me. Therefore do not pronounce judgment before the time, before the Lord comes, who will bring to light the things now hidden in darkness and will disclose the purposes of the heart. Then every man will receive his commendation from God.” (1 Cor. 4:2-5 R.S.V.). Note the following differences between the Mormon interpretation and Paul’s letter to Corinth:

1 Doctrine and Covenants, Section 128: 6-8, pp. 232-3, (1952 ed.).

- i. Paul says human judgment is unreliable. He hesitates even to judge himself because there may be things he ought to have done which he has ignorantly left undone. Mormons assert that the careful temple secretaries afford reliable information for judgment.
 - ii. Paul says that the Lord judges the purposes of the heart bringing to light the things now hidden in darkness. Granting the generous assumption that Mormon secretaries accurately record the minutes of secret temple rites, they are ineffective in discerning the secret purposes of the heart.
-

POLYGAMY (PLURAL MARRIAGES)

PRELIMINARY POINTS

It is a fundamental belief of Mormons that God has worked with the development of the organization of the church through modern revelation. Restoration of Spirit-gift powers is taught in the Book of Mormon: “I speak unto you who deny the revelations of God, and say that they are done away, that there are no revelations, nor prophecies, nor gifts, nor healing, nor speaking with tongues, and the interpretation of tongues; Behold, I say unto you, he that denieth these things knoweth not the gospel of Christ.” (Mormon 9:7, 8, p. 476).¹

A very strong argument against Mormon claims of modern revelations can be advanced on the basis of Mormon “revelations” on polygamy.

THE ARGUMENT

1. In 1830 Mormons were damned if they had more than one wife:
 - a) “Behold, David and Solomon truly had many wives and concubines, which things were abominable before me, saith the Lord.” (Book of Mormon, Jacob 2:24, p. 111).
 - b) “Wherefore, my brethren, hear me, and hearken to the word of the Lord: For there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none; . . . Wherefore, this people shall keep my commandments, saith the Lord of Hosts, or cursed be the land for their sakes." (Book of Mormon, Jacob 2:27,29, p. 111).

¹ When the Kirtland temple was dedicated in 1836, some of the Mormons spoke of “seeing the Lord, others of seeing Moses, while those outside saw a pillar of fire resting on the temple.” Thomas O’Dea, The Mormons, (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1957), p. 44. Mormon accounts of visions, revelations, and miracles pervade their historical records. The “miracles” have included the healing of sick horses by the laying on of hands and the arrival of sea gulls which destroyed a devouring horde of crickets.

- c) See also Jacob 1:15; 3:5; Mosiah 11:2,4,14; Ether 10:5.
2. But in 1843 a "revelation" through Joseph Smith resulted in a "new and everlasting covenant" being proclaimed, in which those were damned who did not have more than one wife:
 - a) "For behold, I reveal unto you a new and an everlasting covenant; and if ye abide not that covenant, then are ye damned; for no one can reject this covenant and be permitted to enter into my glory . . . And let mine handmaid, Emma Smith, receive all those wives that have been given unto my servant Joseph Smith . . . And if he have ten virgins given unto him by this law, he cannot commit adultery . . ." (Doctrine and Covenants, Section 132:4,52,62, pp. 239, 244, 245, (1952 ed.)).
 - b) " . . . I hold the keys of this power in the last days, for there is never but one on earth at a time on whom the power and its keys are conferred; and I have constantly said no man shall have but one wife at a time unless the Lord directs otherwise."² (Joseph Smith's Diary, Oct 5, 1843).³
3. The American Congress passed a series of bills (The Edmunds-Tucker Act, 1887) prohibiting polygamy. The Mormons finally bowed to surrounding hostile non-Mormons and the Federal Government. Wilford Woodruff, the President of the "twelve apostles" and head of the Mormon Church, "prayed and feeling inspired" issued the following manifesto in 1890:

"Inasmuch as laws have been enacted by Congress forbidding plural marriages . . . I hereby declare my intention to submit to those laws, and to use my influence with the members of the Church over which I preside to have them do likewise." (Doctrine and Covenants, Official Declaration, p. 257).

Polygamists, after this declaration, were excommunicated so that in 1907 it was stated that the church had respectfully submitted to the law enacted against plural marriages.
4. The Mormon claim that God commanded plural marriage through revelations to Joseph Smith can only be maintained if one is prepared to allow that God gave contradictory revelations within the short space of thirteen years. One in the Book of Mormon forbidding polygamy (1830), and the other, through Joseph Smith, commanding it (1843). It seems incredible that a God-inspired "new and everlasting covenant" could then be withdrawn by the same God because of a man-made decision of the Supreme Court.

² The doctrine was at first communicated to a few select of the "inner circle" only. It was understood that this "strong meat" was not to be fed to the Gentiles" who were to receive only the "first principles".

³ Quoted in J. K. VanBaalen, The Chaos of Cults, (Michigan: Wm. B. Eerdmans Co., 1962), p. 202. Joseph Smith claimed to have received a revelation which commanded his wife, Emma Smith, to submit to a polygamous relationship or be destroyed. "Verily, I say unto you: A commandment I give unto you . . . let mine handmaid, Emma Smith, receive all those that have been given unto my servant Joseph . . . And I command mine handmaid, Emma Smith, to abide and cleave unto my servant Joseph, and to none else. But if she will not abide this commandment she shall be destroyed, saith the Lord . . ." (Doctrine and Covenants, Section 132:51-54, p. 244). Smith is reported to have had 48 wives. See Fawn M. Brodie, No Man Knows My History: The Life of Joseph Smith, The Mormon Prophet, (New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 1946).

5. Mormons still attempt to justify the polygamous revelations allegedly given to Smith on the basis of several passages in the Bible. The Christadelphian should be aware that polygamy is not an abandoned doctrine of a forgotten age of Mormonism. This point is acknowledged by secular writers. "... all Mormon doctrinal innovations were to fall into place around this new teaching on marriage . . . sexual relations and procreation the central role in man's progression to divinity."⁴ The following citations from Mormon writings prove this to be the case:

GOD

Mormons speculate about a divine mother in connection with God's fatherhood. The following are the words of a Mormon hymn:

In the heav'ns are parents single?
No! The tho't makes reason stare!
Truth is reason; truth eternal
Tells me I've a mother there.⁵

JESUS CHRIST

"Jesus Christ was a polygamist; Mary and Martha, the sisters of Lazarus, were his plural wives, and Mary Magdalene was another. Also, the bridal feast of Cana of Galilee, where Jesus turned the water into wine, was on the occasion of one of his own marriages."⁶

"We say it was Jesus Christ who was married [at Cana, to Martha and Mary] whereby He could see His own seed before He was crucified. I shall say here that before the Saviour died He looked upon His own natural children as we look upon ours. When Mary came to the sepulchre she saw two angels and she said unto them 'they have taken away my Lord or husband'.⁷

ADAM

"In the Heaven where our spirits were born, there are many Gods, each one of whom has his own wife or wives which were given to him previous to his redemption, while yet in his mortal state."⁸

4. Thomas O'Dea, The Mormons, (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1957), p. 60. O'Dea is a sociologist. (Early Mormon history contains sordid charges of seduction and rivalry for wives. See O'Dea, pp. 61, 62, 104, 110.)

5 Eliza R. Snow, a Mormon poetess and plural wife of Joseph Smith. The poem remains a sacred Mormon song and is retained in the Deseret Sunday School Songbook, (No. 181).

6 Brigham Young (the second president of the Mormon Church), quoted in Eliza Young's, Wife No. 19, Chpt. XXXV.

7 Orson Hyde, Journal of Discourses, Vol. 11, (Oct. 6, 1853), p. 210. Quoted in Gordon Fraser, Is Mormonism Christian? (Chicago: Moody Press, 1965), p. 63.

8 Orson Pratt, The Seer, 1, 3, (March 1853), p. 31. Quoted in Irving Robertson, What the Cults Believe, (Chicago: Moody Press, 1966), p. 14.

"When our father Adam came into the garden of Eden, he came with a celestial body, and brought Eve, one of his wives, with him."⁹

" . . . Michael [the Archangel], or Adam, the father of all, the prince of all, the ancient of days . . . "¹⁰

THE FALL

"Adam found himself in a position that impelled him to disobey one of the requirements of God. He and his wife had been commanded to multiply and replenish the earth. Adam was still immortal; Eve had come under the penalty of mortality; and in such dissimilar conditions the two could not remain together, and, therefore, could not fulfill the Divine requirement, [i.e., to procreate]. On the other hand, Adam would be disobeying another command by yielding to his wife's request. He deliberately and wisely decided to stand by the first and greater commandment; and, therefore, with a full comprehension of the nature of his act, he also partook of the fruit that grew on the tree of knowledge."¹¹

ULTIMATE REWARD

" . . . would you, like your heavenly Father, prompted by eternal benevolence and charity, wish to fill countless millions of worlds with your begotten sons and daughters and to bring them all through all the gradations of progressive being, to inherit immortal bodies and eternal mansions in your several dominions? . . . The eternal union of the sexes, in and after the resurrection, is mainly for the purpose of renewing and continuing the work of procreation."¹²

ABRAHAM'S FAITH

"Abraham received concubines, and they bore him children; and it was accounted unto him for righteousness, because they were given unto him, and he abode in my law . . . "¹³

6. It will be appreciated by those familiar with Biblical teaching that the Mormon claim to "believe in the Bible insofar as it is translated accurately" is worth very little in the context of Mormon distortion of Biblical accounts. Until the authority of Scripture is established and the polygamous interpretations eradicated, little progress can be expected.
7. Despite the official change in attitude by the Mormon Church, plural marriage continues to be practiced in Utah. It is estimated that there

9 Brigham Young, Journal of Discourses, 1, 50, (April 9, 1852). Quoted in Irving Robertson, What the Cults Believe, (Chicago: Moody Press, 1966), p. 15.

10 Doctrine and Covenants, Section 27:11, p. 41.

11 James E. Talmage (a recognized Mormon theologian), The Articles of Faith, (Salt Lake City: Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day saints, 1901), p. 68

12 Parley Pratt (a Mormon missionary), 1830. Quoted in J. K. VanBaalen, The Chaos of Cults, (Grand Rapids, Michigan: Wm. B. Eerdmans Publishing Co., 1962), pp. 205, 206.

13 Doctrine and Covenants, Section 132:37, p. 243.

are several thousand polygamists in Utah today.¹⁴ Fundamentalists claim that for every "fundamentalist" Mormon discovered and excommunicated for polygamy there are ten Mormons in good standing who have more than one wife.¹⁵ Whalen comments:

"Throughout the west, they say, thousands of women known outwardly as widows, divorcees, spinsters, or wives of traveling salesmen or servicemen are actually plural wives. Attorney General Walter Budge of Utah has estimated there are at least 20,000 men, women and children living in plural marriages in his state alone. Newsweek magazine agreed with this estimate in an article on the polygamous Mormons in 1955 . . . It quoted State Attorney General E. R. Callister who said, 'Utah's jails aren't big enough to hold them all.'¹⁶ Newsweek also observed that 'many a Utah Mormon takes quiet pride in his polygamous forbears and is inclined to be lenient toward the Fundamentalists.'¹⁷

Short Creek, Arizona, has been a famous Mormon Fundamentalist settlement. In 1953 warrants were presented for the arrest of 36 men and 83 women. Convictions resulted, but only suspended sentences were received since Arizona has no laws against polygamy. It is known that the Fundamentalists protect themselves by planted spies to tip them off about raids by the police departments.

8. Mormon missionaries distribute a publication, "The Challenge The Book of Mormon Makes to the World". Many of the thirty claims made in this tract are easily answered but some involve historical information. For those wishing to analyze the historical information cited, the following sources are helpful.¹⁸ They are listed in order of thoroughness of content:

14 Thomas O'Dea, The Mormons, (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1957), p. 248.

15 William J. Whalen, The Latter-day Saints in the Modern World, (Notre Dame, Indiana: Un. of Notre Dame Press, 1967), pp. 284, 285.

16 Newsweek, (Nov. 21, 1955), p. 99.

17 William J. Whalen, The Latter-day Saints in the Modern Day World, (Notre Dame, Indiana: Un. of Notre Dame Press, 1967), p. 285.

18 It must, of course, be realized, that these writers are not Christadelphians, and references to Biblical teaching must be cautiously and critically evaluated. Men competent in archaeology and anthropology may have no credentials for expounding Biblical teaching. O'Dea, Thomas. The Mormons. Chicago: The University of Chicago Press, 1957, p. 288.

This book is a sociological analysis (without the anti-Mormon sentiment characteristic of Sectarian publications). The book is similar in style and treatment to Bryan Wilson's, Sects and Society. (Available from public libraries.)

Whalen, William. The Latter-day Saints in the Modern Day World: An Account of Contemporary Mormonism. Notre Dame, Indiana: Un. of Notre Dame Press, 1967, pp. 319. (A paperback.)

Fraser, Gordon. What Does the Book of Mormon Teach? An Examination of the Historical and Scientific Statements of the Book of Mormon. Chicago: The Moody Press, 1964, pp. 128. (A paperback.)

Robertson, Irving. What the Cults Believe. Chicago: The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, 1966, pp. 9-30. (Available from public libraries.)

VanBaalen, Jan Karel. The Chaos of the Cults. Grand Rapids, Michigan: Wm. B. Eerdmans Publishing Co., 1962, pp. 188-218. (Available from public libraries.)

Fraser, Gordon. Is Mormonism Christian? Chicago: The Moody Press, 1965, pp. 7-115. (A paperback.)

ISA. 4:1 "And in that day seven women shall take hold of one man, saying, We will eat our own bread, and wear our own apparel: only let us be called by thy name, to take away our reproach."

PROBLEM: This passage is cited by Mormons in an effort to find Biblical support for the doctrine of polygamy taught in Mormon "scripture".

SOLUTION::

1. This passage is cited for scriptural support for the Mormon doctrine of polygamy. But does the passage state that the seven women would marry the one man? The request is "let us be called by thy name to take away our reproach." Is this synonymous with a request for marriage? If so, why the statement, "We will eat our own bread, and wear our own apparel?" When were such requests made by Mormon women of Mormon men for the reason "to take away our reproach"?
2. In the passage in Isaiah it is the women who request of the man, "let us be called by thy name, but Mormon "inspired scripture" has the initiative resting with the men. The basis for Mormon teaching on polygamy is that God commanded Joseph Smith to take plural wives because of a new² and everlasting covenant.¹ Rather than the woman making the request of the man, Joseph Smith's wife was told if she did not submit to a polygamous relationship, she would be cursed.² Is submission the same as request?
3. The geographical location of the prophecy is not Independence, Missouri, nor the area covered by the Mormon trek to Salt Lake City, in the 1800's, but Palestine. Consider the following evidence: Judah and Jerusalem (Isa. 2:1); "cedars of Lebanon" (2:13); "oaks of Bashan" (2:13); Jerusalem and Judah (3:1); "Judah is ruined and Jerusalem is fallen" (3:8); "daughters of Zion" (3:16); "he that is left in Zion, and he that remaineth in Jerusalem" (4:3); mount Zion (4:5).
4. There are two reasons implied in the context for seven women requesting to be called by the name of one man:
 - a) So many young men had been slaughtered there was no longer enough males for the females. "Thy men shall fall by the sword, and thy mighty in the war". (Isa. 3:25).

1 "For behold, I reveal unto you a new and an everlasting covenant; and if ye abide not that covenant, then are ye damned; for no one can reject this covenant and be permitted to enter into my glory.

. . . And let mine handmaid, Emma Smith, receive all those [wives] that have been given unto my servant Joseph.

. . . And if he have ten virgins given unto him by this law, he cannot commit adultery, for they belong to him, and they are given unto him; therefore is he justified." Doctrine and Covenants, Section 132:4,52,62, pp. 239,244,245 (1952 ed.).

2 The following revelation is alleged to have been given Joseph Smith by God: "And let mine handmaid, Emma Smith, receive all those wives that have been given unto my servant Joseph . . . And I command mine handmaid, Emma Smith, to abide and cleave unto my servant Joseph, and to none else. But if she will not abide this commandment she shall be destroyed, saith the Lord; for I am the Lord thy God, and will destroy her if she abide not in my law." Doctrine and Covenants, Section 132:53,54, p. 244, (1952 ed.).

- b) The females had been stricken with plagues (Is. 3:16-24; "filth of the daughters of Zion", Isa. 4:4) which were so repugnant that no young man desired these women for wives. Hence the request to be called by a man's name to take away the reproach, yet "we will eat our own bread, and wear our own apparel . . ."

Either, or both of these reasons are incompatible with the Mormon claim that polygamy was a "new and divine covenant" communicated by God through the "prophet" Joseph Smith.

5. Mormon communities have been noted for their patriarchal rule.³ Mormon doctrine teaches that a woman cannot attain the highest glory for a woman, apart from a man.⁴ But the context to the passage in question states, "as for my people . . . women rule over them". (Isa. 3:12). Since Mormon history is silent about rulership by women, this is further evidence that Isa. 4:1 is not prophetic of Mormon polygamy.

1 COR. 15:29 "Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all?"

PROBLEM: Mormons spend great amounts of time looking up their genealogies. Some have been baptized¹ by proxy more than fifty times for the benefit of "Gentile" ancestors. The baptisms are always done within the secrecy of Mormon temples. Support for this practice is taken from this passage. One Mormon put it this way:

"Millions of earth's sons and daughters have passed out of the body without obeying the law of baptism. Many of them will gladly accept the word and law of the Lord when it is proclaimed to them in the spirit world. But they cannot there attend to ordinances that belong to the sphere which they have left. Can nothing be done in their case? Must they forever be shut out of the kingdom of heaven? But justice and mercy join in answering 'yes' to the first, 'no' to the last question. What, then, is the way of their deliverance? The living may be baptized for the dead. Other essential ordinances may be attended to vicariously. This glorious truth hid from human knowledge for centuries,² has been made known in this greatest of all dispensations . . ."³

3 See LeGrand Richards, A Marvelous Work And A Wonder, (Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret Book Company, 1950), p. 200.

4 Ibid., p. 195.

1 Mormons baptize by immersion in water. Although infant baptism is rejected, Mormon's consider the age of accountability to be eight!

2 Other groups have practised baptism for the dead. Among these were the Marcionites and the Montanists. The Council of Hippo (393 A.D.) forbade the practice. See James Hasting (ed.) Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics, Vol. 8, (New York, Charles Scribner's Sons), p. 408.

3 C. Penrose, Mormon Doctrine Plain and Simple: or Leaves from the Tree of Life, 1897, p. 48.

SOLUTION:

1. It is apparent from Penrose's argument that the Mormon position rests on two prior propositions:
 - a) That Mormon "scripture" is authoritative.
 - b) That at death the real person departs to the spirit world.Since these two Mormon claims are considered in detail elsewhere in this manual, they are not examined here.
2. The Mormon doctrine of proxy baptism rests on this one passage in the entire Bible. Any doctrine must be suspect which rests on only one verse. Much more so when the interpretation given to the verse violates the teaching of Scripture that after death comes either judgment (if responsible) or annihilation (if not responsible).⁴ "It is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment . . ." (Heb. 9:27).
3. But what does the passage mean? A number of interpretations have in the past been proposed. The one which best fits the context is the following:

"Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead [Christ]⁵, if the dead [believers] rise not at all?"

The argument being: "Why be baptised on behalf of Christ who has not risen from the dead?" (cf. vs. 4-19; vs. 20-28 being read as parenthetical).

⁴ E.g., "other lords" (Isa. 26:14,19) and the Babylonians (Jer. 51:39,57).

⁵ It is sometimes argued that "the dead" cannot refer to Christ since the Greek word for dead, "nekron" is plural, not singular. But a check of the Hebrew word for "death" in Isa. 53:9 ("He made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death"), indicates that the word "death" in this reference is also plural. The plural is in harmony with the argument of the Apostle Paul that "if one died for all, then were all dead". (2 Cor. 5:14). The death of Christ comprehended many deaths.

SEVENTH - DAY ADVENTISM

The "ceremonial law" and the "moral law"

PROBLEM: A distinction is made by S.D.A.'s between the "ceremonial law" (written in a book), which it is argued was done away with in Christ, and the "moral law" (inscribed in the tables of stone) which it is said is eternal and immutable. A S.D.A. publication puts it this way:

"We feel that there are ample Biblical grounds for making this distinction. The Ten Commandments, or the Decalogue, constitute in principle God's eternal law. Not only is this law eternal, but it is immutable."¹

SOLUTION:

S.D.A.'s impose on Scripture a division not made by Scripture itself. Consider the following:

- a) Hezekiah appointed "the king's portion of his substance for the burnt offerings . . . for the sabbaths, and for the new moons, and for the set feasts, as it is written in the law of the LORD." (2 Chron. 31:3). This passage indicates that the "law of the LORD" includes "ceremonial" aspects (i.e., feasts, burnt offerings) as well as "moral law". (S.D.A.'s teach that the "law of Moses" refers to the ceremonial aspects, whereas the "law of the LORD" refers to the moral law.)
- b) In Numbers 31:21 the ordinance of "the law which the LORD commanded Moses" is stated concerning the men who had returned from battle with the spoils of war. "The law which the LORD commanded Moses" is not, therefore, an expression exclusively used for the decalogue. The passage also indicates that "the law" cannot be divided between "ceremonial" and "moral aspects" since the above instructions regarding war had a moral intent.
- c) God's decree forbidding marriage with the alien is not specifically indicated in the decalogue but is written in the "book of the law of Moses" (Josh. 23:6,12) and likewise contains a moral intent.

Origin and Duration of the Sabbath Law

PROBLEM: S.D.A.'s argue that the sabbath law was given to Adam and Eve and is eternally binding on all believers. The argument is stated as follows:

"But the Decalogue, sealed with the lip and finger of God, was lifted above all Jewish rites and ceremonies. This is evident from the fact that the Sabbath was established before man sinned, and therefore before he had any need of a Redeemer. It was not a part of the ceremonial regulations occasioned by the entrance of sin, and which were annulled by the death of Christ (Col. 2:17)."¹

¹ Seventh-day Adventists Answer Questions on Doctrine: An Explanation of Certain Major Aspects of Seventh-day Adventist Belief, (Washington: Review and Herald Publishing Ass., 1957), p. 129.

SOLUTION:

1. There is no passage of Scripture which explicitly states that the keeping of the Sabbath was binding on any prior to God's giving of the covenant to Israel. God "rested" (Gen. 2:2,3), but nowhere is it stated that Adam and Eve were commanded to observe the sabbath.
2. Paul expressly states that the law (of which the decalogue was a part "was added because of transgressions, until the seed should come." (Gal. 3:19). Since the law was added because of transgressions, it implies that the sabbath law was not given to Adam and Eve. The law was added until "the seed should come," which clearly implies that its provision had served its purpose when the Seed had come.
3. Even if it were true that the sabbath law was in existence before the law of Moses, this does not necessarily make it binding today, since both animal sacrifices and circumcision were commanded by God in patriarchal times, but are not now binding.
4. If the sabbath law were eternal, why did an alleged "ceremonial law"—circumcision, take precedence over sabbath observance—a moral law? The law required that eight days after a child was born it must be circumcized (Lev. 12:3), but sometimes the day of circumcision would fall on a sabbath. A conflict of laws resulted—one demanding that circumcision should take place, and the other, that no work should be done. (See Jn. 7:22,23). Circumcision took precedence because unless one was circumcized, the law could not be kept. Likewise, on the "sabbath days the priests in the temple profane the sabbath, and are blameless." (Matt. 12:5). Instead of the sabbath being a day of rest to the Lord, their work was doubled. (Num. 28:9-10). All believers are a "royal priesthood" (1 Pet. 2:9) and as such, are exempt from one day sabbath keeping.
5. Part of the sabbath law was the penalty for its disobedience: "whosoever doeth any work in the sabbath day, he shall surely be put to death." (Exod. 31:15). If the law commanding observance has not changed why has the penalty for its disobedience been changed by the S.D.A.'s?
6. The sabbath law is expressly stated to be a sign between Israel and Yahweh: "It is a sign between me and the children of Israel for ever." (Exod. 31:17 cf. Deut. 5:15). The law was not given to the forebearers of the Israelites since it is stated: "The LORD made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us even us, who are all of us here alive this day.” (Deut. 5:3). This is further suggested by the ignorance of Moses and Aaron as to what to do with the man caught picking up sticks on the sabbath: “And they put him in ward, because it was not declared what should be done to him.” (Num. 15:34). Why would there be ignorance about the penalty for sabbath disobedience if the law had been in force since Eden?

¹ Seventh-day Adventists Answer Questions on Doctrine, (Washington: Review and Herald Publishing Ass., 1957), pp. 150-151.

7. If the sabbath law is eternal why is it termed (as part of the decalogue) “the ministration of death, written and engraved in stones” and the “ministration of condemnation”? (2 Cor. 3:6-9).
8. The sabbath is termed a “shadow”. (Col. 2:16,17). How can that which is a “shadow” be eternal? The sabbath was designed to teach men to rest from the works of the flesh in anticipation of the great millennial rest which God would provide. “There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God.” (Heb. 4:9,11). The believer now rests every day from the works of the flesh, labouring “to enter into that rest”. (Heb. 4:11). This parallels the change in circumcision—from a literal cutting off of flesh to “that of the heart, in the spirit and not in the letter.” (Rom. 2:29)²
9. Judaizing heretics who said that it was needful to keep the law of Moses (Acts 15:1,24) subverted the Truth and received strong indictments from the Apostle Paul in his letter to the Galatian ecclesia. But no mention is made by the Apostle of a binding sabbath law to be observed by Gentile converts. Similarly, it is significant that the council at Jerusalem (Acts 15) was convened to consider Jewish claims regarding the law of Moses, but no mention was made of sabbath keeping. If the sabbath were eternal and immutable one would have expected that at this conference such would have been stated. Rather, Paul’s letters leave sabbath observance to the individual choice of believers. (Rom. 14:5,6; Col. 2:14-17).
10. There is further evidence that sabbath observance is not mandatory for New Testament believers:
 - a) The ten commandments were a part of the “old” covenant. (Exod. 34:28; Deut. 4:13; 1 Kings 8:9,21).
 - b) But the writer to the Hebrews states: “A new covenant, he hath made the first old. Now that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away.” (Heb. 8:13).
 - c) Therefore, the decalogue as given to Israel is no longer binding upon New Testament believers.
11. It is sometimes contended that if the “old” covenant has been replaced by the “new” then it must now be permissible to steal, murder etc., but this is not so. The following tabulation shows that nine of the ten commandments have been re-affirmed in the affirmative form

² Even now believers can partially experience the sabbath rest of the millenium. Jesus said: “Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.” (Matt. 11:28). The Greek word, “anapausis” translated “rest” is used in the Septuagint for the Old Testament sabbath rest. (The Septuagint is the Greek translation of the Old Testament Scriptures in the third century B.C.

("do" rather than "do not"). Sabbath observance is the one command of the law which is not re-affirmed.

New Testament		Old Testament
1st	Eph. 4:6; 1 Jn. 5:21; Matt. 4:10	Exod. 20:3
2nd	1 Cor. 10:14; Rom. 1:25	Exod. 20:4-5
3rd	James 5:12; Matt. 5:34-35	Exod. 20:7
4th	Abolished: Rom. 14:5; Col. 2:16-17; Heb. 8:13	Exod. 20:8
5th	Eph. 6:1; Col. 3:20	Exod. 20:12
6th	1 Jn. 3:15; Matt. 5:21,22; Rom. 13:9	Exod. 20:13
7th	Heb. 13:4; Matt. 5:27-28; 1 Cor. 6:9-10	Exod. 20:14
8th	Rom. 2:21; Eph. 4:28	Exod. 20:15
9th	Col. 3:9; Eph. 4:25; 2 Tim. 3:3; 1 Tim. 3:8-11	Exod. 20:16
10th	Eph. 5:3; Col. 3:5	Exod. 20:17

12. The Apostles gathered with believers on the first day of the week to remember the sacrifice of Christ and to take up the collection of money for the work of the Truth. (Acts 20:7; 1 Cor. 16:2). On the sabbath they were engaged in contentious disputation with the Jews in the synagogues. Acts records: "And Paul, as his manner was, went in unto them, [the synagogue of the Jews], and three sabbath days reasoned with them out of the scriptures." (Acts 17:2). S.D.A.'s have reversed this example. They gather with those of like belief on Saturday and proselytize on Sunday.³

MATT. 24:20 "But pray ye that your flight be not in the winter, neither on the sabbath day."

PROBLEM: This passage is cited by S.D.A.'s in an attempt to prove that the sabbath is binding upon believers. The question is pressed: "Why would Jesus instruct his disciples to pray that their flight be not on the sabbath, if sabbath observance were no longer binding?"

³ S.D.A.'s contend that the custom of holding the memorial service on Sunday owes its origin to the decree of Constantine in 328 A.D. in which it was commanded that the first day of the week should be kept holy by all "Christians". This S.D.A. assertion is inaccurate. Historical records indicate that the custom went back to Apostolic times. Consider the following: a) "We do not regard circumcision, nor observe the sabbath, because such things as these do not belong to Christians." (Eusebius, about 324 A.D.); b) 'The obligation of the Lord's resurrection binds us to keep the paschal festival on the Lord's day.' (Anatolius, A.D. 270); c) 'Sunday is the day on which we all hold our common assembly; since it is the first day in which God made the world; and Jesus Christ, our Saviour, rose, on that day, from the dead.' 'On the day called Sunday there is made a gathering into the same place of all that live in city or country, and the memoranda of the apostles, or the writings of the prophets, are read as long as may be. Afterwards, the reader having ceased, the president makes verbally the admonition and exhortation to the imitation of these excellent things. Then we all rise and pour forth prayers. Then the bread and wine are taken.' (Justin Martyr, A.D. 140). 'Those who were concerned with old things, have come to newness of confidence, no longer keeping sabbaths, but living according to the Lord's day, on which our life, as risen again through him, depends.' (Ignatius, about 100 A.D.).' Quoted from "How and When The Sabbath Should be Kept", Herald of the Coming Age, XVIII, No. 6, (April, 1968), 96.

SOLUTION:

Nehemiah had commanded that the gates of the city be closed on the sabbath. (Neh. 13:19). The Jews, with veiled eyes, failed to respond to the teaching of Christ about the sabbath. Consequently, if the Jews fled the city on a sabbath, they would be confronted by closed gates and the prejudice of conservative Judaisers who would not work on the sabbath. The resulting confusion, with advancing Roman armies, would bring great hardship on those attempting to flee to the mountains. Similar hardships would face those fleeing in winter.

ISA. 24:1,3,19 “Behold, the LORD maketh the earth empty, and maketh it waste, and turneth it upside down, and scattereth abroad the inhabitants thereof.”

“The land shall be utterly emptied, and utterly spoiled: for the LORD hath spoken this word.”

“The earth is utterly broken down, the earth is clean dissolved, the earth is moved exceedingly.”

PROBLEM: These verses are cited by S.D.A.’s in support of their belief that the earth will be desolate for a thousand years during which time Satan will be “circumstantially bound” on the earth. (The righteous will have been taken to heaven). A. S.D.A. publication comments as follows:

“The implication is almost unavoidable that the destination of the righteous at the second advent is heaven—not the earth from which they are removed at the last trump.”¹

“Satan’s followers have all been destroyed at the second advent. The righteous . . . are removed from his [Satan’s] domain. The earth is in utter desolation, with dead bodies everywhere . . . Satan is consigned by divine fiat to the earth, there for one thousand years to ponder on the results of his rebellion against God.”²

SOLUTION:

1. If the earth is to become completely desolate who are the “few men left”? (vs. 6). Why is every house shut up so that none can enter? (vs. 10). Who is crying in the streets for lack of wine? (vs. 11). Who is it that sings for joy? (vs. 14).
2. Isaiah refers to the LORD of hosts reigning in mount Zion, “and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously.” (vs. 23). This time is referred to by Isaiah in chapters 2 and 65. Both of these passages require the continued existence of mortal people on the earth. Note the following: Isa. 2:3 (these are not righteous immortals since they go to Jerusalem to learn cf. Zech. 14:17); Isa. 65:17-20 (the sinner being an hundred years old shall be accursed likewise indicates the continued existence of mortal nations on the earth.)

¹ Seventh-day Adventists Answer Questions on Doctrine, (Washington: Review and Herald Publishing Ass., 1957), p. 495.

² Ibid., p. 492.

3. The saints will not be removed to heaven. "They shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years." (Rev. 20:6). This reigning will be on the earth: "And hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth." (Rev. 5:10).
4. The apparently absolute expressions of desolation on the earth must, therefore, be read in a limited sense. This conclusion is further indicated by noting parallel expressions in Jer. 44:2,6 in which Jerusalem is referred to as a desolation with no man dwelling therein, yet Nebuzaradan the captain of the guard left certain of the poor of the land for vinedressers and husbandmen. (Jer. 52:16).
5. God will not leave the earth utterly desolate with no inhabitants since "the LORD said in his heart, I will not again curse the ground any more for man's sake; for the imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth; neither will I again smite any more every thing living, as I have done." (Gen. 8:21).

JER. 4:7,23 " . . . and thy cities shall be laid waste, without an inhabitant."

"I beheld the earth, and, lo, it was without form, and void; and the heavens, and they had no light."

PROBLEM: S.D.A.'s connect these verses with those in Isa. 24:1,3,19 to teach that the earth will be completely desolate during the millenium except for Satan who will be left to ponder on the results of his rebellion against God.

SOLUTION:

1. This passage refers, not to the earth, but to the land of Palestine. (vs. 1-3, 5,6).
2. The passage was fulfilled when Nebuchadnezzar took Jerusalem 586 B.C. (Jer. 44:2,6; 52:5,7,8). Even then, some Jews were left to till the soil. (Jer. 52:15,16).
3. Even if there were a secondary application of this passage at Armageddon, positive evidence that mortals will inhabit the earth during the millenium is supported from the following passages:
 - a) The saints are to be given power over the nations to rule with a rod of iron. (Rev. 2:26,27). But this time must be during the millennial period since the end of the millenium results in the end of sin and mortality. (1 Cor. 15:22-28).
 - b) The saints are said to reign for a thousand years (Rev. 20:6). But who are they to reign over if removed to heaven? (cf. Rev. 5:10—"We shall reign on the earth.")
 - c) See also Zech. 14:16,17; Isa. 65:16.

REV. 21:10 "And he carried me away in the spirit to a great and high mountain, and shewed me that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God."

PROBLEM: S.D.A.'s cite this passage in support of their doctrine that the rapture will take the saints to heaven for 1,000 years, after which the bride, represented as a city, will descend to the earth.¹

SOLUTION:

1. The saints will not be in heaven for the 1,000 years period, therefore the passage cannot teach the literal descent of the saints to the earth. See Rev. 5:10— "... and we shall reign on the earth." This reigning is during the 1,000 years as is indicated in Rev. 20:6—"they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years."
2. The Revelation which depicts the saints as a city descending from God out of heaven employs the language of theophany in which a manifestation of God is said to be God descending or coming down. See for example: Gen. 11:5; 18:21; Exod. 3:7,8. The saints are chosen in Christ "before the foundation of the world." (Eph. 1:4). Their origin is from heaven in the sense that they are new creations (Jas. 1:18; Eph. 2:15) born from above (Jn. 3:3,7 mg.) by the Spirit word. (Jn. 6:63). Similarly the manna which the children of Israel ate in the wilderness was bread sent down from heaven. (Jn. 6:31). "From heaven" emphasizes its divine origin without asserting that it was manufactured in heaven and floated down to the earth. Similarly, the bride descending out of heaven symbolically portrays her heavenly origin.

¹ See Seventh-day Adventists Answer Questions on Doctrine, (Washington: Review and Herald Publishing Ass., 1967), pp. 504-5.

PENTECOSTALISM¹

PRELIMINARY POINTS

Pentecostals tend to be very difficult to engage in a reasoned Biblical discussion. Inevitably, the discussion becomes a stalemate when the Pentecostal asserts that he has had a personal experience with the Lord and is now led into all truth by the Holy Spirit. It has been said that "the man who has had an experience is never at the mercy of a man with an argument". The point is, there is no longer any common ground from which to reason from the accepted to the disputed. The non-Pentecostal is relegated to the position of a "natural man" who "cannot understand the things of the spirit" (i.e., the spiritual "truths" of Pentecostal teaching).²

One problem area in such discussions is that there is no common authority to which appeal might be made. It may at first be thought that the obvious authority is the Bible, but in actual fact this is seldom the case. The real authority is nearly always extra-Biblical, i.e., the Holy Spirit, or the "reality" of a personal encounter with the Lord. The apostolic instruction to "prove all things" (1 Thess. 5:21) is an objective basis for discussion, but Pentecostalism operates on the highly subjective basis of personal experiences and Holy Spirit guidance. The tragedy of such authorities is the way in which the Holy Spirit is, in effect, charged with errors taught in the name of Pentecostalism. It is not uncommon to find "Spirit-guided" Pentecostals repeatedly differing in their respective interpretations of the same verses.³ Is the Holy Spirit power of Almighty God the author of confusion?

SUGGESTED STRATEGY

1. Christ predicted that miracles and prophesying would be done in his

1 There are many factions within the Pentecostal movement with differences of belief. Some are independent and known as "Jesus only" (denying the orthodox trinitarian belief), but all Pentecostals emphasize the "born-again" experience and the baptism of the Holy Spirit. The term "Pentecostal" is used in this analysis to include all groups within the general movement.

2 Time called Pentecostalism the "fastest growing church in the hemisphere". ("Fastest-Growing Church in the Hemisphere", Time, 80, (Nov. 2, 1962), p. 56. Life regarded it as "the third force", equal in significance to Roman Catholicism and historic Protestantism. ("The Third Force in Christendom", Life, 44, (June 9, 1958), p. 113. A. A. Allen is currently one of the most popular Pentecostals in America. The A. A. Allen Revivals Inc., in 1968 grossed $2,692,342.00 (not counting the salaries of Allen and his two associate preachers who take their cut directly from "their ministry", printed 55 million pieces of literature; maintained daily radio-broadcasts (58 stations), and weekly television programmes (43 stations). See "Religion: Faith Healers Getting Back Double from God", Time (Canadian edition), 93, No. 10, p. 52.

3 Historically, official differences have existed among Pentecostal groups. For example, the Elim movement and the Assemblies of God have these principal differences:

a) Whether the initial sign of "Baptism of the Holy Ghost" is necessarily speaking in tongues—affirmed by the Assemblies of God, whereas Elim has regarded tongues as only one of several possible signs. b) Whether there are apostles in the church today—asserted by the Apostolic Church. c) Whether there would be a total or partial rapture of the saints. d) Interpretations of Bible prophecy. This latter was a source of division within Elim itself. See Elim Evangel, 21, (1940), p. 125. Referred to by Bryan Wilson, Sects and Society: A Sociological Study of Three Religious Groups in Britain, (London: William Heinemann Ltd., 1961), p. 57.

name, apart from his sanction or power. (Matt. 7:21-23; see also 2 Thess. 2:9). This is why an experience or miracle, no matter how great, cannot be appealed to as the sole judge of the source of that event. A discussion with a Pentecostal can often be more effective if a simple, yet important, ground rule is laid down at the beginning—that if anything is said in the discussion, even if attributed to extra-Biblical sources, it must stand the test of Scripture.⁴ To assume such a posture in the discussion is to follow the instruction of the New Testament. Consider the following:

- a) Paul establishes the test of sound doctrine as the criterion by which claimants to Spirit-gift powers can be examined. "Now concerning spiritual gifts, brethren, I would not have you ignorant. Ye know that ye were Gentiles, carried away unto these dumb idols, even as ye were led. Wherefore I give you to understand, that no man speaking by the Spirit of God calleth Jesus accursed: and that no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Spirit." (1 Cor. 12:1-3). The lord prominent in the first century was "my lord Serapis".⁵ The Gospel challenged allegiance to this god through converts made to the Hope of Israel. No teacher with Spirit gifts would say "Jesus is accursed", but on the other hand, no teacher who followed the pagan cult would assert that Jesus was lord. The test of the claimant to Spirit powers, was, therefore, the test of the doctrine he taught.
- b) Similarly, John applied the test of sound doctrine: "Hereby know ye the Spirit of God: Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God: And every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God . . ." (1 John 4:2-3). The test is the same—Is the teaching of the one who claims Spirit gifts in accordance with the revealed Word?

2. Now an area of discussion can be selected. But where should one start? The recurrent theme of Pentecostal services is the weight of man's sin, the suffering of Christ in vicariously atoning for man's guilt, and the debt of gratitude which all believers owe to Jesus who relieved them of their guilt. It is in this context that the Pentecostal evaluates Christadelphian teaching about the kingdom of God and the nature of man—interesting discussion, perhaps, but hardly fundamental to the "gospel". It certainly could be effectively argued that both of these areas are fundamentals of the Gospel. There are times, however, when it is advantageous to work within the belief system of the non-Christadelphian and in so doing, become "all things to all men" (I Cor. 9:22) that some might be saved. What better place to start than the nature, death and atonement of Christ?⁶ The implication of such a discussion would be to imply, if not to state, that the Pentecostal claim to be led into all truth by the Holy Spirit is wholly unjustified, since the doctrines taught are unscriptural and therefore subject to the severe condemnation of Gal. 1:8,9 ("As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed.")

⁴ The Bereans were commended as follows: "These were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind and searched the scriptures daily, whether those things were so." (Acts 17:11). If the inspired teaching of the Apostle Paul was put to the test of Scripture, how much more the statements of latter-day claimants to Spirit gifts!

⁵ This foreign god was imported to Egypt where in Alexandria it was regarded as a protector. A temple was built for Serapis which "rivalled the pride and magnificence of the Capitol". The god was similar in appearance to Jupiter and it was confidently affirmed by his votaries that if any impious hand should dare to violate the majesty of the god, the heavens and the earth would instantly return to their original chaos. See Edward Gibbon, The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, (New York: Harcourt Brace and Co., 1960 ed.), pp. 415-417.

3. Sooner or later the Christadelphian will be required to provide proof that the Spirit gifts are not available today. The following summary attempts to compile the evidence:

- a) The ability to pass on the Spirit gifts seems to have been the special privilege of the Apostles only (Ananias being a possible exception—Acts 9:17). This is indicated by the fact that although Philip's preaching was accompanied by miracles (Acts 8:7), the Apostles at Jerusalem sent Peter and John to Samaria to transmit the Spirit gifts by the laying on of hands. (Acts 8:14-18). Why should Peter and John be sent to Samaria to transmit Spirit-gift powers, if this power were available to all believers? Hence, with the death of the Apostles, there was no one able to transmit these gifts and so they ceased. As Peter said, the gift of the Holy Spirit was promised "to you [the Jews to whom he was speaking], and to your children, [two generations], and to all that are afar off, [Gentiles]⁷ even as many [i.e., of these] as the Lord our God shall call." (Acts 2:38,39).

- b) In I Cor. 13, the Apostle Paul contrasts the temporary character of the gifts with the permanence of faith, hope and love. "But covet earnestly the best gifts: and yet shew I unto you a more excellent way". "Charity never faileth: but whether there be prophecies, [i.e., the gift of prophecy, I Cor. 12:1,9,10] they shall fail; whether there be tongues, [i.e., gift of tongues, I Cor. 12:10], they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, [i.e., gift of knowledge, I Cor. 12:8] it shall vanish away." (1 Cor. 12:31; 13:8). When is this to take place? Paul says, "But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away." (1 Cor. 13:10). Two interpretations are usually given to this verse. Pentecostals argue that the "perfect" which is to come refers to the return of Christ, while others, such as the Christadelphians, argue that it refers to the maturity which would come to the ecclesia with the completed Scriptures. If the latter could

⁶ The following is a brief outline of Pentecostal belief in these three areas, as defined by J. A. Synan et. al. (eds.), The Pentecostal Holiness Church Manual, (Franklin Springs, Georgia: Board of Publications, Pentecostal Holiness Church, 1965):

- a) Christ's Nature—"He was 'a perfect, sinless human being . . . very God and perfect man.'" p. 29.
- b) Christ's Death—" . . . Christ lived in a mortal body subject to suffering and death." "He 'dropped out' of the mortal body on the cross." p. 25.
- c) Christ's Atonement—"We believe, teach and firmly maintain the . . . doctrine of justification by faith alone . . . We do not believe that any sort or degree of good works can procure or contribute toward our justification or salvation; that this is accomplished solely and exclusively upon the basis of our faith in the shed blood . . ." p. 31.

⁷ Note the use of "afar off" for the Gentiles in Ephesians 2:13,17.

be proven, then, of course, this would amount to a proof that the Spirit-gift powers ceased about the end of the first century. The following is advanced in support of the latter interpretation:

- i. The Spirit gifts would pass away before the advent of Christ since Paul says, faith and hope abide (vs. 13). But when Christ returns one will have no need of hope, for "hope that is seen is not hope: for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for?" (Rom. 8:24). Nor would one have need for faith, since faith is "the assurance of things hoped for, the conviction of things not seen". (Heb. 11:1, R.S.V.). Therefore, there must be a period of time after the passing of the Spirit gifts in which faith and hope "abide". Hence the passing of the Spirit gifts cannot be at the return of Christ, but must be at some time prior to this.
- ii. The Apostle stressed, "Now abideth faith, hope, charity . . ." (I Cor. 13:13). This stress indicates that the Apostle did not consider the Holy Spirit gifts would continue past his age.
- iii. The immediate context to verse 10, ("But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away") is the knowing "in part" and prophesying "in part", (vs. 10). The term "perfect" is, therefore, qualified by the subject in the context—the possession of the knowledge of the purpose of God. The impartation of this knowledge was dependent in the first century upon the presence of believers with the gifts of "knowledge" and "prophecy" until the completion of the New Testament. Since the completion of the New Testament no claimants to Spirit-gift powers have been successful in adding to the perfected⁸ (completed) Scriptures. Why this lack of new knowledge, if in fact the Spirit gifts have been available from the first century until the present day?
- iv. The most frequent use of "teleion" is for the maturity of believers.⁹ It is sometimes used in contexts which imply that the maturity is reached before the judgment at the return of Christ. Note the following:
 - "Howbeit we speak wisdom among them that are perfect [teleiois, "mature", R.S.V.] . . ." (1 Cor. 2:6).
 - "Let us therefore, as many as be perfect [teleioi, "mature", R.S.V.] . . ." (Phil. 3:15).
 - " . . . in understanding be men [teleioi, "mature", R.S.V.]. (1 Cor. 14:20).
 - "For every one that useth milk is unskilful in the word of righteousness: for he is a babe. But strong meat belongeth to them that are of full age, [teleion, "mature", R.S.V.] even those who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil." (Heb. 5:13, 14).

⁸ The Greek word translated "perfect" in 1 Cor. 13:10 is "teleios" which means "ended, complete". Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965).

⁹ "Teleion" is used once in reference to the Scriptures in Jas. 1:25—"The perfect [teleion] law of liberty".

The purpose of the Spirit gifts was to confirm the word which was spoken (Mk. 16:20), and to equip the saints for the work of the ministry and for edification (Eph. 4:12), but when the mature state of the ecclesia was reached with the completion of the New Testament Scriptures, that which was "in part" (the Spirit gifts, eg. some had the gift of tongues, others the gift of prophecy, etc.) ceased.

4. An explanation must also be offered for two comparisons which the Apostle makes:
 - a) "When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things." (1 Cor. 13:11). The Apostle's personal life illustrated the development of the ecclesia, (the comparison of the ecclesia to a human body is made in chapter 12, cf. also Rom. 12:4-8) from the immature state which depended on Spirit gifts, to the maturity reached with the completion of the Scriptures. There may be a subtle allusion to the gift of tongues ("I spake"), and the gift of knowledge ("I understood"), and the gift of prophecy ("I thought", "reasoned" mg.). These would "be put away"—rendered inoperative by maturity.
 - b) "For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known." (1 Cor. 13:12). By looking into the partially revealed Word, man obtained a partial picture of the revelation of God to himself, but with the completion of revelation, man could then see himself as he was seen by God in the divine purpose.
5. Since Jesus Christ is "the same yesterday, and today, and forever" (Heb. 13:8), the modern tongues movement claims that the Spirit gifts must be available today. It is argued that Jesus can do today what he did in the first century—send the Comforter to divide "to every man severally as he will". (1 Cor. 12:11). Two points require stressing:
 - a) It is not a question as to whether Christ can make the Spirit gifts available today. He obviously has the power to do so. The question is rather is it his purpose to make the Spirit gifts available today.
 - b) To argue that Christ must do today what he did in the past is to put a limitation upon his sovereignty. Jesus is immutable (unchanging in his character and person) as is his Father (cf. Num. 23:19; Mal. 3:6; Jas. 1:17), but he is not confined to do in the present and the future what he has done in the past. To argue otherwise is to ignore the history of the relationship of God and Jesus Christ with men. Two examples illustrate this point:
 - i. The disciples were told not to preach to the Gentiles—" . . . Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not: But go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel." (Matt. 10:5,6). After the resurrection of Christ, the disciples were told to preach the gospel to all nations. (Mk. 16:15). Philip preached to the Samaritans (Acts 8), and Paul was specifically sent to the Gentiles. (1 Tim. 2:7; 2 Tim. 1:11).
 - ii. Nearly all Pentecostals would agree that Apostles who strike liars dead (Acts 5:3-10) and raise the dead (Acts 9:40) are, no longer in existence. The fact that such are not in existence, does not reflect on the essential character of God, but rather indicates that the purpose which they served is now past.

6. Today most claimants to Spirit powers stress the gifts of tongues and healing, yet the Apostle says "And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondly prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healing, helps, governments, diversities of tongues". (1 Cor. 12:28). Why the importance today on the gifts of less importance? It is significant that the gift of prophecy is seldom claimed today by Pentecostals, yet it is the most amenable to the test of truth or falsity. Its greater value is set forth by Paul, in its great benefit and profit in the development of faith and character. This would lead one to expect that if any gifts were present, this one would be.
7. A reasonable case can be made from the testimonies of Justin Martyr, Irenaeus, Origen, Chrysostom, and Augustine that in the post-apostolic era (100-600) speaking in tongues ceased.¹⁰

MARK 16:17,18 "And these signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; They shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover."

PROBLEM: These verses are quoted by Pentecostals in support of their belief that the Holy Spirit gifts operate within the Pentecostal movement. Testimonies of "divine" healing are cited in proof of the existence of the gift of healing. Individuals said to possess this gift are sometimes referred to as "faith healers".

SOLUTION:

1. God has, and still can, if He wishes, answer the prayer of faith to heal the sick. What is not evidenced, is proof that Spirit-gift possession (e.g., the gift of healing, 1 Cor. 12:9) is available today. The Mark 16 passage states that the following signs would accompany those who believed:
 - demons could be cast out
 - believers could speak with new tongues
 - serpents could be taken up without hurt
 - deadly poison could be taken without hurt
 - hands could be laid on the sick for their recoveryWhat is required is proof that the gift of healing can be demonstrated by these signs.
2. To deny the present day existence of the Spirit gifts is not to deny that cures are effected at faith-healing meetings. Given sufficient mental excitement "miraculous" cures are not impossible, but this is not evidence of God's intervention, but rather to the "faith" of the patient. Roman Catholics and Pentecostals, with mutually antagonistic teaching, both claim miraculous healings,¹ and both have admitted that some "miracles" claimed divine are, in effect, not so. This is a significant admission. Recourse to divine healing is not needed to explain all claims.²

¹⁰ An excellent historical survey of "speaking in tongues" is developed in Robert Gromacki, The Modern Tongues Movement, (Philadelphia: Presbyterian and Reformed Publishing Co., 1967), pp. 50-51.

3. Pentecostals often catalogue testimonies of paralytics, the deaf, and drunkards as indications of the curative powers of the "Holy Ghost". The following comments by a medical doctor indicate that such examples are not proof of divine healing:

"Diseases may be divided into three classes: first, those which are entirely mental; second, those which are physical but tend to cure themselves; third, those which are physical but do not tend to cure themselves. Eighty to ninety per cent of all diseases belong to the first two classes. A man with a paralysis of his leg of mental origin, [or] with a head cold . . . gets well under the attention of a faith healer, a chiropractor, or even by taking patent medicine, and all but the paralytic will get well if nothing were done. On the other hand, such diseases as diphtheria, malaria, syphilis, cancer, diabetes, tuberculosis, and pernicious anemia do not get well with faith healing, chiropractic treatment, or psychoanalysis . . . Under the ministrations of a faith healer these patients would die. But even if they did, the faith healer's result would be still 80 or 90 per cent effective."³

"None of the parts of the body is superlative or independent; they are all dependent and correlated. Each organ of the body when disordered manifests a characteristic disturbance, and this disturbance involves all of the parts of the body which are dependent upon the functioning of that organ . . . ⁴ The basis of faith healing lies in the

1 The curative powers of relics has been exploited to great profits by the Roman Church. The sick, who were benefited at the church, made payments, and in some cases great fortunes were amassed from these donations. Relics have included the following: wood of the "cross" (if the pieces scattered throughout Europe were collected there would be enough wood for many crosses); tears of the Saviour, the Virgin Mary, and Peter (allegedly brought back from the Holy Land centuries after their deaths); the blood of Jesus; one monastery in Jerusalem even offered for sale what was represented, to the gullible, as the finger of the "Holy Ghost", and another monastery claimed to have a feather from the same source; in the twelfth century the shrine at Cologne claimed to have obtained the skulls of the wise men of the East. See Howard W. Haggard, M.D., Devils, Drugs, & Doctors: The Story of the Science of Healing from Medicine-Man to Doctor, (New York: Pocket Books, Inc., 1959), pp. 313-314. Relics have been effective in "curing" certain ailments even when it is known that the relics are counterfeit. For example the bones of "St." Rosalia, preserved in Palermo, Italy (a source of income for the Roman Church and town) have for many centuries been found effective in curing diseases; but when examined by an anatomist, turned out to be goat bones. See Bertrand Russell, Religion and Science, (Oxford: University Press, 1947), p. 83.

2 Many members of Pentecostal Churches claim "divine healing", but almost always these are obscure and self-diagnosed complaints such as "pains in the back", "stomach trouble" and "headaches". Others, often with better defined illnesses, ascribe their cure to divine intervention, even though they have received medical treatment, or even been in hospital. Large numbers of congregations offer testimony to confirm that God answers the prayers of the sick, but in practice they do not hesitate to seek medical care when seriously troubled.

3 Howard W. Haggard, M.D., Devils, Drugs & Doctors: The Story of the Science of Healing from Medicine-Man to Doctor, (Pocket Books, Inc., New York, 1959), p. 305, 306.

Ibid., p. 304.

influence of the mind on the activity of the body. The mind is a function of the brain and through the brain is in constant communication with every part of the body by means of the nerves which extend to and from the brain. The activity of every organ of the body is controlled by the nervous system.”⁵

“Paralysis of a limb and lameness are common symptoms of hysteria; the limb may be drawn up in a deforming contraction, or palsied. Persons with hysteria may become mute or blind, their sensations may be perverted, they may vomit obstinately or lose their appetite and waste away. Hysterical women may believe themselves pregnant and show all the signs of that condition, suppression of the menses, colostrum in the breast, morning sickness, and swelling of the abdomen. This may continue until the time for delivery has long passed and their minds have turned to some other manifestation.”⁶

“Not all men and women who have responded to faith cures are hysterical. There are numerous cases of bedridden invalids crippled by rheumatism and unable for years to put a foot on the ground, who nevertheless under some great stress, such as the house burning down around them, have shown remarkable returns of activity. The rheumatism which had crippled them had been real in the beginning, but during a long illness they had got into the habit of believing themselves crippled even after they were well. They had lost confidence in themselves.”⁷

4. Apparently “miraculous” results have been reported without the patients affirming belief in God. Some warts may be “charmed away” by pretending to pass under a ray, or simply suggesting to the patient that they will go away.
5. Even in the time of the apostles, some who failed to understand the truth in Jesus Christ, did not hesitate to falsely claim miraculous powers in his name: “Then certain of the vagabond Jews, exorcists, took upon them to call over them which had evil spirits the name of the Lord Jesus, saying, We adjure you by Jesus whom Paul preacheth.” (Acts 19:13). Warning that such would be the case is explicitly indicated in the following references:
 - a) Jesus—“Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity.” (Matt. 7:21-23).
—“For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect.” (Matt. 24:24).
 - b) John—“Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world.” (1 Jn. 4:1).

⁵ Ibid., p. 296.

⁶ Ibid., p. 300.

⁷ Ibid., p. 301.

- c) Paul—"This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come . . . But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived." (2 Tim. 3:1,13).⁸
6. Modern "faith-healers" cannot tell which of their patients will be healed and which will not. The miracles of the Lord Jesus and the Apostles were not apparently subject to any such doubt.
7. This passage in Mark indicates that God confirmed the Word with signs. Today, the Word is complete and has been such since the completion of the New Testament. Spirit gifts such as healing have, therefore, been withdrawn, as Paul said they would (1 Cor. 13:8-12), and now the believer walks by faith in the perfected Word of God.

I COR. 14:2 "For he that speaketh in an unknown tongue speaketh not unto men, but unto God: for no man understandeth him; howbeit in the spirit he speaketh mysteries."

PROBLEM: Pentecostal "speaking in tongues"¹ is unintelligible speech uttered in a state of religious fervour. The justification for this practice is sought in this passage.

SOLUTION:

1. The tongues referred to in this passage are not unknown. The word "unknown" is not in the Greek text and is deleted in the R.S.V. (This is also indicated by the printing of "unknown" in italics in the A.V.).
2. Pentecostals sometimes argue that since "glossa" (the Greek word for speech) is used in this verse, rather than "dialektos" (the Greek word for language), that unintelligible utterance is intended. This argument is shown to be invalid by the following:
 - a) "Glossa" and "dialektos" are used interchangeably in Scripture. In Acts 2:4 the word for "tongues" is "glossa" but in verse 8 the word for "tongues" is "dialektos" (translated "language", R.S.V.).
 - b) "Glossa" refers to foreign languages in the following passages: Rev. 5:9; 7:9; 10:11; 11:9; 13:7; 14:6; 17:15. "Glossa" also means intelligible speech in the following passages: Rom. 14:11; Phil. 2:11; 1 Jn. 3:18.
3. When the disciples spoke in tongues as recorded in Acts 2, fifteen languages or dialects were spoken. Every man heard them speak in his own language. (Acts 2:7,8). Galilean fishermen could speak the language of the Elamites although the language had never been the subject of study. But Pentecostal meetings are characterized by unintelligible speech, not foreign languages which have been unlearned.

⁸ Some rather sensational claims are made in Pentecostal publications. In an article, "They Let God Be Their Dentist!" A. A. Allen reports the testimonies of six persons who allegedly had their teeth miraculously filled: "God filled four teeth for Beulah Clark as she sat in the audience", the article states, and "James drove all night in faith that God would do the work. He did! God filled three teeth." Miracle Magazine, 14, No. 9, (June, 1969), p. 6. Only in small print in Allen's Miracle Magazine can a reader find the careful demurrer: ". . . A. A. Allen Revivals, Inc. and 'Miracle Magazine' assume no legal responsibility for the veracity of any such report, nor do they accept responsibility as to the degree of permanency of reported healings, deliverances or miracles . . ." Ibid., p. 3.

¹ More technically the phenomenon is referred to as "glossalalia" from "glossa"—tongue, and "lalia"—to speak or talk with.

4. In 1 Cor. 14, the following differences from Pentecostal practice are noteworthy:

- a) Pentecostal women usually predominate in unintelligible utterances² and even preach during public assemblies.³ But Paul says, "Let your women keep silence in the churches: for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law. And if they will learn any thing, let them ask their husbands at home: for it is a shame for women to speak in the church." (1 Cor. 14:34,35).⁴
- b) Pentecostal meetings frequently have more than one person uttering unintelligible sounds at the same time, but Paul instructs that all things should be done "decently and in order" (1 Cor. 14:40), and that "if any man speak in an unknown tongue, let it be by two, or at the most by three, and that by course . . ." (1 Cor. 14:27).
- c) Pentecostals seldom have any "interpreter" of the unintelligible speech, yet Paul says, "let one interpret. But if there be no interpreter, let him keep silence in the church . . ." (1 Cor. 14:27,28).
- d) Many Pentecostals consider themselves compelled by the Holy Spirit to "speak in tongues"⁵ yet Paul says, "the spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets." (1 Cor. 14:32).

It is also appropriate to cite Paul's instruction to the Corinthians: "If any man think himself to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things that I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord." (1 Cor. 14:37).

5. It is also relevant to emphasize that "glossalalia" occurs among those who practice voodoo in Haiti. It is not, therefore, a phenomenon peculiarly "Christian". This indicates that explanations other than God's Holy Spirit can account for "glossalalia". It is also noteworthy that "glossalalia" is now being practised by other denominations in-

² Many writers have noted this. Bryan Wilson at one meeting counted twenty-five instances of glossalalia in one assembly, of which twenty-four were women. He noted that usually three-quarters of the audience consisted of women, and never much less than two-thirds. "In Pentecostal meetings, women tend to give vent to pent-up feelings—in tears, heavy breathing, groans, utterances of joy and rapture, and, of course, tongues." See Bryan Wilson, Sects and Society: A Sociological Study of Three Religious Groups in Britain, (London: William Heinemann Ltd.), pp. 302-303.

³ For example, Allen commenting on his "miracle revival" in Naga City, in Southern Luzon states: "Sister Rogers preached a salvation message to a fine crowd each afternoon . . ." See Miracle Magazine, 14, No. 9, (June, 1969), p. 17.

⁴ Pentecostal preachers tend to disregard the Apostle's instruction by a casual dismissal on the grounds that the church must "move with the times". It is noteworthy that the Apostle's reason for this instruction is not founded on culturally relative grounds, but rather on the fall of Eve. (Cf. 1 Tim. 2:11-15).

⁵ In recent years within the Elim movement there is an opposite point of view—that tongues may deter possible converts. Speakers in tongues at revival meetings have often been silenced. A. A. Allen comments: "It's little wonder that many Pentecostal preachers today will not have speaking in tongues in their main assembly and under their tent. Too much of it sounds too downright silly, too obvious that it isn't genuine. It isn't real." Miracle Magazine, 14, No. 9, (June, 1969), p. 11.

cluding Anglicans and Roman Catholics.⁶ Do Pentecostals believe these religious bodies hold the truth of the Gospel? This point is especially forceful when it is recognized that speaking in tongues is understood by Pentecostals as an initial sign of Holy Spirit baptism.

ROM. 5:6 "For when we were yet without strength, in due time Christ died for the ungodly."

ROM. 5:8 "But God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us."

PROBLEM: These verses are understood by Pentecostals (and others, such as Evangelicals) to mean that Christ paid Adam's debt by dying instead of the sinner. Therefore, salvation is offered by grace alone.

SOLUTION:

1. In the statement, "Christ died for us", "for" does not mean "instead of". See its usage in 1 Cor. 15:3; Gal. 1:4; Heb. 10:12; Heb. 7:25.
2. If Jesus died as a substitute for me, paying my penalty, then why should I die? Why is it that mankind die the same today as before this substitution took place? If I am sentenced to jail and a substitute takes my place instead of me, I do not then go to jail with him!
3. If the sacrifice of Christ were a substitute, how can there be real forgiveness with God. A creditor who releases the debtor because someone not his debtor pays the latter's debt, surely cannot claim to have forgiven the debt! If the debt is paid, then there is no longer need for forgiveness.
4. If Christ's death were a substitution, instead of the sinner, then the redeeming power lay in his death and not in his resurrection, yet Paul declares: Jesus Christ "... was delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification." (Rom. 4:25). Cf. also 1 Cor. 15:17—"If Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins."
5. The Scriptural language is that Christ died that he "should taste death for every man." (Heb. 2:9). This is the language of representation exhibited throughout the types of the Law of Moses, not substitution.

⁶ That the gifts can be abused or imitated is acknowledged by some Pentecostals. A. A. Allen comments as follows: "I wouldn't give you two cents for what you call a Holy Ghost experience, if the only action you got was a few minutes of stammering lips: 'Bla, bla, bib, gah, gah, goo!' My children said that when they were six months old! I have seen people do that when they were drunk . . . I have seen many people whom I believe were merely 'trained' by those who prayed with them, to seemingly receive the Holy Ghost . . . I believe some Pentecostal denominations are full of people who have never received the baptism in the Holy Ghost experience. They have just been patted on the back and shook on the chin, and told what to say, until they couldn't say anything but, 'Bla, bla, gag, gag, goo!' And then somebody said, 'You've got it!' The only action they got was when somebody shook them under the chin!" "The Book of Acts is Holy Ghost in Action", Miracle Magazine, 14, No. 9, (June, 1969), p. 10.

"JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES"

PRELIMINARY POINTS

In discussions with J.W.'s a familiar pattern can be observed. What begins as a Biblical discussion on a point of doctrine, soon results in the J.W. sorting through his book bag for the appropriate Watchtower publication, which then serves as a prop throughout the remainder of the discussion. The pattern is indicative of the reliance placed on the Watchtower organization by the lay J.W. (in many respects comparable to the regard a Roman Catholic has for the hierarchy of his church.) The following factors contribute to the trust a lay J.W. has in the Watchtower organization (and also suggest ways in which the organization is able to maintain its totalitarian-like control):

- a) The organizational structure in Brooklyn, New York, is headed by those who claim to be among the 144,000 destined to reign in heaven at the instant of death.¹ These "anointed sheep" of the "remnant class" are said to be led by "Jehovah's spirit" to new "revealed" truths. These new truths are indoctrinated into J.W.'s throughout the world by mid-week classes in Kingdom Halls. Watchtower articles are studied in repetitious question and answer sessions similar to those conducted so effectively by the Jesuits of the Roman Church.²
- b) Prophecies especially in Revelation are interpreted by the Watchtower as being fulfilled in the development of the organization. These interpretations are "revealed" to lay J.W.'s through the Watchtower magazine and other books.

For example, the seven vials of Revelation 16 are related to seven Watchtower proclamations issued (1922-1928)³, and the "times, times, and a half" (Dan. 12:7) is applied to the disruption of Watchtower activities with the sentencing of the president and other mem-

1 Judge Rutherford's removal as vice-president in 1945 is stated in a J. W. publication to be for this reason: "[His] resignation was not an evasion of responsibilities, but was rather an effort to comply with what appeared to be the Lord's will, namely, that all the members of the directorate and the officers be of the anointed remnant [144,000]. His hope was to be one of the 'other sheep'." Jehovah's Witnesses in the Divine Purpose, (Brooklyn, N. Y.: Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, 1959), p. 197. As of Jan. 1, 1969, 10,619 J.W.'s now living claim to be among the 144,000. The Watchtower, (Jan. 1969), No. 1, Vol. XC, p. 25.

2 In the "Plan of Studies" of the Jesuits, "every main issue was settled, every procedure was already outlined . . . The Jesuit teachers depended in no small measure for their effectiveness upon constant repetition." Luella Cole, A History of Education, (New York: Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 1961), pp. 317, 322.

3 "Babylon The Great Has Fallen!" God's Kingdom Rules! (Brooklyn, N.Y.: Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of N.Y., Inc., 1963), pp. 530-557. Another example further illustrates this point: Dan. 8:14—(the cleansing of the sanctuary) is interpreted to refer to the cleansing of the Watchtower organization when it changed from democratic election of officials to selection and confirmation by the society's executive or manager. A Watchtower publication comments as follows: "The announcement in the Watch Tower magazine of October 15, 1932, at the exact end of the time period mentioned in Daniel's prophecy, was the official notification made by Jehovah through his visible channel of communication that his sanctuary [i.e., the Watchtower organization] had been cleansed and had been restored to its rightful state as regards the elimination of this democratic procedure in electing elders." Jehovah's Witnesses in the Divine Purpose, (Brooklyn, N.Y.: Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, 1959), p. 127.

bers of the Watchtower organization to eighty years imprisonment.⁴ Prophecy, therefore, gives sanction to the organization and serves to legitimize its activities.

- c) To the lay J.W. the Watchtower organization is the scholarship centre. The library in the Gilead ministry training school, the numerous books released at past conventions, and the issuing of the New World Translation of the Holy Scriptures, provide guarantees to the lay J.W. that Watchtower materials have the backing of sound research.
- d) Watchtower publications give prominence to persecutions suffered by J.W.'s in the war years. Although J.W.'s have fought many legal cases in the courts, persecutions are interpreted by Watchtower writers to indicate the self-sacrificing character of J.W. preaching and the divine nature of the work. Did not Jesus say that his followers would be persecuted?⁵ Stress is also placed on the numbers attending conventions, number of books printed, and number of lands in which J.W.'s are working. The effect of which is to confirm to the J.W. that the Watchtower must be a theocracy.⁶

SUGGESTED STRATEGY

1. In view of the influence of the Watchtower organization, how can the Christadelphian expect to make a Christadelphian convert of the J.W. who calls at the door? It would seem that a "psychological battle" must first be won. The J.W. at the door, or in the home study, considers himself to "have the truth" and, therefore, assumes the teacher role and the householder—the student. At some point the J.W. must appreciate that with the Christadelphian the role is not that of a teacher-pupil relationship. The J.W. must also become the listener—the learner (which is not a relationship for which J.W.'s are particularly well-known).
2. How is this to be done? The Jew in the divine purpose affords an advantageous position from which the Christadelphian can assume the offensive. This topic has the following advantages:
 - a) It affords a topic of mutual interest. J.W.'s have challenged Christadelphian teaching on this subject in their Watchtower magazine, August, 1962, "Christadelphianism—Of God or Men?"⁷ In this article, the Christadelphian teaching concerning the Jew in the divine purpose is misunderstood. Correction of the Watchtower mistakes is a useful way to chip away at the scholarship image the J.W. has of Brooklyn publications.
 - b) The J.W. approach to Biblical interpretation can also be chal-

4 "Your Will Be Done On Earth", (Brooklyn, N.Y.: Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of N.Y., Inc., 1958), pp. 330, 331.

5 See for example, "Babylon The Great Has Fallen! God's Kingdom Rules", (Brooklyn, N.Y.: Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, 1963), p. 550; Jehovah's Witnesses in the Divine Purpose, (Brooklyn, N.Y.: Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, 1959), pp. 166-174, 186, 192.

6 This point is illustrated in the following J.W. publication: "In the thirty-three years from 1919 to 1952 inclusive, Jehovah's witnesses distributed more than half a billion bound books and booklets, hundreds of millions of oral testimonies, in over 90 languages. Only by God's spirit and power could this witness have been given in the face of world-wide opposition and persecution; and the witness still continues." "Let God Be True", (Brooklyn, N.Y.: Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, 1952), pp. 200-201.

7 Great Lakes A.S.K. (Advancement of Scriptural Knowledge), Box 221, Weston Ontario, Canada, published a 32 page reply to this article.

lenged. J.W.'s "spiritualize" passages in Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel concerning the Jew to make them refer to the Watchtower organization. It requires plain stating that a passage should be read literally, unless convincing evidence to the contrary can be produced. Otherwise, a passage can be read to suit nearly any presupposition. Little can be achieved until this groundwork is established.

- c) Not being infallible, a Bible student may change his mind regarding an interpretation of an obscure verse or a highly symbolic prophecy, but when change of mind involves hundreds of passages, as it does with the Jew, (J.W.'s once taught the literal restoration of the Jew to Palestine)⁸ how can one claim to be Jehovah's witness? Can one witness contradict the statements of later witnesses on such a basic biblical theme, and yet both be Jehovah's witnesses?
- d) A discussion of the Jew leads readily into a discussion of the return of Christ. The Jewish return to Palestine, then becomes evidence for the future visible return of Christ (implying, of course, that he did not return invisibly in 1914, as J.W.'s assert).
3. The Christadelphian can set a worthy example by knowing his Bible. The ability of Christadelphians to flip to the desired passage on the spot (without taking recourse to other books) is cultivated by frequent use of the Word. This has impressed many J.W.'s, some of whom have responded to subsequent Christadelphian instruction. Nothing imparts confidence in discussion like knowing where one intends to go, and knowing not only the strength of one's evidence, but that it can be produced when needed.
4. Once the initial "psychological battle" has been won, topics can be selected for subsequent discussion. The fruitfulness of these discussions is often related to the extent to which only one area at a time is discussed. Discipline is required not to be led off the issue by subsidiary error drawn in by the J.W. in support of the proposition under consideration. This appears to be especially true of the "pre-existence" of Christ and the devil.

ISA. 43:10 "Ye are my witnesses, saith the LORD, and my servant whom I have chosen . . ."

PROBLEM: J.W.'s interpret this prophecy in a spiritual sense to apply to the Watchtower organization. In a convention of J.W.'s at Columbus, Ohio, 1931, a resolution was proposed and passed in which the following was stated:

" . . . to make known to the people that Jehovah is the true and almighty God; therefore we joyfully embrace and take the name which the mouth of the Lord God has named, and we desire to be known as and called by the name, to wit, 'Jehovah's witnesses'.—Isa. 43:10-12; 62:2; Rev. 12:17."¹

⁸ See explanation of wrested scripture on Matt. 23:37,38.

¹ Jehovah's Witnesses in the Divine Purpose, (Brooklyn, N.Y.: Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of N. Y., 1959), pp. 125-126.

SOLUTION:

1. The witnesses of this passage cannot be the self-styled "Jehovah's Witnesses" for the following reasons:
 - a) The witnesses of this passage are ransomed by the price of Egypt, Ethiopia and Seba. (vs. 3). J.W.'s claim to be ransomed by the body of Christ.
 - b) The witnesses of this passage are condemned: "Yet you did not call upon me, O Jacob; but you have been weary of me, O Israel! . . . But you have burdened me with your sins, you have wearied me with your iniquities." (Isa. 43:22,24,R.S.V.). When have J.W.'s merited this description?
 - c) The witnesses of this passage are condemned for not bringing sheep for sacrifice or honouring God in their sacrifices. (vs. 23). This verse cannot apply to J.W.'s since they have never offered animal sacrifices.
2. The witnesses of this passage are unwilling witnesses. They witness to the truth of God's prophetic Word (Isa. 41:22,23) in their persecution, scattering and regathering. (Deut. 28; Lev. 26; Jer. 32:37). But the J.W.'s claim that one who is not a willing witness is "not with the organization".²
3. Similarly the "new name" of Isa. 62 is "Hephzibah" (Isa. 62:4) and not "Jehovah's witnesses". It is the name of a city—Jerusalem (vs. 7), not an organization.
4. The following is a useful piece of information to be found in the writing of John Thomas in Elpis Israel:

"The pre-adventual colonization of Palestine will be on purely political principles; and the Jewish colonists will return thither in unbelief of the Messiahship of Jesus, and of the truth as it is in him."

"I know not whether the men who at present contrive the foreign policy of Britain, entertain the idea of assuming the sovereignty of the Holy Land, and of promoting its colonization by the Jews; their present intentions, however, are of no importance one way or the other; because they will be compelled, by events soon to happen, to do what, under existing circumstances, heaven and earth combined could not move them to attempt."³

The fact that this was written 100 years before the establishment of the State of Israel, indicates the part Israel has played in God's divine challenge in Isa. 41:22-23. The "spiritualizations" of the J.W.'s nullify the position of the real witnesses in this challenge. Surely one can hardly use language too strong in condemnation of this Scripture whittling practise.

MATT. 23:37,38 "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem . . . Behold, your house is left unto you desolate."

PROBLEM: This passage is referred to by J.W.'s as the "irrevocable

² Let God Be True, (Brooklyn, N.Y.: Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society, 1946), p. 237.

³ John Thomas, Elpis Israel, (London: Maran-atha Press, 1858), pp. 395- 396. (pp. 441, 442—1958 ed.). The first edition was printed 1848-1849.

divorce decree”¹ and is coupled with such passages as Rom. 2:29 to justify the application of the prophecies of restoration of natural Israel in a “spiritual sense”.

SOLUTION:

1. “Irrevocable” suggests the exact opposite to what this passage in Matthew affirms. The passage is not an “irrevocable divorce decree”, but a conditional statement: “Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord”. (vs. 39, cf. Ezek. 21:27).
2. This passage has a parallel in Jer. 3:8, in which God gives Israel a bill of divorcement saying: “I had put her away, and given her a bill of divorce . . . ” But God offers mercy to her: “I will not cause mine anger to fall upon you: for I am merciful, saith the LORD, and I will not keep anger for ever.” (Jer. 3:12, cf. vs. 13-15). God has not cast away his people. (Rom. 11:1). The house of Israel will say, “Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the LORD” (Matt. 23:39), since “blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in.” (Rom. 11:25, cf. Isa. 59:20,21; Heb. 8:8; Jer. 31:31-34).
3. Not being infallible, a Bible student may change his mind over the years regarding an interpretation of obscure or highly symbolic passages of Scripture, but J.W.’s change fundamental doctrines. This is an important point. The J.W. must afford an explanation as to how his organization can claim to be a theocracy of absolute truth and yet revise its teaching on a Gospel theme which affects one’s understanding of hundreds of passages in many Biblical books in both Old and New Testaments.

4. The contradictory teaching of J.W.’s:

What earlier J.W.’s taught

“We find statements by both prophets and apostles which clearly indicate that in the times of restitution, Israel as a nation will be the first among the nations to come into harmony with the new order of things; that the earthly Jerusalem will be rebuilt upon her own heaps, and that their polity will be restored as in the beginning under princes or judges. (Isa. 1:26; Psa. 45:16; Jer. 30:18).”³ The Divine Plan of the Ages, p. 294.

“Israel is now [1921] being regathered, and is rebuilding Palestine exactly as foretold.” The Harp of God, p. 256.⁴

What later J.W.’s teach

“The facts and prophecies prove that natural Jews will never again be a chosen regathered people.” Let God Be True, p. 208.² (1946 edition)

“Hence the regathering of unbelieving natural Israelites to Palestine cannot be construed as fulfillment of prophecies.” Let God Be True, p. 218. (1952 edition).⁵

1 The Watchtower, (Aug. 1, 1962), No. 15, Vol. LXXXVIII, p. 475.

2 “Let God Be True, (Brooklyn, N.Y.: Watch Tower Bible & Tract Society, 1946), p. 208.

3 Charles T. Russell, A Helping Hand: Millennial Dawn Vol. 1. The Divine Plan of the Ages, (Pennsylvania: Watch Tower Bible & Tract Society, 1886), p. 294. This publication is still referred to in Watchtower articles. See The Watchtower, (March 1, 1965). No. 5, Vol. LXXXVI, p. 155.

4 J. F. Rutherford, The Harp of God, (Brooklyn, N.Y.: Watch Tower Bible & Tract Society, 1921), p. 256.

5 “Let God Be True”, (Brooklyn, N.Y.: Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, Inc., 1952), p. 218.

5. It is the claim of J.W.'s that "preaching in harmony with God's revealed Word" is that which "proves [one] to be a minister".⁶ Who then does one take to be the minister, the earlier writers or modern day J.W.'s?
6. Can one "true witness" prove wrong the "clear indications" postulated by another "true witness", and yet both remain "faithful and true witnesses"?
7. Fleshly descent constitutes a Jew, a subject of the kingdom, but confers on him no right to sit and rule on the thrones of the House of David. All Jews and Gentiles who become Jews "inwardly" (Rom. 2:29; 9:6-8) will reign as associate kings with the Messiah. (2 Tim. 2:12; Rev. 5:10). The J.W.'s confuse Israel's national position as subjects in the kingdom with the position of the saints who will be rulers.

REV. 7:4 "And I heard the number of them which were sealed: and there were sealed an hundred and forty and four thousand of all the tribes of the children of Israel."

REV. 14:3 "And they sung as it were a new song before the throne, and before the four beasts, and the elders: and no man could learn that song but the hundred and forty and four thousand, which were redeemed from the earth."

PROBLEM: These verses are cited by J.W.'s to support the doctrine that most of the 144,000 are now reigning over the earth. This "little flock" of the "anointed remnant", it is claimed, commenced its rule in 1914. Members of this group are said to depart to heaven at the instant of death. As of Jan. 1969, 10,619 J.W.'s claim to be living members of this group.¹ A J.W. publication comments as follows:

"Those who are called by God to share in such heavenly service are few in number. As Jesus said, they are a 'little flock'. Years after his return to heaven, Jesus made known the exact number in a vision to the apostle John . . . So the 144,000 are persons who die on earth as humans and are resurrected [at the instant of death] to heavenly life as spirit creatures, as Jesus was . . . Members of the 'little flock' know that God has called them to heavenly life. How? By means of the operation of God's spirit, which implants and cultivates in them the hope of heavenly life."²

SOLUTION:

1. It is usually undesirable to begin by saying, "the book of Revelation is primarily symbolic, therefore, the 144,000 is a symbolic number". Consistency would demand that the 1,000 years of Rev. 20:4, 6 should also be taken figuratively.

⁶ Ibid. p. 224.

¹ "The Watchtower", (Jan. 1969), No. 1, Vol. XC, p. 25.

² The Truth that Leads to Eternal Life, (Brooklyn, N.Y.: Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, Inc., 1968), pp. 77, 78.

2. But, consistency also demands that the J.W. settle for either a literal or figurative interpretation, but not an indiscriminate mixing of the two to suit a presupposition. If the J.W. insists on a literal 144,000, then all J.W.'s are excluded from this group because literally the 144,000 only come from the tribes of Israel!³ If, on the other hand, the J.W. takes the stand that the passage is figurative because the tribes are symbolic, then likewise the 144,000 is a symbolic, and not a literal number.
3. The following evidence from Rev. 14 indicates that the number 144,000 is symbolic, and not literal:
 - a) John "looked", vs. 1, but could he see a Lamb on Mount Zion from 1,000 miles away on the Aegean Island? (John was on the Island of Patmos, Rev. 1:9).
 - b) Did he really hear the harper's playing over the same distance?
 - c) Were these saints literally virgins? If so, are the first fruits only bachelors and spinsters? (vs. 4).
4. It is usually inconclusive to assert that the 144,000 and the great multitude are two presentations of the same redeemed group. There appears to be too much evidence that two different groups are intended. Although it is sometimes stressed that John "heard" the number and "saw" the great multitude, this in itself does not establish that he saw and heard the same group. The two groups have these significantly differing descriptions:

144,000

- John heard the number
- precisely numbered as 144,000
- sealed out of the tribes of Israel (7:4)

Great Multitude

- John saw the great multitude
- innumerable (7:9)
- from all nations, kindreds and people (7:9)
- have palms in hands

5. A more fruitful approach is to trace the allusions in Scripture. It is suggested that to do so establishes the 144,000 as the first fruits—i.e., those faithful at Christ's return, and the great multitude, as the final in-gathering of the saints at the end of the millennial age.
6. The following is the evidence for identifying the 144,000 with the saints at Christ's return:
 - a) The 144,000 are said to be "firstfruits" (Rev. 14:4). Two New Testament passages identify the first fruits:

James 1:18—"Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth, that we should be a kind of firstfruits of his creatures."

1 Cor. 15:22,23—" . . . in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order: Christ the firstfruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming."
 - b) The word first fruits is taken from the Old Testament feasts in Lev. 23. Using the above two quotations to identify the types, the following pattern becomes apparent:

—The sheaf of the first fruits represents Christ in type. (Lev. 23:10). (Notice in 1 Cor. 15:23 that both Christ and the saints are first fruits, following the similar Old Testament usage in Lev. 23:17 where the two wave loaves are also "first fruits").

³ It should be noted that the tribes of Dan and Ephraim are omitted and the tribes of Levi and Joseph included, which, in itself, suggests a symbolic interpretation of the 144,000.

- The two wave loaves signify the Jew and Gentile composition of the firstfruits. (Lev. 23:17; cf. Eph. 2:12-16).
- “The firstfruits unto the LORD” are the saints at Christ’s coming. (Lev. 23:17).
7. The evidence that the great multitude, which no man can number, represents the final in-gathering of the saints at the end of the millennial age comes from the following:
 - a) The great multitude have palms in their hands. (Rev. 7:9). This is another allusion to Lev. 23. Following the pattern of the types, the great multitude represents the final in-gathering of the fruit and the carrying of palms occurs at the end of the harvest. (Lev. 23:40).
 - b) 1 Cor. 15:23-28 supports this interpretation in-so-far as the first fruits of the harvest are set out in verse 23. The final in-gathering is described from vs. 24-28—“then cometh the end.”
 8. The symbolic 144,000 reign on the earth (Rev. 5:10)⁴ for a period designated as a 1,000 years. (Rev. 20:6). Nowhere is their reigning either stated or implied to be in heaven. They will have power over the nations (Rev. 2:26,27), and since they follow the Lamb “whithersoever he goeth” (Rev. 14:4), they will be reigning on the earth—this is where the Lamb will be. As Yahweh’s accredited representative “his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives which is before Jerusalem on the east . . .” (Zech. 14:4). He will then sit on David’s throne in Jerusalem, the city of the great King. (Lk. 1:32,33; Matt. 5:35).
 9. The import of the J.W. teaching on the 144,000 becomes apparent once it is realized that 10,619 J.W.’s expect to obtain immortality at the instant of death in heaven, whereas worthies commended for their faith and works, such as Abraham and David, are relegated to second-rate positions of everlasting life on the earth without immortality.⁵ It is expressly stated that the worthies catalogued in Hebrews 11 died in faith not having received the promises, “God having provided some better thing for us [New Testament believers], that they without us should not be made perfect”. (Heb. 11:13,39,40). Yet, according to J.W. teaching, Abraham sleeps unconsciously in his grave awaiting resurrection to everlasting (not eternal) life on the earth, while thousands of J.W.’s since 1914, said to belong to the 144,000, have gone straight to heaven at the instant of death.

⁴ This point is observed in the J.W. New World Translation of the Holy Scriptures which translates this verse “. . . and they will rule as kings over the earth.” The Greek word “epi” translated “over” in this text is translated “on the earth” or “upon the earth” in six other places, (Rev. 6:10; 7:1; 11:10; 13:14; 14:6; 17:8, A.V.), but not “over the earth” so as to suggest remote control. The Emphatic Diaglott, a J.W. publication, renders the text “on the earth”.

⁵ It is sometimes argued by J.W.’s that the kingdom of heaven is for the 144,000, whereas the kingdom of God is for the great multitude on the earth. But Abraham will be in both the kingdom of heaven and kingdom of God, (Matt. 8:11, cf. Lk. 13:28), thereby indicating that the terms are used interchangeably and that they are not intended to convey the idea of a “heavenly” and an “earthly” reward.

MATT. 24:3 “ . . . what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?”

PROBLEM: J.W.'s argue that the Greek word “parousia” means “presence”, hence the return of Christ will only be noticed by those who see him with the eyes of discernment. This is said to have taken place in 1914. Literally, it is argued, Jesus will never set foot on the earth.

SOLUTION:

1. “Parousia” according to Greek authorities can mean presence,¹ but this does not necessarily imply an invisible presence. For example, the coming of Titus (2 Cor. 7:6,7); the coming of Stephanas (1 Cor. 16:17); and the coming of Paul (Phil. 1:26) requires the personal presence of these persons. Similarly, the “bodily presence” (Greek: parousia) of Paul in 2 Cor. 10:10 is obviously what the record implies—a literal visible presence.
2. Jesus warned against false prophets who would teach an “invisible return”. Jesus said: “Wherefore if they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in . . . the secret chambers; believe it not. For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.” (Matt. 24:26,27). This verse is directly opposed to a view which states Christ returned to rule invisibly in 1914 (i.e., he's in the secret chambers). Nor does one ordinarily associate lightning, which can be seen across the sky, with an event which is unseen.
3. Jesus will return literally and visibly to the earth. This is proven by the following evidence:
 - a) “And his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east, and the mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst . . . ”² (Zech. 14:4). This passage in itself is conclusive. Christ will be the name-bearer of Yahweh (vs. 3, LORD=Heb. Yahweh) as was the angel of the LORD. (Exod. 23:20,21). Christ will literally return to the mountain from which he left. (Acts 1:10,11). This event will fulfill the promise of the two men which said, “this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven.”³ (Acts 1:11). He ascended literally and visibly until a cloud received him out of sight from the disciples. This is the “like manner” in which he will return.
 - b) The inhabitants of Jerusalem and the house of David will look upon “me whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for him, as one mourneth for his only son, and shall be in bitterness for him, as one that is in bitterness for his firstborn." (Zech. 12:10; cf. 13:6). How is this to take place unless Christ returns personally to the earth? (cf. Rev. 1:7—"and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him: and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him.")

¹ The Greek word “parousia” means: “A being alongside, presence”. Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, London: Lutterworth Press, 1965).

² J.W.'s attempt to spiritualize the mountain. It only requires one to ask the spiritual intent of the mountain cleaving in two and the formation of the plain from Geba to Rimmon (Zech. 14:10) to indicate that this passage is not figurative.

³ J.W.'s sometimes reply by stating that the “like manner” refers to the fact that only a few saw him ascend, hence only few would witness his return. It needs to be stressed that the manner of the ascension is indicated in the passage—a cloud received him out of their sight.

4. "Parousia" is not the only Greek word used to describe the return of Christ. Consider the following:

- a) Phaneroo⁴—"And when the chief Shepherd shall appear", (1 Pet. 5:4). This word not only means appearing but also carries the further idea that the person appearing will be seen in his true character. It is the same word used for the appearance of believers before the judgment seat of Christ (2 Cor. 5:10), and for the first coming of Christ. (Heb. 9:26).
- b) Prosopon⁵—"From the presence of the Lord", (2 Thess. 1:9). This word indicates the actual presence of the one coming and that all are congregated before his face. The same word is used to describe Christ's appearance in heaven before his Father. (Heb. 9:24).
- c) Heko⁶—"Hold fast till I come", (Rev. 2:25). This word means not only coming, but stresses arrival as well. The same word is used for the arrival of Jesus in Galilee from Judea (Jn. 4:47), and for the arrival of the prodigal son back home. (Lk. 15:27).

It can be seen, therefore, that the return of Christ must be a personal visible return.

GEN. 9:4 "But flesh with the life thereof, which is the blood thereof, shall ye not eat."

PROBLEM: The J.W.'s cite this reference as proof that blood transfusions are forbidden by Scripture. A Watchtower publication puts it this way:

"Is God's law violated by these medical procedures that involve the use of blood? Is it wrong to sustain life by administering a transfusion of blood or plasma or red cells or others of the component parts of the blood? Yes! The law God gave to Noah made it unlawful for anyone to eat blood, that is, to use it for nourishment or to sustain life. Since this is wrong in the case of animal blood, it is even more reprehensible in the case of human blood. The prohibition includes 'any blood at all'. (Leviticus 3:17)"¹

4 "To make manifest", Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965).

5 "Face, countenance", Ibid.

6 "To have come, be here", Ibid.

1 Blood, Medicine and the Law of God, (Brooklyn, New York: Watchtower and Tract Society of New York, Inc., 1961), pp. 13-14.

SOLUTION:

1. This passage is not necessarily binding upon all nations. Circumcision, distinction between clean and unclean animals, and animal sacrifices were all practised by the patriarchs but are not now binding upon believers. (Gal. 6:15; Col. 2:14-17; Heb. 10:11-12).
2. The prohibition of the eating of the blood was later limited to Israel as a part of the Law of Moses. It was not made binding upon all nations.² "Ye shall not eat of any thing that dieth of itself: [because the blood had not been poured out as the law required] thou shalt give it unto the stranger that is in thy gates, that he may eat it; or thou mayest sell it unto an alien . . ." (Deut. 14:21).
3. There is an inconsistency in the J.W. position on blood transfusions. Blood transfusions are rejected as "feeding upon blood"⁴ yet inoculations are not considered "feeding on blood". The inconsistency becomes apparent once it is realized that serum with which a person is inoculated is derived from blood. A tetanus injection is a blood serum taken from animals such as cows and horses,⁵ and gamma globulin⁶ derived from blood plasma is used in the treatment of kidney and liver diseases, and for the modification or prevention of certain infectious diseases, such as German measles, infectious hepatitis, mumps, and measles.⁷
4. Blood used in transfusions is taken from a living, willing donor, not a corpse. Murder is not committed. It was Jesus Christ who said, "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." (Jn. 15:13). Blood transfusions are given to sustain life, not to take it.

2 See also Psa. 147:19,20 "He sheweth his word unto Jacob, his statutes and his judgments unto Israel. He hath not dealt so with any nation: and as for his judgments, they have not known them . . ."

3 It may be thought that Lev. 17:10 conflicts with the instruction given in Deut. 14:21. The apparent conflict is resolved once it is realized that the strangers are different in the two passages. In Lev. 17:10 the strangers were those who "sojourned among" the Israelites as proselytes to the Jewish faith. They observed the law. (Exod. 12:48,49). The strangers in Deut. 14:21 were "strangers in the gates", i.e., foreigners visiting a city in Israel.

4 "Vaccination or Inoculation Not Feeding on Blood", Make Sure of All Things, (Brooklyn, New York: Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, Inc., 1953), p. 48.

5 "Tetanus treatment employs antitoxic serum (preferably of human origin in order to avoid the serious hazards of serum sickness) . . . For widespread use it is prepared from the blood serum of horses or cows that have been inoculated with tetanus toxoid or tetanus toxin, or both, and have become immune." "Blood Transfusions", Encyclopedia Britannica, Vol. III, (New York: Encyclopedia Britannica Press, 1968), pp. 885-886.

6 "Immune serum globulin, or gamma globulin, is a relatively small portion of the plasma that contains the antibodies or chemical substances that help fight disease caused by invading bacteria and viruses." Ibid., p. 809.

7 Ibid., p. 809.

HERBERT W. ARMSTRONG'S AMBASSADOR COLLEGE ("BRITISH - ISRAELISM")¹

PRELIMINARY POINTS

British-Israelism has until recently lost much of its zest. The year 1939 was held by followers of its teaching to be of great significance when the Prince of Wales (called Prince David) became monarch. It was said at the time that he would live a long prosperous life which would result in the advent of the Messiah. The Prince of Wales, however, married the twice-divorced Mrs. Simpson and his abdication dealt a temporary blow to British Israelite doctrine.

Now that Britain is ridden with agnosticism and loss of influence in the international world one would have thought that British-Israelism would have little to offer. But recently through the mass media of radio on a world-wide basis, Herbert W. Armstrong's "World Tomorrow" broadcasts have given new life to British-Israel teaching. A number of Bible passages are cited in support of its doctrine and special publications on the subject have circulated since 1954.

In brief, British-Israelism (with some variation) is the belief that modern Britain and the Anglo-Saxon peoples of Canada, the U.S.A., Denmark, Sweden, Holland, France, Germany and Northwestern European nations comprise the "lost" ten tribes of Israel. The following underpinnings are noteworthy:

- a) That the term "Jew" as used in Scripture applies only to the two tribes (Judah and Benjamin) and not to the "House of Israel"—the ten tribes. The terms "Israelite" and "Jew" are not synonymous for British-Israelites.
- b) That the return of Jews under Zerubbabel, Ezra and Nehemiah to Palestine from their captivity was limited to the two tribes.
- c) That David's throne is presently the throne on which Queen Elizabeth sits in London, England.²
- d) That the "stone of Israel" of Gen. 49:24 was the pillow used by Jacob and carried by him into Palestine. When Nebuchadnezzar invaded the land of Israel in 606 B.C., the daughter of Zedekiah, King of Judah, fled to Egypt with Jeremiah the prophet, taking the stone with her. From Egypt it was shipped by Jews to Ireland, then Scotland and finally found its place in the coronation chair in Westminster Abbey.

1 The term "British-Israelism" is used instead of "Anglo-Israelism" since Herbert Armstrong's doctrine is popularly known by the former term.

2 Some astounding conclusions have been drawn from British-Israelite doctrine. Edward Hine, one of the greatest promoters of its teaching said: "It is an utter impossibility for England ever to be defeated. And this is another result arising entirely from the fact of our being Israel." Edward Hine, "The British Nation identified with Lost Israel", p. 73. Robert Roberts, former editor of the Christadelphian Magazine, engaged Hine in a three-nights' debate in Exeter Hall, London, England, 1879. The debate was subsequently published. See, "Are Englishmen Israelites?", (Birmingham: C. C. Walker, 1919).

GEN. 35:11 "And God said unto him, I am God Almighty: be fruitful and multiply; a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee, and kings shall come out of thy loins."

PROBLEM: On the basis of this passage Armstrong argues as follows: "The Jews have never been more than one nation. They are not, and never have been many nations . . . This promise has never been fulfilled in the Jews. So the 'many nations' are eventually to take shape as a nation—one great, wealthy, powerful nation;¹ and another company of nations—a group, or commonwealth of nations allied."²

SOLUTION:

1. Armstrong's argument sounds plausible but it is circular. A Jew is first defined by him to be a member of the tribe of Judah.³ He then concludes that the Jews have never been more than one nation. Of course if Jews are defined to be members of one tribe they will not be more than one nation. The argument assumes what must first be proven, i.e., that the word "Jew" is used exclusively of one nation in Scripture.
2. The following passages indicate that the word "Jew" is not used exclusively in Scripture for members of the tribe of Judah:
 - a) "Brethren the Jews" (Neh. 5:1,8,17) is synonymous with "all Israel, dwelt in their cities". (Neh. 7:73).
 - b) "I am a man which am a Jew" (Acts 21:39;22:3) said Paul. But he also said, "I am an Israelite". (Rom. 11:1).
 - c) The "all Israel" of 1 Chron. 9:1 includes "Judah" and "Benjamin". (1 Chron. 9:3).
 - d) "And the days that David reigned over Israel were forty years: seven years reigned he in Hebron, and thirty and three years reigned he in Jerusalem." 1 Kings 2:11). David's kingship over Judah in Hebron is counted as part of his reign as king of Israel.
 - e) Nehemiah, a cupbearer to a Persian king (Neh. 2:1) asked one of his brothers "concerning the Jews that had escaped, which were left of the captivity, and concerning Jerusalem." (Neh. 1:2). But when Nehemiah arrived in Jerusalem, the enemies of the rebuilding "grieved . . . exceedingly that there was come a man to seek the welfare of the children of Israel." (Neh. 2:10).
 - f) Shalmaneser, king of Assyria "took Samaria, and carried Israel away into Assyria, and placed them in Halah and in Habor by the river of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes." (2 Kings 17:6). But when Ahasuerus sent his decree to the 127 provinces of his dominion, it was sent to Jews: "Write ye also for the Jews . . . and it was written according to all that Mordecai commanded unto the Jews . . . unto every people after their language, and

1 By "one great wealthy nation" he means the U.S.A., and by "commonwealth" he refers to Gr. Britain and the British Commonwealth.

2 Herbert W. Armstrong, The United States and the British Commonwealth in Prophecy, (Pasadena: Ambassador College, 1954), pp. 2, 3. Booklet.

3 In the same booklet, Armstrong defines a Jew as follows: "The term 'Jew' is merely a nickname for 'Judah'. It applies to the one nation, or House of Judah only—never to the house of Israel." p. 7.

to the Jews according to their writing, and according to their language." (Esther 8:8,9).⁴ The decree was not addressed to Jews in Babylon and Israelites in Media which one would have expected if British-Israel theory were true.

3. Genesis 35:11 provides no proof that the "company of nations" refers to the Anglo-Saxon peoples. Armstrong's case rests merely on assertion, but to assert, is not to prove. Any points of alleged identification must rest therefore, on other evidence which can be considered separately.
4. The land promised to Jacob was the same land promised to Abraham and Isaac (Gen. 35:12). This was "the land of Canaan" (Gen. 17:8) in which Abraham as a sojourner was invited to see (Gen. 13:14,15), but not to ultimately possess. (Heb. 11:8-16; Acts 7:5). It is not the land of Great Britain, U.S.A. and other Commonwealth countries.
5. The blessing upon Jacob cannot be understood to refer merely to the literal descendants—the twelve tribes, since the Apostle Paul's exposition in Rom. 4:16,17 requires an application of the "nations" to those who share the faith of Abraham: "Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace; to the end the promise might be sure to all the seed; not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham; who is the father of us all, (As it is written, I have made thee a father of many nations) . . . " (Rom. 4:16,17). The father of many nations refers to "us all" (Jew and Gentile alike) on the basis of faith, not pedigree. Faith, not Anglo-Saxon origin constitutes one a member of the "many nations".
6. Armstrong argues against the spiritual import of the passage on the following grounds: "It could not pertain to the Church, for there is but one true Church acknowledged in the Bible, and it is not a nation, or a group of nations, but a collection of called-out individuals scattered thru all nations."⁵ Armstrong is right in saying that there is only one true Church acknowledged in the Bible, but he is wrong in saying that it is not a nation. Peter wrote to the "strangers scattered throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia and Bithynia." (1 Pet. 1:1). Although they were literally scattered in all these areas, Peter addressed them as "a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation."⁶ (1 Pet. 2:9). Similarly "nation" is used in the sense of a "multitude; people living under common institutions"⁷ in the following two passages:

4 Peter on the Day of Pentecost addressed "Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven". (Acts 2:5). Some of these Jews came from Media and Persia (Acts 2:9) and were no doubt descendants of the northern kingdom—Israelites. (Cf. 2 Kings 17:6).

5 Herbert Armstrong, The United States and the British Commonwealth in Prophecy, (Pasadena: Ambassador College, 1954), p. 3.

6 "Ethnos", the Greek word translated "nation" in this passage is the same Greek word used in the Septuagint translation of Gen. 17:5, 35:11 and Paul's citation in Rom. 4:17.

7 "Goi" the Hebrew word translated "nation" means "a corporate body". It is translated "Gentile" 30 times, "heathen" 142 times, and "nation" 373 times. Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965 ed.). The Greek equivalent used by the Apostle Paul is "ethnos" which means "a multitude; people, living under common institutions." E. W. Bullinger, A Critical Lexicon and Concordance, (London: Bagster and Sons Lt., 1957 ed.).

- a) “. . . I will provoke you to jealousy by them that are no people, and by a foolish nation I will anger you.” (Rom. 10:19). What geographical area, or racial characteristics can be ascribed to this nation?
- b) “Therefore say I unto you, The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof.” (Matt. 21:43). To what pedigree was Jesus referring by his reference to the “other nation?” What was its geographical location?

Believers are nations (people living under common institutions) and collectively they form the one Ecclesia (body of called-out ones).

7. Armstrong’s conclusion that “‘the many nations’ are eventually to take shape as a nation—one great, wealthy, powerful nation” is neither stated nor implied in either the verse or the context.

EZRA 1:5 “Then rose up the chief of the fathers of Judah and Benjamin, and the priests, and the Levites . . . to go up to build the house of the LORD which is in Jerusalem.”

EZRA 2:1 “Now these are the children of the province that went up . . . whom Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away unto Babylon, and came again unto Jerusalem and Judah, every one unto his city.”

PROBLEM On the basis of these passages Armstrong argues as follows: “Those who returned to Palestine to rebuild the temple and restore worship 70 years after Judah’s captivity were all of the House of Judah—all Jews—All of those whom Nebuchadnezzar had carried away. They returned again ‘unto Jerusalem and Judah, every one unto his city.’ (Ezra 2:1). Only those of the tribes of Judah, Benjamin and Levi, who constituted the house of Judah returned at that time. (Ezra 1:5). Consequently those in Jerusalem in the time of Christ were of these tribes, not of the House of Israel.”¹

SOLUTION:

1. If the 10 tribes were “lost” at the time of Zerubbabel, why was a sin offering offered for “all Israel”—“twelve he goats, according to the number of the tribes of Israel”? (Ezra 6:16,17). Under Ezra the “children of those that had been carried away, which were come out of the captivity, offered burnt offerings unto the God of Israel, twelve bullocks for all Israel . . . ” (Ezra 8:35).
2. Armstrong asserts that, “only those of the tribes of Judah, Benjamin, and Levi, who constituted the house of Judah returned at that time”. But this argument neglects to take into account that members of the 10 tribes were also constituents of the Kingdom of Judah in the south.

¹ Herbert W. Armstrong, The United States and the British Commonwealth in Prophecy, (Pasadena: Ambassador College, 1954), p. 9.

When the captivities took place it was a mixture of the tribes which was carried off. Consider the evidence:

- a) The Kingdom of Judah in the south consisted from the start of some of 4 tribes and not just 2 tribes—Levi (2 Chron. 11:13,16,) and Simeon (Josh. 19:9) which had its territory in Judah, dwelt with Judah and Benjamin.
- b) There were migrations from the northern to the southern kingdom, as the following passages indicate:
 - i. "And he [Asa, King of Judah] gathered all Judah and Benjamin, and the strangers with them out of Ephraim and Manasseh, and out of Simeon: for they fell to him out of Israel in abundance, when they saw that the LORD his God was with him." (2 Chron. 15:9).
 - ii. "But as for the children of Israel which dwelt in the cities of Judah, Rehoboam [King of Judah] reigned over them." (1 Kings 12:17; see also 2 Chron. 11:3).
- c) Even after the rebellion which resulted in the setting up of the Kingdom of Israel in the north, loyal Israelites to the throne of David migrated south—" . . . out of all the tribes of Israel such as set their hearts to seek the LORD God of Israel came to Jerusalem [and] . . . they strengthened the kingdom of Judah . . ." (2 Chron. 11:16,17).

3. Armstrong reasons that "Consequently those in Jerusalem in the time of Christ were of these tribes (i.e., Judah, Benjamin and Levi), not of the House of Israel." He assumes that the 10 tribes were in Great Britain or migrating across Europe in the direction of Great Britain. But such reasoning is incompatible with the following New Testament evidence:

- a) The disciples were sent to the "lost sheep of the house of Israel." (Matt. 10:6) Since the teaching of the disciples was confined to Palestine, the tribes of Israel must have been in Palestine, not Europe or Great Britain.²
- b) Paul informed his hearers that the "12 tribes" were "instantly serving God day and night". (Acts 26:7). This is a thorough refutation of Armstrong's claim that at this time the 10 tribes had lost "their language, their religion, their land."³
- c) Jesus stated that he was sent "unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel." (Matt. 15:24) But in carrying out his mission there is no Scriptural record of him journeying to Europe or Great Britain to find the lost 10 tribes. If his teaching was only to the three tribes (Judah, Benjamin, and Levi), then he failed in the greater part of his commission. The fact that the teaching of Jesus was confined to Palestine is in itself proof that the 10 tribes were neither geographically lost nor Anglo-Saxon.

² Anna who "departed not from the temple" was from the tribe of Asher (Lk. 2:36,37), indicating that Jews from tribes other than Judah, Levi and Benjamin lived in Palestine at the time of Christ.

³ Herbert W. Armstrong, The United States and the British Commonwealth in Prophecy, (Pasadena: Ambassador College, 1954), p. 9.

JER. 33:17 "For thus saith the LORD; David shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel . . ."

PROBLEM: This passage furnishes the critical link in the British Israelite argument. Armstrong puts it this way:

"Not only was that throne established forever, it was to exist continuously forever—through all generations . . . If the throne of David ceased with Zedekiah, then it does not exist today. And if it does not exist, how shall Christ sit upon a non-existent throne?"¹

It is on the basis of this reasoning that appeal is made to the ancient annals of Ireland to attempt to prove that Queen Elizabeth now sits on David's throne. Armstrong after citing Irish tradition, states: "In view of the linking together of Biblical history, prophecy, and Irish history, can anyone deny that this Hebrew princess (Tephi) was the daughter of King Zedekiah of Judah, and therefore heir to the throne of David?—That the aged patriarch was in fact Jeremiah, and his companion Jeremiah's scribe, or secretary, Baruch? . . . The Royal Family of the British Commonwealth possesses a chart showing its ancestry, every generation, back to Heremon and Tephi, to Zedekiah, on back to David . . ."²

SOLUTION:

1. If the throne of David has been "overturned" and now exists in London, are the priests and the Levites offering burnt offerings, kindling meat offerings and doing "sacrifice continually?" (Jer. 33: 18). British-Israelites only quote the first part of the covenant, but the covenant continues: "Neither shall the priests the Levites want a man before me to offer burnt offerings, and to kindle meat offerings, and to do sacrifice continually." (Jer. 33:18). Notice the similar references in vs. 21, 22.
2. The promise, "David shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel" is future, commencing with the reign of Christ and not with the reign of David.³ Consider the context:
 - a) "Behold, the days come . . ." (vs. 14). What days? "In those days, and at that time, will I cause the Branch of righteousness

1 Herbert W. Armstrong, The United States and the British Commonwealth in Prophecy, (Pasadena: Ambassador College, 1954), p. 6.

2 Ibid., pp. 19, 20.

3 Armstrong also cites 2 Sam. 7 in support of his doctrine that there has been an unbroken continuity in the Davidic throne. But the same mistake is made in the interpretation of this reference as in his interpretation of Jer. 33:17. God says: ". . . thou [David] shalt sleep with thy fathers, I will set up thy seed after thee . . . and I will establish the throne of his kingdom for ever. I will be his father, and he shall be my son . . ." (2 Sam. 7:12-14). These words refer to Jesus Christ and not to Solomon as Armstrong alleges. This is the inspired interpretation given in Hebrews 1:5. The continuance of the throne until the promised seed (Christ) would come is conditional upon Israel obeying God's statutes. This is stated in David's charge to Solomon: ". . . If thy children take heed to their way, to walk before me in truth with all their heart and with all their soul, there shall not fail thee (said he) a man on the throne of Israel." (1 Kings 2:4). Israel did not walk faithfully and so God removed the diadem and crown. (Ezek. 21:26).

to grow up unto David; and he shall execute judgment and righteousness in the land." (vs. 15). The Branch is singular (i.e., "he") and does not, therefore, refer to a successive line of kings and queens. No monarch in the history of Great Britain can be said to have executed judgment and righteousness in the land. This description can only refer to Jesus Christ.

- b) "In those days shall Judah be saved, and Jerusalem shall dwell safely: and this is the name wherewith she shall be called, The LORD our righteousness." (vs. 16). Neither Judah, Jerusalem nor Great Britain can be said to presently be "saved" or "dwell safely." Certainly today, Great Britain does not merit the description, "The LORD our righteousness." It has been judged by non-religious men as a decadent, agnostic, atheistic and pseudo-religious society.
3. Scripture never refers to the throne of David being removed from Palestine to any other country. Scripture never refers to a return of Davids throne from any country to Jerusalem at the time of Christ's return. Such assumptions must be read into Scripture by the British-Israel theory.
4. Jesus will not return to a non-existent throne. David's throne will be re-established in Jerusalem. (Luke 1:32,33). As the prophet wrote: "After this I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up." (Acts 15:16).
5. Hosea states clearly that "the children of Israel shall abide many days without a king, and without a prince, and without a sacrifice" (Hosea 3:4). Only in the "latter days" shall the children of Israel "return, and seek the LORD their God, and David their king: and shall fear the LORD and his goodness in the latter days." (Hosea 3:5). The language of these two verses is incompatible with Armstrong's claim that there never has been a break in the Davidic line. Furthermore, it cannot be said of the Commonwealth nations nor of the U.S.A. that in these latter days they "seek the LORD their God."

JER. 43:5-7 "But Johanan . . . took all the remnant of Judah . . . and the king's daughters, . . . into the land of Egypt."

PROBLEM: Armstrong reasons on the basis of these verses that David's throne was preserved by one of King Zedekiah's daughters fleeing to Egypt. The royal seed was then replanted about 580 B.C. in Ireland, "later overturned a second time and replanted in Scotland, overturned a third time planted in London, from where it cannot be overturned or moved again until the coming of Christ, when it once again shall be overturned and transplanted back in Jerusalem."¹

The royal party "brought with them some remarkable things, including the harp, an ark, and a wonderful stone called 'Lia-Fail', or 'stone of destiny' . . . many kings in the history of Ireland, Scotland, and England have been coronated sitting over this stone,—including the present queen. The stone rests, today, in Westminster Abbey in London, and the Coronation Chair is built over and around it. A sign beside it labels it 'Jacob's pillar-stone.' (Gen. 28:18)""²

¹ Herbert W. Armstrong, The United States and the British Commonwealth in Prophecy, (Pasadena: Ambassador College, 1954), p. 20.

SOLUTION:

1. Even if Zedekiah's daughters had escaped as stated, they were not in the royal line. Zedekiah was an interloper instated by the Babylonians. "And he [Nebuchadnezzar] carried away Jehoiachin [King of Judah] to Babylon, and the king's mother, and the king's wives, and his officers, and the mighty of the land, those carried he into captivity from Jerusalem to Babylon . . . And the king of Babylon made Mattaniah his father's brother king in his stead, and changed his name to Zedekiah." (2 Kings 24:15,17). See also the genealogy in Matt. 1:11-13. This evidence completely destroys the case Armstrong is trying to make for the transplantation of the "royal seed."
2. Armstrong presents the escape of the daughters of King Zedekiah as a providential move to preserve the "royal seed". Scripture, however, makes it clear that the move to Egypt was for punishment. "So they came into the land of Egypt: for they obeyed not the voice of the LORD . . ." (Jer. 43:7). Even while in Egypt their wickedness was manifest: " . . . ye provoke me unto wrath with the works of your hands, burning incense unto other gods in the land of Egypt . . ." (Jer. 44:8). All but a small number escaped since God had declared "they shall all be consumed, and fall in the land of Egypt . . . they shall die, from the least even unto the greatest, by the sword and by the famine . . ." (Jer. 44:12).
3. Armstrong reasons that the small number (Jer. 44:28) included the "royal seed" which departed for Ireland. This conclusion does not follow for these reasons:
 - a) The alleged royal seed is not mentioned as escaping. The fact that "all the women" (Jer. 44:15), told Jeremiah that they would not listen to him, but rather preferred the queen of heaven is suggestive that the King's daughters did not escape. (See Jer. 44:16,18).
 - b) Those who did escape returned to Judah (Jer. 44:14,28). Scripture is silent about a trip to Ireland.
4. The evidence that the Coronation Stone in Westminster Abbey is the stone Jacob used for a pillow is not conclusive. Consider the following:
 - a) The Coronation Stone is red sandstone, the stones of Bethel are white limestone.
 - b) Jacob said, "And this stone, which I have set for a pillar, shall be God's house . . ." (Gen. 28:22). To set the stone for a pillar is not the kind of language one would ordinarily associate with taking the stone with him on the journey.
5. Ezekiel makes no reference to the throne of David being removed to a different location. This information must be read into the passage. The language employed by Ezekiel is an emphatic denial that the throne of David existed anywhere after the death of Zedekiah. "... and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is . . ."³ (Ezek. 21:27, cf. "there shall not be even a trace of it until he comes whose right it is", R.S.V.).

² Ibid., p. 19.

6. "I will overturn, overturn, overturn, it", ("ruin, ruin, ruin", R.S.V.) may be emphatic emphasis⁴ for the overturning by the Babylonians in the time of Zedekiah, or it may refer to the three invasions by the Babylonians, Antiochus Epiphanes and Titus. The language, "remove the diadem, and take off the crown" (Ezek. 21:26)—symbols of the political government, indicates a termination of the Davidic throne. It would remain so "until he come"—the Lord Jesus Christ. Israel was subsequently to remain "many days without a prince, and without a sacrifice". (Hosea 3:4). This language is incompatible with Armstrong's claim that the Davidic throne merely changed location without interruption of continuity.

³ "Abase him that is high" (Ezek. 21:26) is likely a reference to the subsequent degradation suffered by the wicked King Zedekiah at the hands of the Babylonians. (see 2 Kings 25:7). "Exalt him that is low" may refer to the poor left in the land. (see Jer. 40:7).

⁴ Note the similarity of emphasis on the word "earth" in Jer. 22:29.

THE CHURCH OF CHRIST

PRELIMINARY POINTS

The Church of Christ¹ is the name of autonomous churches throughout Australia, Canada, and especially the "Bible belt" of the U.S.A. The Church of Christ has similar doctrines to those expounded by Alexander Campbell,² an associate of Dr. John Thomas with whom the Doctor broke after reaching a fuller understanding of the elements of the gospel.³

Members of the Church of Christ have a motto, "Where the Bible speaks we speak, and where it is silent we are silent." They believe in "contending earnestly for the faith" (as they understand the faith), which is interpreted to mean striving as in rivalry or debate. This vigorous approach to Scripture has resulted in debates with Christadelphian lecturers in Indiana, Texas, Manitoulin Island, and Adelaide, Australia.⁴

SUGGESTED STRATEGY

1. Church of Christ ministers are often schooled debaters. Christadelphians anticipating debating with representatives of this body should have a thorough knowledge of the arguments used by the Church of Christ before the debate. The strength of the Christadelphian position does not rest on the facile tactics of the skilled debater. As the Apostle Paul put it: "[We] have renounced the hidden things of dishonesty, not walking in craftiness, nor handling the word of God deceitfully; but by manifestation of the truth commending ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God." (2 Cor. 4:2). Nevertheless, the Christadelphian places himself at a disadvantage if he has no knowledge of logical fallacies in argumentation, or of the desirability of keeping an opponent on the issue in question. Ecclesial mutual improvement classes can help build the needed skills to "mightily convince . . . and that publicly, shewing by the scriptures", as did Apollos. (Acts 18:28).
2. In private discussion, members of the Church of Christ can be a

1 Not long after the American Civil War one group of members of the original movement proclaimed independence from the main body and has since maintained a separation. It has its headquarters in Nashville, Tenn. and is the group with which this study is principally concerned. The liberal wing of the Church of Christ is identified as the "Christian Church" in the Midwest and South, and "Disciples of Christ" in the East. See James E. Craig, "Who are the Disciples of Christ?", in A Guide to the Religions of America, ed. by Leo Rosten, (New York: Simon and Schuster, 1955), pp. 38-46.

2 In the "sanctuary" of the Park Avenue Christian Church in New York City, the table is preserved at which Alexander Campbell and Walter Scott presided in their communion services.

3 See Robert Roberts, Dr. Thomas: His Life and Work 2nd ed., (Birmingham: The Christadelphian, 1873), pp. 9-15; 20-84. Also John Thomas, "Confession and Abjuration", Herald of the Future Age, 1847, III, pp. 73-80.

4 The Lee-Mansfield debate, (1962) is a Christadelphian classic. The six night's debate between the Church of Christ and the Christadelphians drew an average attendance of 800, and at least six baptisms resulted from persons contacted through the debate. Records of the debate have been made available by Logos Publications, West Beach, South Australia.

delight to teach. Although they are fundamentalists in their view of inspiration, there is almost an exclusive use of the New Testament. This betrays a fundamental weakness in the Church of Christ position which is often indicated by their confused identification of the Law of Moses with the teaching of the Old Testament prophets. The former served its usefulness as a schoolmaster to bring men to Christ, (Gal. 3:24), but as a law code it is no longer binding upon believers. This is not, however, to be confused with the many Messianic prophecies referring to the reign of Christ on the earth which still await fulfillment. The Christadelphian must establish the legitimacy of his frequent Old Testament references before the full import of their force registers. The inspired application of more than 630 Old Testament references cited and used by Christ and the Apostles in the New Testament is an authoritative guide to Biblical interpretation.

3. It can be very helpful in discussion with the Church of Christ to keep returning to the following summaries which help to fix in the memory the framework of the kingdom of God:

a) The kingdom of God—its essential elements.

- i. King — Jesus Christ (Lk. 1:32; Jn. 18:37).
- ii. Rulers — Immortalized saints (Matt. 19:27-28; Rev. 3:21 cf. 2:26,27; 2 Tim. 2:12; Rev. 5:9,10).
- iii. Subjects — Mortal nations surviving wars (Zech. 14:16-18; Mic. 4:1-3; Isa. 65:17-25).
- iv. Laws — Righteous (Psa. 72:4, 12-14).
- v. Land — Whole earth (Num. 14:21; Hab. 2:14; Isa. 11:9).
- vi. Capital city — Jerusalem (Matt. 5:35 cf. Lk. 1:32-33 and 1 Chron. 11:4,5).

b) David's throne—in the past and in the future.

- i. Located in Jerusalem (1 Chron. 11:4,5,7).
- ii. Promised to Christ (2 Sam. 7:12, 13, 16; cf. Heb. 1:5).
- iii. Solomon sat on it (1 Chron. 28:5).
- iv. Ceased to exist with removal of Zedekiah (Ezek. 21:26-27).
- v. Will be restored by Christ (Lk. 1:32,33 cf. Matt. 19:28; Rev. 3:21; Acts 15:16).

THE KINGDOM OF GOD

PRELIMINARY POINTS

The Church of Christ usually¹ reads "the kingdom of God" in scripture as synonymous with the "Church of Christ"². It is appropriate for the Christadelphian, therefore, to show the unscriptural character of this substitution. This can be done by producing Biblical statements about the kingdom which are incompatible with statements about the ecclesia.³ The following are suggested lines of reasoning:

1. Jesus stated: "When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory: and before him shall be gathered all nations: and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats . . . Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world . . . And these shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal." (Matt. 25:31,32,34,46).

These conclusions follow:

- a) Jesus has not yet come in the throne of his glory since all nations have not been gathered before him, nor have the "sheep" been separated from the "goats".
- b) Therefore, the faithful are not yet in the kingdom since the invitation to enter the kingdom is not given until after the separation of the sheep from the goats.⁴

1 The position outlined is not invariably the position of the Church of Christ since considerable variation of belief exists among the autonomous assemblies.

2 For example, A. R. Main, a member of the Churches of Christ makes this identification: " . . . in denotation the kingdom of God, in so far as it is manifested in visible form on earth, corresponds to the church . . . " First Principles: Studies in Bible Truth, (Melbourne: The Austral Printing and Publishing Co., 1969), p. 67.

3 An important distinction should be noted: The Greek word "ecclesia", translated "church" refers to "called out" ones. The word "church" is used today to designate both the building and a religious grouping. The Church of Christ, therefore, is a "church" in the popular usage of the term, but it is not the ecclesia. It is not the ecclesia because of the false doctrines which the Church of Christ teaches. In this analysis careful attention should be given not to confuse the "Church of Christ" (i.e., the religious group known by that name today) with the ecclesia of the first century which held the doctrines presently taught by the Christadelphians.

4 One does not know before the Judgment Day whether he is for certain a "sheep" or a "goat". The parable of the sheep and goats (Matt. 25:31-46) points out that many who think they are sheep will find out they are goats. The same self-deception is indicated in Matt. 7:22-23.

- c) If the faithful⁵ are not yet in the kingdom, then the kingdom of God cannot be the "church".
 2. Jesus stated that at the Judgment Day men will say, "Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works?" (Matt. 7:22). His statement followed the exhortation that "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven". (Matt. 7:21). Entry into the kingdom is conditional upon doing the will of God who is in heaven.
- These conclusions follow:
- a) Since men have not yet been confronted by Jesus to give an account of what they have done (cf. 2 Cor. 5:9,10), they do not know for sure whether they have, in fact, done his will acceptably.
 - b) But doing the will of God is the requisite for entry into the kingdom of God.
 - c) Therefore the kingdom of God is not yet established, and cannot be synonymous with the "church."
 3. Peter asked Jesus, "Behold, we have forsaken all, and followed thee; what shall we have therefore?" Jesus replied, "Ye which have followed me, in the regeneration when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel". (Matt. 19:27,28). This passage furnishes a whole array of appropriate questions to lead the Church of Christ contact to the desired conclusions. The following questions require answers:
 - a) What is the scriptural definition of Christ's "throne of glory"? (See Matt. 25:31; cf. Peter's words in 1 Pet. 5:4).

⁵ It is sometimes argued that the parable of the sheep and goats refers to sheep and goat nations rather than individuals. Against this interpretation the following should be noted:

- a) "He shall separate them"—"them" is masculine in gender in the Greek text indicating that it refers to individuals, and not to "nations" which is neuter in gender.
 - b) Those who inherit the kingdom are heirs of the kingdom. This is the language used of faithful brethren (Gal. 3:29; Jas. 2:5), not of nations.
 - c) The Greek word "ethnos" translated "nations" is more frequently translated Gentiles (in the A.V.) implying Christ's stress that Gentiles, and not only Jews from "all the nations" will be gathered for the judgment.
 - d) The righteous are commended in the parable for having given food and water to the Master as well as having visited him when sick and in prison. This is the language used elsewhere in the N.T. of believers (Matt. 10:40-42), not nations. Can it be imagined that nations such as Canada, Britain, the USA or Egypt could be commended by the Master, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me" ("brethren" are defined by Christ to be those who bear and do his will—Lk. 8:21)?
 - e) Sheep-like characteristics are attributed to believers and even to the nation of Israel (e.g. Jn. 10:1-28; Ezek. 34), but where in Scripture is it used of other nations?
- 6 It is noteworthy that in the context of this conversation that Jesus says, "It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God" (Matt. 19:24). If the kingdom of God is the "church," (as the Church of Christ asserts), is it difficult for a wealthy person to enter their church? It is in this context that the kingdom of God is associated with the king coming in "the throne of his glory" in the regeneration. (Matt. 19:28).

- b) When will the Son of man sit on this throne? (See Matt. 25:31; cf. Peter's statement Acts 3:19-21).
 - c) Where will the throne be located? (See Luke 1:32-33; 1 Chron. 11:4,5 cf. Ezek. 21:26,27; Acts 15:15-16).
 - d) If the apostles are to sit on twelve thrones, when will this promise be fulfilled? (See Acts 1:6 and Matt. 16:27 cf. Rev. 11:18—"the servants are rewarded at the time of the resurrection of the dead "that they should be judged;" Rev. 3:21,22 cf. 2:26,27).
4. The Apostle Paul states, "Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption". (1 Cor. 15:50). This passage in itself is proof that the kingdom is not the "church".

Consider the following:

- a) "Flesh and blood" persons presently constitute the "church".
 - b) But, "flesh and blood" cannot inherit the kingdom,
 - c) Therefore, the kingdom cannot be the "church".
5. Paul wrote Timothy: "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom." (2 Tim. 4:1). The following questions require answers from the Church of Christ:
- a) Is the time designated by "his appearing" the same as the time period indicated by "and his kingdom"?
 - b) Who are the dead to whom the Apostle refers?
 - c) When will these dead persons be raised? (The event must be future to the time when the Apostle wrote to Timothy since he says, "he shall judge the quick and the dead". How many quick and dead were judged at the beginning of "the church" and his appearing, if these occurred at Pentecost?)

It is easy to establish by these questions that since the dead have not yet been raised, then the kingdom must yet be future, and, therefore, cannot be the "church".

6. James writes to believers of the "twelve tribes which are scattered abroad." (Jas. 1:1). He speaks of them as "heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him." (Jas. 2:5). Since baptized believers are by definition in the "church", in what sense can they be heirs of the "church" (if the kingdom is the "church")? Similarly, the Apostle Paul tells believers at Galatia: "Envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like; of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." (Gal. 5:21). How can believers not inherit the kingdom? If the kingdom is the "church" then believers are already in the kingdom and would have no need to fear failure to reach the promised inheritance, i.e., the kingdom of God.
7. Peter writes to believers in his second epistle, (2 Pet. 1:1). He admonishes them that "... if ye do these things, ye shall never fall: for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." (2 Pet. 1:10,11). Since, according to Church of Christ doctrine believers are already in the kingdom, (i.e., the "church"), how is one to understand the conditional nature of the entrance? Does the Church of Christ make the virtues listed in verses 5-7 requisites for church membership? How is one to understand the tense—"so an entrance shall be ministered . . . into the everlasting kingdom?" If believers are already in the kingdom into what are they to have a future entrance?

8. The kingdom of God is to bring a reign of judgment, justice and peace. (Isa. 9:6,7; Rom. 14:17). Since the Church of Christ claims to be the kingdom of God one would expect to find judgment, justice and peace in its history. Is such the case? A perusal of Church of Christ history shows it to be chequered with internecine strife. If the kingdom of God is the "church", it is not the Church of Christ.⁷

JOSH. 21:43 "And the LORD gave unto Israel all the land which he sware to give unto their fathers: and they possessed it, and dwelt therein."

JOSH. 21:45 "There failed not ought of any good thing which the LORD had spoken unto the house of Israel: all came to pass."

JOSH. 23:14 " . . . not one thing hath failed of all the good things which the LORD your God spake concerning you; all are come to pass unto you, and not one thing hath failed thereof."

PROBLEM: These verses are usually cited with Neh. 9:8 by the Church of Christ in an attempt to prove that the Abrahamic "land promise" of Gen. 13:15; 15:18 was fulfilled when the land of Canaan was occupied by the twelve tribes under Joshua.

SOLUTION:

1. These passages in Joshua do not refer to the fulfillment of the Abrahamic "land promise" for the following reasons:
 - a) Abraham's seed was promised the land from the "river of Egypt [the Nile] to the Euphrates." (Gen. 15:18). The nation of Israel under Joshua never occupied this complete territory.
 - b) Abraham was promised the land for ever. (Gen. 13:15). This personal promise has never been fulfilled as the following passages indicate:
 - i. "And he [God] gave him [Abraham] none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on: yet he promised that he would give it to him for a possession . . . and to his seed after him, when as yet he had no child." (Acts 7:5).
 - ii. "By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed . . . These all died in faith, not having received the promises . . ." (Heb. 11:8,13).

⁷ Dissension still exists between Church of Christ congregations over legalistic interpretations regarding the use of church finances, the use of musical instruments to accompany worship, and the appointment of inter-church committees to promote radio and TV proselytizing. These issues are considered matters of faith and fellowship by some Church of Christ congregations.

2. "All"¹ good things is qualified as the following examples indicate:
 - a) It was promised, "I will raise them up a Prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee [Moses], and will put my words in his mouth; and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him." (Deut. 18:18). This promise was not fulfilled, as Peter points out, until the coming of the Messiah. (Acts 3:22).
 - b) "For if Jesus [Joshua] had given them rest, then would he not afterward have spoken of another day. There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God." (Heb. 4:8,9).

Clearly then, the inheritance of the land by Israel under Joshua must be regarded as only a token fulfillment.
3. The "all good things" of Josh. 23:14 refers to Exod. 3:8,12; Deut. 28:1-14.
The "evil things" of Josh. 23:15,16 refers to Deut. 28: 15-68; Lev. 26:14-39.
4. The land promised unto the "fathers" alludes to the promise made to Moses (Deut. 11:24) and which referred to land taken by conquest: "Every place that the sole of your foot shall tread upon, that have I given unto you, as I said unto Moses." (Josh. 1:3). This promise was fulfilled when Israel possessed Canaan.

NEH. 9:8 " . . . and madest a covenant with him [Abraham] to give the land . . . to his seed, and has performed thy words; for thou art righteous."

PROBLEM: This passage is used by the Church of Christ in an attempt to prove that the Abrahamic covenant of land inheritance (Gen. 13:15) was fulfilled when the land of Canaan was possessed by Israel under Joshua.

SOLUTION:

1. The promise in Neh. 9:8 refers to the seed of Abraham, but it was Abraham personally who was promised the land forever in Gen. 13:15. Stephen stated boldly before the Sanhedrin, that God removed Abraham into the land of Palestine, "wherein ye now dwell. And he gave him none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on: yet he promised that he would give it to him . . ." (Acts 7:5). Clearly, then, the words of Nehemiah cannot be interpreted to infer that the Abrahamic covenant was fulfilled in Israel's possession of the land under Joshua.
2. The inheritance of the land under Joshua must also be regarded as only a token fulfillment for an additional reason: In the passage to which Nehemiah refers (Gen. 15:13), God promised to give to Abraham's descendants all the land from "the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates." Israel never inherited this entire land area. Its fulfillment awaits the future return of the Messiah to bring the first dominion to Zion. (Micah 4:8).

¹ "All is frequently qualified in Scripture. See for example, "All living" (Gen. 3:20) refers to humans not animals. Similarly, "all flesh" (Gen. 6:13) did not include those animals and persons saved in the ark.

ISA. 66:1 "Thus saith the LORD, the heaven is my throne, and the earth is my footstool: where is the house that ye build unto me? and where is the place of my rest?"

PROBLEM: The Church of Christ argues that since the throne of God is in heaven, and the earth is made his "footstool," Christ cannot rule literally on the earth, since this would be the "footstool" of God.

SOLUTION:

1. There are two thrones referred to in Scripture:

a) God's throne —

"To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with my Father in his throne." (Rev. 3:21).

b) Christ's throne —

"... and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David." (Luke 1:32 cf. 1 Chron. 11:4,5). This is the throne that was overturned in the days of Zedekiah, and to be restored when Christ returns: "I will overturn, overturn, overturn it: and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is: and I will give it him." (Ezek. 21:27).

"When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory." (Matt. 25:31). This throne is to be established on the earth, as Luke 1:32 cf. 1 Chron. 11:4,5 indicate. The earth is now the Lord's footstool, but it will become the dominion of His Son in the Age to come. (Psa. 72).

2. The "footstool" of Jesus Christ will be his enemies: "The LORD said unto my Lord, Sit thou at my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool." (Psa. 110:1). Since this ruling is said to be from Zion "in the midst of thine enemies," then clearly the reigning is from the earth, not heaven. See Psa. 110:2: "The LORD shall send the rod of thy strength out of Zion: rule thou in the midst of thine enemies."

JER. 22:30 "Thus saith the LORD, Write ye this man [Coniah] childless, a man that shall not prosper in his days: for no man of his seed shall prosper, sitting upon the throne of David, and ruling any more in Judah."

PROBLEM: It is argued that since Christ is of the seed of Coniah (Matt. 1:1-11) he cannot reign in Jerusalem upon the literal throne of David.

SOLUTION:

1. Coniah, called "Jehoiachin" (2 Kings 24:8) and "Jeconiah" (1 Chron. 3:16; Jer. 24:1), perished in Babylon where he was taken as a captive. (2 Kings 25:27-30). Coniah was a descendant of Solomon, but Jesus was a descendant of Nathan (Luke 3:31), therefore what is affirmed of the seed of Coniah does not refer to Jesus Christ.
 2. The genealogy of Matthew's gospel is traced through Joseph. To insist that Jesus is a descendant of Coniah, is to likewise insist that Joseph was his real father. The family tree of Jesus through his mother Mary is set out in Luke 3, not Matthew 1.
-

DAN. 2:44 "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed . . ."

PROBLEM: Since the period of these kings is symbolically portrayed as feet of iron and clay, (which is assumed to represent the Roman Empire), then the kingdom of God must have been established during the existence of the Roman Empire—i.e., on the day of Pentecost.

SOLUTION:

1. The period depicted as iron mixed with clay indicates a disunited period, having the influence of the iron (Roman influence) but the weakening effect of the miry clay. The Roman Empire was not in this state on the Day of Pentecost, it was rather in the period designated by the legs of iron. (vs. 33) later to be divided into East and West, but nevertheless still in the iron phase.
2. Even if it be assumed that "in the days of these kings" referred to the Roman Empire, the ecclesia established then did not break in pieces and destroy all other kingdoms. Clearly, the kingdom of God cannot be the ecclesia. Persecution and death, not "breaking in pieces and destroying" describes the history of the ecclesia. See e.g. Acts 4:17; 5:17,18; 7:58; 8:1; 9:1,2; 16:22, 23, etc., Furthermore, Dan. 7:20, 21 indicates that the fourth beast would give rise to a horn "that had eyes, and a mouth that spake very great things" which would make war with the saints, and "prevailed against them". Such language indicates the erroneousness of the Church of Christ interpretation which identifies the Kingdom of God with the "church".
3. The Babylonian, Persian and Grecian Empires were non-existent as political entities in the period of the political domination of the Roman Empire (B.C. 67-A.D. 493). Clearly, only the influence of the Babylonian, Persian and Grecian Empires existed within the framework of the Roman Empire as the conquered territories became assimilated. Similarly, the fourth kingdom (Rome) which was "as strong as iron" would be divided into two (eastern and western sections) and would progress to the feet of iron and clay. It is in the ten-toed phase of the Roman Empire that the saints possess the kingdom. This can be shown by the fact that the beasts of chapter 7 are similar to the metals of the image of chapter 2. It is only after the fourth beast gives rise to ten horns (paralleling the ten toes of the image) that the saints possess the kingdom (See Dan. 7:23-27). The Roman Empire formed into its eastern and western "iron-legged" sections after Justinian (A.D. 529-533), and since the ten-toed phase would be entered after this time, the kingdom could not have been set up at Pentecost (A.D. 30).

DAN. 7:7-9 " . . . behold a fourth beast, dreadful and terrible, and strong exceedingly; and it had great iron teeth: it devoured and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it: and it was diverse from all the beasts that were before it; and it had ten horns . . . I beheld till the thrones were cast down, and the Ancient of days did sit . . . "

PROBLEM: The Church of Christ attempts to argue that the kingdom of God was established at Pentecost (in the time of the Roman Empire). The reasoning goes as follows:

- a) The fourth beast refers to the Roman Empire.
- a) It is then noted that it is at the time of the fourth beast that the Son of Man receives his kingdom.

Therefore,

- c) The kingdom of God must have been established when the Roman Empire existed, i.e., at Pentecost.

SOLUTION:

1. There are a number of assumptions in the above reasoning which are erroneous and invalidate the conclusion. These are as follows:
 - a) It is not at the time of the fourth beast that the Son of Man receives his kingdom. It is at the time of the little horn phase with "eyes like the eyes of man, and a mouth speaking great things". (See vs. 20). This phase can be identified with the ten-toed phase of the image of Daniel 2. An examination of Dan. 2 and 7 indicates that the image of the former parallels the four beasts of the latter. This is an important identification since the kingdom is not set up in Daniel 2 until the ten-toed phase. (Dan. 2:44). The Roman Empire formed into its eastern and western "iron-leg" sections after Justinian (A.D. 529-533), and since the ten-toed phase would be entered after this time, then clearly the kingdom was not set up at Pentecost.
 - b) The rest of the beasts are said to have had "their dominion taken away: yet their lives were prolonged for a season and a time". (Dan. 7:12). But who would assert that the lives of the Babylonian, Persian and Grecian kings extended even to the time of the Roman Empire? They had been dead for hundreds of years. It was only the influence of the empire within its successor which continued to exist (Cf. Dan. 4:15—"stump banded with brass and iron").

2. The events outlined in Daniel 7 require a long period of persecution to exist before the setting up of the kingdom. This is indicated by the little horn which would arise to make war with the saints and to prevail against them until the saints possessed the kingdom. (Dan. 7:21,22). Even if it be argued that a persecution arose against believers at the time of Pentecost, such an interpretation must be rejected since the Jewish leaders did not prevail against the believers, and therefore, the persecution must have been subsequent to this time. It can be concluded by implication that the kingdom could not, therefore, have been set up at Pentecost.
 3. Dan. 7:10 refers to the judgment which was "set" and the "books" were opened. It is known from other parts of Scripture that this time will only occur at the return of Christ to the earth to judge the dead. (See, for example, 2 Tim. 4:1; Matt. 25:21-34; 1 Cor. 15:23; Jn. 6:39,40,44,54; 11:24).
 4. Christ cites Dan. 7:13 ("coming in the clouds") with the words of Psa. 110:1 ("sitting on the right hand of power") and applies them to his second coming. (Matt. 26:64). This application by Christ indicates conclusively that the time for the saints to possess the kingdom is established at his return.
-

MICAH 4:1-2 "But in the last days it shall come to pass, that the mountain of the house of the LORD shall be established in the top of the mountains, and it shall be exalted above the hills; and people shall flow unto it. And many nations shall come, and say, Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the LORD, and to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for the law shall go forth of Zion, and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem."

PROBLEM: The Church of Christ places stress upon the use of "last days". It is noted that Peter said that Joel's prophecy concerning the "last days" was being fulfilled at Pentecost. (Acts 2:15-17). It is then inferred that what Micah records was likewise fulfilled at Pentecost and hence the kingdom must have been set up at this time, i.e., the "church".

SOLUTION:

1. The following is proof that Micah 4 was not fulfilled on the Day of Pentecost:
 - a) There is no indication in Scripture that those assembled at Pentecost said, "Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the LORD, and to the house of the God of Jacob . . ." (Micah 4:2).
 - b) The prophecy in Micah indicates that "many nations shall come" (vs. 2), but on the day of Pentecost, "Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven" (Acts 2:5) gathered for the celebrations. The descriptions are different. Micah indicates "many nations" is the subject of reference, but in Acts it is recorded that only Jews were present, and these came out of every nation.

- c) Micah states that "in that day . . . the LORD shall reign over them [the halt, and cast off] in mount Zion from henceforth, even for ever" (vs. 7), but this has never been fulfilled. Many wars have since been fought in Palestine and elsewhere. About one hundred years after Pentecost, Hadrian, the Roman Emperor ploughed Jerusalem and sowed it with salt.¹ (Cf. Micah 3:12—"therefore shall Zion for your sake be ploughed as a field").
2. Peter did not state that Joel's prophecy was completely fulfilled on the day of Pentecost. He said, "this is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel" (Acts 2:16)—i.e., this is an example of what Joel prophesied. That this is the correct interpretation is indicated by the fact that Peter did not quote the words: "for in mount Zion and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance, as the LORD hath said, and in the remnant whom the LORD shall call". (Joel 2:32). The reason for the omission of this section is that it was not even partially fulfilled on Pentecost, but rather awaits fulfilment when Christ returns to the earth to set up his kingdom. But if the kingdom were, in fact, established on the day of Pentecost, then this is just the section one would have expected to have been cited.
3. Many prophecies in Scripture have more than one application. Jesus said that John the Baptist was Elijah, fulfilling Malachi 4:5—"Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the LORD". (Cf. Matt. 11:14; Luke 1:17), and yet an examination of the context of Malachi 4 indicates that the work of John the Baptist was only a partial fulfilment.²
4. "Last days" is used for two different time periods in Scripture:
 - a) The "last days" of Judah's Commonwealth which was overthrown in A.D. 70 (Cf. Heb. 1:2; 9:26; 1 Pet. 1:20).
 - b) The last day (or latter days) which refers to the gathering of the nations to the battle of Armageddon and the raising of the dead. (Ezek. 38:8,16; cf. Dan. 11:40; 12:1,2; Jn. 6:39,40, 44, 54: 11-24). Micah refers to b) as the previous points indicate.

¹ See, The Bible Today and You, (London: "The Dawn" Book Supply, 1962), p. 72, and William Smith (ed.), A Dictionary of the Bible, (London: John Murray, 1863), p. 1015.

² John the Baptist came in the "Spirit and power" of Elijah. (Luke 1:17). He categorically stated that he was not Elijah: "And they asked him [John], What then? Art thou Elias? And he saith, I am not. Art thou that prophet? And he answered, No." (Jn. 1:21).

MATT. 3:2 " . . . Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand."

MATT. 4:17 "From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand."

MATT. 11:12 "And from the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force."

LUKE 16:16 "The law and the prophets were until John: since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it."

PROBLEM: These passages are cited by the Church of Christ in proof of their doctrine that the Kingdom of God was established on the day of Pentecost. Stress is placed on the words "is at hand" to emphasize that the kingdom would not have to wait nearly two thousand years for its establishment at Christ's return.

SOLUTION:

1. The language of these passages must be carefully noted: It is not—"the law and the prophets were until John and since that time the kingdom of God has been established and every man presseth into it", but rather the kingdom of God is preached and every man presses *towards*¹ it.
2. If the kingdom of God were established on Pentecost, how could every man press into it from the days of John the Baptist? (Lk. 16:16). This passage clearly proves too much for the Church of Christ interpretation, for if it is insisted that the kingdom had to be established for every man to press into it, then the passage only serves to show that the kingdom is not the "church" which is said to have been set up at Pentecost. This "church" would have been established in the days of John the Baptist before the death of Christ.
3. Similarly, Jesus stated that "from the days of John the Baptist until now" the kingdom of God suffered violence. (Matt. 11:12). But if the kingdom were not established until Pentecost, how could it suffer violence in the days of John the Baptist? How could violent men take the "church" by force?
4. In the preceding verse Jesus stated that "among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist: notwithstanding he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he." (Matt. 11:11). This is in itself proof that the kingdom is not the "church". Consider the following:
 - a) Since Jesus says there is none born of women greater than John

¹ The Greek preposition "eis" translated "into" also means "toward". "Eis, into, unto, to, implying motion to the interior . . ." E. W. Bullinger, A Critical Lexicon and Concordance to the English and Greek Testament, (London: Samuel Bagster and Sons Ltd., 1957). "Eis" is translated "toward" 32 times. See, for example: Matt. 28:1; Lk. 13:22; Jn. 6:17; Acts 27:40; 28:14.

- the Baptist, the greatest in the "church" is not as great as John the Baptist.²
- b) But he that is least in the kingdom of heaven³ is greater than John the Baptist.⁴
- c) Therefore, the "church" cannot be synonymous with the kingdom.
5. How did the kingdom come "nigh" or was "near at hand?" The Greek word "basileia" translated "kingdom" means "the royal dominion, including the power and form of government, with the territory and the kingdom."⁵ When men were confronted with the Royal Majesty of the kingdom in his teaching⁶ and power,⁷ it is said to be the kingdom coming nigh.
6. The disciples were also confused as to the time of the setting up of the kingdom. It was for this reason that Jesus instructed them that the nobleman must go into "a far country to receive for himself a kingdom and to return." (Lk. 19:11,12). Jesus' instruction is incompatible with the Church of Christ teaching that the kingdom was shortly to be set up at Pentecost.

MARK 9:1 " . . . Verily I say unto you, That there be some of them that stand here, which shall not taste of death, till they have seen the kingdom of God come with power."

PROBLEM: If some standing with Jesus would not die until the kingdom was established, then it is argued that the kingdom would not have to wait nearly 2,000 years for its establishment. Hence, it must have been the "church" set up at Pentecost.

SOLUTION:

1. The words, "some of them that stand here, shall not taste of death, till they have seen the kingdom of God come with power" refer to

2 The only way that the logic of this argument can be evaded is for one to argue that by being in the "church" one is greater than John the Baptist. Now this would be a very bold assertion indeed. The work of John the Baptist was a partial fulfillment of the Elijah prophecy (Matt. 11:14 cf. Mal. 4:5,6). John the Baptist was a prophet of God and remained faithful until his death. Is it tenable that anyone joining the Church of Christ is greater than John the Baptist? If the kingdom is the "church", then such would be the case. It is a simple matter of observation that many who have joined the Church of Christ have subsequently fallen away. The Church of Christ argument requires that Demas (2 Tim. 4:10), Alexander (2 Tim. 4:14) and Diotrephes (3 Jn. 9) are all greater than John the Baptist by virtue of being in the "church".

3 The "kingdom of heaven" is synonymous with the "kingdom of God." Compare the following passages: Matt. 11:11 and Lk. 7:28; Matt. 8:11 and Lk. 13:29.

4 The possessor of the kingdom (being immortal; 1 Cor. 15:50-54) is greater than John the Baptist who was mortal.

5 E.W. Bullinger, A Critical Lexicon and Concordance to the English and Greek New Testament, (London: Samuel Bagster and Sons Ltd., 1957).

6 E.g. Matt. 3:2.

7 E.g. Matt. 12:28. The close association of "king" and "kingdom" is indicated in the following parallels in the Synoptic Gospels:

- a) "Behold, thy King cometh . . . Hosanna to the Son of David" (Matt. 21:5,9 cf. Zech. 9:9).
- b) "Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord . . . Blessed be the kingdom of our father David" (Mark 11:9,10).
- c) "Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord" (Luke 19:38).

the transfiguration, and not to the Day of Pentecost. Consider the following:

- a) Only some were to see the kingdom come with power, but on the Day of Pentecost all but Judas were present. (Acts 2:14). The language is entirely appropriate, however, to describe Peter, James and John who accompanied Christ during the transfiguration.
 - b) In all three Gospels recording the promise, the transfiguration narrative immediately follows. (See Matt. 17:1; Mk. 9:2; Lk. 9:28).
 - c) Peter refers to the transfiguration in his Epistle in such a way as to make the case conclusive: "For we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eyewitnesses of his majesty. For he received from God the Father honour and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. And this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with him in the holy mount." (2 Pet. 1:18). The kingdom of God came with power and glory at the transfiguration, not at Pentecost. The disciples witnessed this in a vision. (Matt. 17:9).
2. This passage affords evidence that the kingdom of God is not the New Testament "church" as is taught by the Church of Christ.¹ The fact that the kingdom of God came at the transfiguration before Christ had died indicates that the term kingdom is not synonymous in this passage with the "church" said to have been set up at Pentecost.

LUKE 17:20,21 " . . . he answered them and said, The kingdom of God cometh not with observation: Neither shall they say, Lo here! or, lo there! for, behold, the kingdom of God is within you."

PROBLEM: These verses are long-time favourites with those who hold that the kingdom of God is the "church" or the spiritual reign of God in the hearts of believers. The language, "cometh not with observation" is taken as proof that the kingdom will not come with the return of Christ accompanied by the "signs of the times". The "kingdom of God is within you" is considered evidence that the kingdom of God is spiritual and not political in character.

SOLUTION:

1. In what sense could the kingdom be within the Pharisees to whom Jesus was speaking? (vs. 20). It was the Pharisees who were indicted by the Lord, " . . . within ye are full of hypocrisy and iniquity".

¹ "The kingdom of God and the church are the same"; At Pentecost, The Holy Spirit came, Christ preached, repentance and remission declared in the name of Jesus; men and women saved. The church began, its birthday." Richard Rogers, "The Church of Christ: A Study of the First-Century Church", (Lubbock, Texas: Sunset School of Preaching), Mimeo., pp. 4,9.

(Matt. 23:28). How can this passage be used to prove that the kingdom of God is a spiritual reign in believers' hearts?

2. Those who cite these verses usually attempt to squeeze the Christadelphian into an "either—or" situation. Either the kingdom of God is spiritual or it is political. This dichotomy is unscriptural. The kingdom clearly refers to a divine political rulership in Dan. 2:44; 7:22, 27; for example. But the "kingdom" is also used of Christ himself. When Spirit powers of the Kingdom Age were exercised, or Jesus was present, it is spoken of as the "coming nigh of the kingdom". Note the following passages:
 - a) "But if I with the finger of God cast out devils, no doubt the kingdom of God is come upon you." (Lk. 11:20).
 - b) "And heal the sick that are therein, and say unto them, the kingdom of God is come nigh unto you." (Lk. 10:9, cf. vs. 11).
 - c) ". . . and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Spirit, and have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come." (Heb. 6:4,5).
3. The intended sense of the passage is conveyed in the marginal rendering, "the kingdom of God is among you" or "in the midst of you", (R.S.V.). Jesus, the embodiment of the principles of the kingdom—the nucleus of the kingdom—and with the powers of the kingdom, is said to be the kingdom of God.¹
4. In the context of this passage, the Pharisees asked about the restoration of the kingdom to Israel (the hope of the Jews—Acts 1:6). Jesus replied by using the kingdom in a sense synonymous with himself. (This is indicated by the subsequent verses concerning his coming). The first advent of Jesus was not "with outward show" (A. V. marginal rendering) or "narrow watching." It was said of God's Royal Majesty: "A bruised reed shall he not break, and smoking flax shall he not quench, till he send forth judgment unto victory." (Matt. 12:20). When Christ comes the second time, he will come with outward show: "Behold he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him: and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him." (Rev. 1:7). It is at this time that the kingdom will be established, and God will ultimately "perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and . . . remember his holy covenant; The oath which he sware to our father Abraham". (Lk. 1:72,73).

¹ Hence, the close association in the Gospels of the "king" and the "kingdom". Note the following parallels:

- a) "Behold thy King cometh . . . Hosanna to the Son of David" (Matt. 21:5,9 cf. Zech. 9:9).
- b) "Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord . . . Blessed be the kingdom of our father David" (Mark 11:9,10).
- c) "Blessed be the king that cometh in the name of the Lord" (Luke 19:38).

JOHN 18:36 "Jesus answered, My kingdom is not of this world: if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews: but now is my kingdom not from hence."

PROBLEM: The Church of Christ interprets this verse to mean that Christ's kingdom has nothing to do with him reigning from David's throne on the earth, but is rather a spiritual kingdom operating through the "church" since Pentecost.

SOLUTION:

1. The Church of Christ reads, "My kingdom is not of this world" as synonymous with, "My kingdom is not of this earth". But "world" and "earth" are not interchangeable. The world Jesus referred to was the constitution or order of things.¹ Certainly, Jesus had neither part nor lot in the world of the Pharisees and the Romans. As Jesus continued, "my kingdom is not from hence" i.e., my kingdom is not from this place. The use of the word "world" is demonstrated repeatedly in John 17:
 - a) "... I pray not for the world, but for them which thou hast given me; for they are thine." (Jn. 17:9). Clearly in this reference, "world" refers to those who were not followers of the Lord.
 - b) "And now I am no more in the world, but these are in the world, and I come to thee." (Jn. 17:11). Jesus was still on the literal earth but he was not a part of the order of things on the earth. (Cf. 1 Jn. 2:15,16,17).
 - c) "I have given them thy word; and the world hath hated them, because they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." (Jn. 17:14). The world that hated the disciples was the world of the Pharisees. The disciples were still in the literal world, but not part of its constitution or order.²
 - d) See also vs. 14-18.
2. Christ's kingdom is "not of this world" because it is a kingdom from heaven. Its constitution or order is heavenly in origin—designed from the "foundation of the world". (Matt. 25:34). When the disciples thought that the kingdom should immediately appear, (Luke 19:11) he explained to them in a parable that the nobleman had first to go into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom and then to return (Luke 19:12). Jesus will return to receive his kingdom, as the prophets have written:
 - a) "Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." (Psa. 2:8).

¹ Young gives the meaning of "kosmos" translated "world" in the A.V., as "arrangement, beauty, world". Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965).

² The Apostle Paul uses "kosmos" in a similar way when he writes to the Ephesians: "And you hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins; wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this world . . . the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience". (Eph. 2:1,2). The contrast is between two orders or constitutions.

- b) "And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed . . . And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him." (Dan. 7:14,27).
-

ACTS 15:14-17 "Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name. And to this agree the words of the prophets; as it is written, After this I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up: That the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles, upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord, who doeth all these things."

PROBLEM: The Church of Christ reasons that since James quotes the words of Amos 9:11,12 to show that salvation has rightly been preached to the Gentiles, the tabernacle of David must have been established at Pentecost or shortly thereafter with the preaching of the Gospel to the Gentiles. It is then concluded that David's tabernacle must be the spiritual reign of Christ in the believer's heart which will find its ultimate fulfillment in heaven.

SOLUTION:

1. When Acts 15:14-17 is cited with the interpretation outlined in the problem, the onus of proof must rest with those who assert. The following questions, therefore, require Scriptural answers:
 - a) If David's tabernacle were established in heaven, why was David asleep and in his sepulchre on the Day of Pentecost? (Acts 2:29, 34).
 - b) When was the tabernacle of David first built?
 - c) When did it fall?
 - d) Where are the ruins?
 - e) Who will build it again?
 - f) Where will it be built?
2. Proof that David's tabernacle was not restored at Pentecost is indicated from the context of Amos 9. Note the following:
 - a) " . . . the plowman shall overtake the reaper, and the treader of grapes him that soweth seed . . . " (Amos 9:13). The preaching of the Gospel to the Gentiles did not affect the fertility of the Palestinian soil. In fact, to the contrary, the land was about to be subjected to centuries of desolation as foretold in Lev. 26:33,34,-35,43.¹

- b) "And I will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be pulled up out of their land . . ." (Amos 9:15). In A.D. 70 the Jews were uprooted, expelled and the land made desolate. This passage can only be fulfilled when Christ returns to the Mount of Olives. (Zech. 14:4). This is proven by the fact that Zechariah states that a future invasion of Jerusalem will occur in which half of the population will go into captivity. (Zech. 14:1-5).
4. James paraphrased the Septuagint translation of the Hebrew Old Testament Scriptures.² He demonstrated to the council that it was perfectly acceptable to preach to the Gentiles since prophetically God had declared that Gentiles would be encompassed within the divine plan of salvation. In support of this James selected Amos 9. The restoration of the tabernacle of David, he pointed out, required that the residue of men "upon whom my name is called" be encompassed. If the Gentile, therefore, was to be encompassed in the restoration of David's tabernacle, who then could question the preaching of the Gospel to the Gentiles? It is apparent, however, that the actual restoration of David's tabernacle awaits the restoration of the kingdom when the Messiah returns.

ROM. 14:17 "For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Spirit."

PROBLEM: The Church of Christ argues that the kingdom cannot be political in nature since the Apostle says that the kingdom is righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Spirit. Hence, the kingdom must be the "church".

SOLUTION:

1. The passage does not state that the kingdom of God is the "church", and for the Church of Christ argument to stand, it must be shown by its expositors that the language used in this passage is incompatible with belief in a future political kingdom. But can this be done? It cannot. Consider the evidence:

¹ "The suppression of Bar Cochba's insurrection, A.D. 135 marks the final desolation of Judaea, and the dispersion of its inhabitants. The whole of Judaea was made like a desert; about 985 towns and villages lay in ashes, 50 fortresses were razed to the ground; the name of Jerusalem itself was changed into 'Aelia Capitolina' . . . from entering which (or even viewing from a distance) every Jew was strictly forbidden on pain of death." H. W. Hathaway, The Bible Today and You, (London: "The Dawn" Book Supply, 1962), p. 72. Hadrian, after his suppression of Bar Cochba's revolt, attempted to obliterate the city of Jerusalem. The ruins which Titus had left were razed to the ground and the plough passed over the foundations of the temple as a symbol of perpetual desolation. (Cf. Micah 3:12). William Smith (ed.), A Dictionary of the Bible, (London: John Murray, 1863), p. 1015; also Henry Milman, The History of the Jews, (London: Dent, 1939), p. 132.

² The LXX reads as follows: "In that day I will raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen, and will rebuild the ruins of it, and will set up the parts thereof, that have been broken down, and will build it up as in the ancient days; that the remnant of men, and all the Gentiles upon whom my name is called, may earnestly seek me, saith the lord who does all these things." The Septuagint Version of the Old Testament with an English translation and with various readings and critical notes, (New York: Samuel Bagster and Sons, Ltd.).

- a) To say that the kingdom of God is righteousness, and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit, is not to say it is only these things. Other Scriptures refer to the kingdom as "breaking in pieces" and destroying "all . . . kingdoms". (Dan. 2:44). The two references are complementary. One provides what the other does not.
 - b) Baptized believers of the one Gospel come under the jurisdiction of the King of the kingdom. They are now in training for future rulership. (Rev. 2:26,27). Only upon a faithful completion of the training program can the believer expect to enter the kingdom. (2 Pet. 1:11; Matt. 25:31-46). Since believers are training for future rulership in the kingdom they are instructed to seek the kingdom and God's righteousness first. (Matt. 6:33). This means walking in righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Spirit for such blessings will constitute the kingdom. (Isa. 9:6,7). It is at the time of the establishment of the kingdom that ultimately those who mourn "shall be comforted" (Matt. 5:4); those "that hunger now shall be filled" (Luke 6:21) and those who "weep now shall laugh". (Luke 6:21).
2. It needs stressing with the Church of Christ that the believer is an heir of the kingdom (James 2:5), not a present possessor. It is only through "much tribulation" that the kingdom will be entered. (Acts 14:22). The kingdom of God is something to be entered, not by joining "the church", but by finishing the race which entry into the ecclesia begins. (1 Cor. 9:24; 2 Tim. 4:7,8 cf. vs. 1; Matt. 24:13; 2 Pet. 1:10,11).

1 COR. 15:25 "For he must reign, till he hath put all enemies under his feet."

PROBLEM: It is argued by the Church of Christ that since Christ is to put all things under his feet, he must now be reigning in his kingdom. When Christ returns, it is asserted, he comes to give the kingdom back to God, and not to receive it.

SOLUTION:

1. The text does not read: "he is reigning," but rather "he must reign." The time of the commencement of the reigning is not stated in verse 25, but this can be inferred from the context: "in Christ shall all be made alive . . . at his coming." (vs. 22,23 cf. 2 Tim. 4:1). The end of the reign is indicated by the abolition of death (vs. 26). This period is designated by Jesus himself to be 1,000 years. (Rev. 20:4-6)). Proof that death will not cease at Christ's second coming is indicated by the existence of mortal nations subsequent to his return. (See Zech. 14:4,9,12-19; cf. Isa. 65:17-20). The saints, however, will be immortal, having received their reward (Rev. 3:21; 2:26,27; 22:12).
2. That this is the correct interpretation of 1 Cor. 15, is indicated by Psalm 110:2,5,6 in which the Messiah is depicted as ruling in the midst of his enemies. The kingly reign emanates from Zion, not from heaven, (vs. 2).

EPH. 1:3 "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ."

EPH. 2:6 "And hath raised us up together, and made us sit in heavenly places in Christ Jesus."

PROBLEM: This passage is connected with Col. 1:13 and Rev. 5:9,10 by the Church of Christ in support of their teaching that Christ and the saints are now reigning in a spiritual kingdom.

SOLUTION:

1. The Church of Christ argument rests on a faulty interpretation of Rev. 5:9,10. The kings and priests of these verses could not have been reigning in a spiritual kingdom since Pentecost since the events depicted in the Revelation are said to be things which "must shortly come to pass". (Rev. 1:1). This must be future to about A.D. 96, and certainly many years after Pentecost. Furthermore, it is expressly stated elsewhere in Scripture that those who are alive and remain will not precede those who have fallen asleep (died). (1 Thess. 4:15 R.S.V.). The redeemed can only sing the song, therefore, after the resurrection at the last day. (See 2 Tim. 4:1; Matt. 25:31,34,46.) It can then be inferred that since the dead have not been raised, then the song of the redeemed has not yet been sung, and if the song of the redeemed has not yet been sung, then believers are not now reigning as kings and priests.
2. "Heavenly places in Christ Jesus" refers to status, and not to location or place. This can be shown from the following:
 - a) A contrast runs through the Epistle between the position of an alien and that of a believer in Christ. Note the following contrasts:

out of Christ	in Christ
—one is within the principalities and powers of heavenly places in the world (3:10; 1:21)	—one is in the heavenlies in Christ Jesus favoured with all spiritual blessings (1:3; 2:6)
—dead in trespasses and sins walking according to the course of this world, the spirit which works in the children of disobedience (2:1,2)	—made alive with Christ Jesus (2:6)
—without Christ, aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world (2:12)	—fellow citizens with the saints for an habitation of God through the Spirit (2:21,22)

These contrasts are ones of position or status, not of location (i.e., between heaven and earth as if to imply that believers were translated to heaven).

- b) "Heavenlies" ("heavenly places" A.V.) is used of political systems on the earth (3:10; 6:12—"high places" is translated from the same Greek word for "heavenlies"), as well as for exalted position of believers. It can be seen, therefore, that the word relates to position or status and not to location. Although believers are raised with Christ to the right hand of the Father, they are still on the earth, in Ephesus, Corinth, etc. They are transferred from the heavenlies of the world systems for the everlasting kingdom of His dear Son.
- 3. Rulership in God's kingdom is dependent upon the believer overcoming. A believer is raised to heavenly places in Christ Jesus upon his baptism. He is not, however, fitted to rule over the nations until he has suffered (2 Tim. 2:12) and "overcome". As Jesus put it: "And he that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations: And he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers: even as I received of my Father." (Rev. 2:26,27). Believers have never ruled the nations with a rod of iron. This privilege awaits the return of the King to reign in the midst of his enemies. (Psa. 110:1,2).

COL. 1:13 "Who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son . . ."

PROBLEM: Great stress is placed by the Church of Christ on the words "hath" and "into." It is argued that Colossian believers were already in the kingdom, implying that the kingdom must be the "church" which was set up at Pentecost.

SOLUTION:

1. The "church" was not set up at Pentecost. Stephen refers to the Israelites as the ecclesia¹. (Acts 7:38). Individuals in all dispensations who walked faithfully before God were members of Christ's ecclesia. It requires stressing that "the gospel was preached unto Abraham". (Gal. 3:8)².

¹ "Church" is translated from the Greek word, "ekklesia." It means "that which is called out." Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965). The Septuagint (the Greek translation of the Hebrew Old Testament Scriptures in the 3rd century B.C.) uses the Greek word, "ekklesia" nearly 100 times in the Old Testament. E.g. Deut. 4:10; 9:10; 10:4; 18:16 and 2 Chron. 30:13.

² The Church of Christ fails to appreciate the import of Jesus' ministry to "confirm the promises made unto the fathers" (Rom. 15:8). In part, this deficiency is due to a dismissal of the Old Testament as merely, "a part of God's eternal plan . . . only a preparation or 'tutor' to bring us to Christ (Gal. 3:24). The New Testament teaches that the Old Testament (or Old Law) was 'blotted out,' taken out of the way and nailed to the cross". Don Morris, "What is the Church of Christ?" booklet, (Abilene, Texas; Quality Printing Co., 1956), p. 4. A mistaken equation between the Mosaic Law and the Old Testament is part of the faulty foundation of Church of Christ doctrine. The Abrahamic Covenant can not be too strongly stressed with members of this religious group.

2. Believers are not changed into the kingdom, but for the kingdom.³ The preposition “eis” translated “into” in this verse is translated “for” in verse 16—“all things were created by him and for him”. The passage in question, therefore, can read: “Who delivered us from the dominion of darkness, and changed us for [not into] the kingdom of the Son of his love.” This reading is supported by a later reference, “. . . These only are my fellowworkers unto the kingdom of God . . .” (Col. 4:11). The companions of the Apostle were workers “unto”, not “in” the kingdom. (“Unto” is translated from the same Greek preposition “eis.”) This argument ought to be appreciated by the Church of Christ since their expositors in emphasizing the forgiveness of sins in baptism, stress that “eis” means “for” or “in order to” in Acts 2:38.
3. That this is the correct interpretation of this passage is supported by the following:
 - a) The status of a baptized believer is changed

from the power of darkness (1:13) alienation and an enemy in mind and wicked works (1:21) dead in sins (2:13)	to the power of the risen Christ (1:11) reconciliation (1:21), to be presented holy (1:22) dead with Christ to the flesh and rudiments of the world (2:20) spiritually circumcised (2:11,12)
--	--

under the old man with his deeds (3:9)

under the new man renewed in knowledge (3:10)

The effect of the change of status is to transfer the individual for the kingdom of God, the future “reward of the inheritance”. (Col. 3:24).
 - b) Paul speaks of the inheritance in other terms implying its future character:
 - i. “Knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance . . .” (Col. 3:24). But if, as the Church of Christ contends, that by being baptized, the believer enters the kingdom, then the Apostle could not speak of the future nature of the inheritance. Therefore, believers have not yet entered the kingdom.
 - ii. “When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory.” (Col. 3:4). Entrance into the glory is only given at the return of Christ, therefore believers cannot now be reigning “spiritually” since the promised thrones are thrones of glory. (cf. Rev. 3:21; Matt. 19:28).
3. Other references in the New Testament likewise indicate that the kingdom is the future inheritance of believers. Consider the following:
 - a) “. . . Then shall the king say unto them at his right hand, Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom . . .” (Matt. 25:34). The invitation to inherit the kingdom is only given after the Shepherd has divided the sheep from the goats. This has not yet happened, and many who now think they are sheep will in the future find out that they are goats. (Matt. 7:22-23).

³ It is translated this way by Benjamin Wilson, The Emphatic Diaglott: Containing the original Greek text of what is commonly styled the New Testament. (New York: International Bible Students Ass., Watch Tower Bible and Tract Soc., 1942 ed.).

- b) Believers are stated by James to be "heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him". (Jas. 2:5). A believer cannot both be a possessor and an heir of the same thing at the same time. The kingdom, therefore, must be a future possession.
- c) Peter wrote to believers emphasizing that the kingdom will only be entered by those who bring forth the fruits of the Spirit: "... if ye do these things ye shall never fall: for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." (2 Pet. 1:10). This statement of Peter indicates the future character of the kingdom of God and implies that believers are changed for the kingdom, but are not now in the kingdom.

1 PET. 2:9 "But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood . . ."

PROBLEM: This verse is connected with Rev. 5:10: "And hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth." It is then argued by the Church of Christ that since believers are a royal priesthood and are to be priests and kings in the kingdom, the kingdom must have been in existence at the time when Peter was writing.

SOLUTION:

1. Peter alludes to Exod. 19:5-6: "... if ye obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then shall ye be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people . . . And ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation . . ." But these words were spoken to Israel before they were established as a kingdom in the land of promise. Similarly, New Testament believers are spiritual priests (1 Pet. 1:5) offering up spiritual sacrifices before entering the land of promise.
2. In Rev. 5:10 the kingdom must be established at the time the saints are said to sing the song. This time must be future to A.D. 96 since the events of the revelation were expressly stated to be "things which must shortly come to pass." (Rev. 1:1).
3. Israelites under the Law were instructed that the "priest's lips should keep knowledge", and that the nation "should seek the law at his mouth" since he was "the messenger of the LORD of hosts". (Mal. 2:7). Similarly, a believer is born of incorruptible seed, by the word of God (1 Pet. 1:23), and is instructed to "desire the sincere milk of the word" that he may "grow thereby". (1 Pet. 2:2). As a priest of the Lord, his responsibility is "to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ" (1 Pet. 2:5), and to "shew forth the praises of him" who called him out of darkness into his marvellous light. (1 Pet. 2:9). But this priestly function is part of training for entry into the kingdom. As Peter put it: "... for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall; For so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." (2 Pet. 1:10,11).

REV. 1:9 "I John, who also am your brother, and companion in tribulation, and in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ . . ."

PROBLEM: The Church of Christ argues that for John to be in the kingdom requires that the kingdom must have been in existence. The passage is taken, therefore, to support the doctrine that the kingdom is the "church".

SOLUTION:

1. John wrote of the "things which must shortly come to pass". (Rev. 1:1,19). One of the subjects of his writing was the kingdom of God. He pointed out by revelation that it was not until the seventh angel sounded, and the second woe had passed that "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever". (Rev. 11:15). John was obviously not in this kingdom since the kingdoms of this world have not yet become the kingdom of God.
2. There is never a hint in Scripture that those in the literal kingdom will be in tribulation. The evidence is all the other way. Tribulation is presented as an essential preparation for entry into the kingdom. The Apostle Paul said, "We must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom." (Acts 14:22). He was not referring to entry into the ecclesia, since he was already in the ecclesia. (1 Cor. 12:13). Since John says that he was a companion in tribulation, in what sense, then, was he in the kingdom? Only in the sense that those who respond to the teaching of its King come under its training for future rulership.
3. John combines the language of fact and hope as one companion might say to another, "I am your friend in adversity and in prosperity". One does not infer that the companion must be in adversity and prosperity at the same time. Similarly, John was literally in tribulation, but he was only "in" the kingdom in so far as he was under training in hopeful anticipation that he would be in the kingdom in the future age when the kingdoms of the world become the kingdom of God and His Son.

REV. 5:10 "And hast made us unto our God kings and priests: "And we shall reign on the earth."

PROBLEM: It is argued that since the redeemed saints say thou hast made us kings and priests, therefore the kingdom must have been established at the time of writing (i.e., A.D. 96).

SOLUTION:

1. The interpretation outlined in the problem rests on a mistaken inference. The kingdom must be established at the time the saints are said to sing the song. This time must be future to A.D. 96 since the events of the revelation are expressly stated to be "things which must shortly come to pass." (Rev. 1:1).

2. Since those who “are alive and remain” will not precede those who are dead (1 Thess. 4:15), the redeemed can only sing the song after the resurrection at the last day—i.e., the day of Christ’s return and establishment of his kingdom. (2 Tim. 4:1; cf. Matt. 25:31,34,46).

COL. 3:16 “ . . . teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord.”

PROBLEM: It is first questioned, “Is it a good rule to follow that one ought to speak when the Bible speaks and to keep silent where it is silent?” If the answer to this question is “yes,” then Col. 3:16 is cited along with Eph. 5:19 and Heb. 2:12 to show that the New Testament is explicit, singing is never referred to accompanied by musical instruments. Therefore, it is argued, since it has already been agreed that one ought to keep silent where the Bible is silent, Christians will not have hymn singing accompanied by musical instruments. This conclusion is made an issue of faith, fellowship, and acceptance for eternal life among some Church of Christ assemblies.

SOLUTION:

1. The Church of Christ position is virtually an argument from silence. Since the Bible does not mention singing accompanied by musical instruments, therefore, it is argued, it is wrong. The onus is rather on the Church of Christ to demonstrate that it is forbidden.
2. It is interesting that this legalistic interpretation of Scripture brings problems for the Church of Christ in the following areas:
 - a) While musical instruments are decried, congregational singing is often commenced with the aid of a tuning fork or a pitch pipe, but neither of these devices are mentioned in the New Testament.
 - b) Four part harmony singing is not mentioned in the New Testament but it is a regular feature of Church of Christ worship today.
 - c) Contemporary hymns are sung by the Church of Christ but it is acknowledged that the tune structure of these hymns is not the same, for example, as the Hebrew chants sung in the first century.
3. The Greek word “psalmos,” means “a song of praise (on an instrument)”¹. Bullinger comments on the word as follows: “a touching, twang, e.g. of a bowstring; of stringed instruments, a playing, music; in later usage, a song as accompanied by stringed instruments . . .”² The denotation of the word “psalm” in Col. 3:16 is a complete refutation of the Church of Christ’s position. “Psalmos” is also used in Eph. 5:19 and 1 Cor. 14:26.

¹ Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965).

² Ethelbert W. Bullinger, A Critical Lexicon and Concordance to the English and Greek Words, (London: Samuel Bagster and Sons Limited, 1957), pp. 610, 611.

IMMORTALITY OF THE SOUL

PRELIMINARY POINTS

1. It is useful in discussion to lead the conversation by well-chosen questions which guide the disputant to the desired conclusion without having to tell him so. This approach reduces the "loss of face" which can be a barrier to further profitable discussion. This is especially true of discussion on the death state in which the loss of loved ones may prejudice a reasoned consideration of the evidence. The following questions are samples:
 - a) How can it be said that Christ brought immortality to light (2 Tim. 1:10) if man has been immortal since Adam?
 - b) How can immortality be sought for (Rom. 2:7) if it is already a present possession?
 - c) If Adam had an immortal soul, why was he thrust out of the garden that he might not "live forever"? (Gen. 3:22).
 - d) If the souls of the righteous go to heaven at death, why a resurrection? (Usually the reply is, "for the purpose of Judgment," but this implies that souls are rewarded first, and then judged!)
2. The doctrine of the immortality of the soul destroys the arguments whereby the New Testament writers affirm the resurrection of the dead.
 - a) "If Christ be not raised . . . then they which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." (1 Cor. 15:17,18). But how can these dead saints be said to be sleeping if their souls (the real saints) are already in heaven, and how can it be said that these saints would perish unless Christ be raised, if their immortal souls go to bliss at death?
 - b) The Apostle Paul said, "If after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantageth it me, if the dead rise not?" (1 Cor. 15:32). If the soul is immortal (and hence can enjoy heavenly bliss separated from the body) why does the Apostle stress "if the dead rise not"? Why the concern for the body if the soul can enjoy bliss without the body?

GEN. 35:18 "And it came to pass, as her soul was in departing, (for she died)."

PROBLEM: It is argued from this passage that at death the soul departs. Since it must depart to somewhere, the somewhere is said to be either heaven or hell.

SOLUTION:

1. To say that the souls of dying persons depart is to say nothing about whether or not the soul is immortal, or where, if any place, it might depart.
2. In everyday speech it is appropriate to say "X lost the sight in his right eye" or "X lost his hearing after the accident". To use these expressions is not to imply that the eyesight was removed to another location or that the hearing departed to another abode. Likewise, "her soul was in departing" does not imply that the soul went to heaven, hell or anywhere else. The expression is synonymous with "her life was ebbing".

3. The Hebrew word, "nephesh" rendered "soul" in this passage is translated "life" in one hundred other passages. E.g., Ex. 4:19; 21:23; 21:30.

1 SAMUEL 28 The Witch of Endor

PROBLEM: This passage is used by Spiritualists to give Scriptural support to their idea that living people can communicate with the souls of the "departed".

SOLUTION:

1. This passage provides evidence for neither "heaven going" nor "immortal soulism".
 - a) Samuel (a righteous man) came "up" out of the earth, not down from heaven. (vs. 15).
 - b) The witch saw an old man, not an intangible soul. (vs. 14).
 - c) Samuel said, "Why hast thou disquieted me . . . ?" This indicates that he was not enjoying the bliss of heaven, but rather the sleep of death. (cf. Job 3:17; Ecc. 9:5,10; Jn. 11 esp. vs. 11,24,25,44).
2. Some have suggested that this passage in Samuel is really a fake seance. The following evidence is usually given:
 - a) The king saw nothing.
 - b) The witch said that she saw an old man with a mantle. (vs. 14). This was an ambiguous description. Was Samuel the only old man to wear a mantle?
 - c) Samuel was buried at Ramah, not Endor. (1 Sam. 25:1). This explanation, however seemingly plausible, cannot be accepted because of its inability to explain the predictions made by Samuel, vs. 19.
3. A more convincing explanation to the events in this chapter is the following:
 - a) God raised Samuel for the occasion in order to rebuke a fool according to his folly.¹
 - b) This accounts for the precise predictions of verses 15-19, as well as the surprise of the witch (when "she cried with a loud voice", vs. 12), when suddenly confronted by an unexpected Samuel.
4. Two objections to this explanation must be considered:
 - a) Would God raise Samuel in these circumstances after instructing Israel: "Regard not them that have familiar spirits, neither seek ¹ God punished Saul with death. "So Saul died for his transgression which he committed against the LORD, even against the word of the LORD, which he kept not, and also for asking counsel of one that had a familiar spirit, to inquire of it; And inquired not of the LORD: therefore he slew him, and turned the kingdom unto David the son of Jesse." (1 Chron. 10:13,14).

after wizards, to be defiled by them. I am the LORD your God"? (Lev. 19:31). God could have used the witch as He did the lying prophet of Bethel. (1 Kings 13). In so doing, it no more implies sanction to the witch's activities than it does to Beelzebub in Jesus' allusion, (Matt. 12:27) or to the belief of the Pharisees in Luke 16:19-31.

- b) Samuel was buried at Ramah, not at Endor where the resurrection would have taken place. The rejoinder to this is simply that for God, there is no more difficulty in reassembling Samuel in Endor than to transport Philip from the Gaza Road to Azotus. (Acts 8:39-40).

1 KINGS 17:21 "And he stretched himself upon the child three times, and cried unto the LORD, and said, O LORD my God, I pray thee, let this child's soul come into him again."

PROBLEM: Only the hard pressed resort to this passage to prove the immortality of the soul. It is argued that when the child's soul left him, his immortal entity departed to heaven.

SOLUTION:

1. The passage neither states nor implies that the soul described is immortal or that it would depart to heaven. Such views must be read into this passage. They are assumptions for which this passage offers no support.
2. The personal pronoun "him" describes the lifeless body. If the real child was the immortal soul tabernacling in a mortal, earthly body, then the pronoun should have been descriptive of the soul and not (as it is) of the body.
3. It was not the child that had departed, neither was it the child which returned. The child was dead. He died when life was lost, he became living when life was restored. The Hebrew word, "nephesh" translated "soul" in this passage is translated "life" in Gen. 9:4; Lev. 17:11; Deut. 12:23.
4. If, as some argue, that the soul of the child went immediately to bliss in heaven, would it not have been better for the prophet to have left the soul of the child to enjoy bliss in heaven rather than to recall it to the travail of earthly life, and possible later consignment to the fires of hell?

Ecc. 12:7 "The spirit shall return unto God who gave it."

PROBLEM: This passage is cited as evidence that man's immortal spirit (or soul) leaves the body at death and returns to God.

SOLUTION:

1. The passage makes no distinction between "good" and "bad" spirits.
2. If the spirit is to return to God, it must have come from God. But who would suggest one has a conscious existence before the earthly life begins? Therefore, there is no reason to expect a conscious existence when this life ends.

3. The word, "spirit" (Heb. "ruach") is the same as in Ecc. 3:19 (Heb. "ruach", translated "breath"). Would any argue that beasts have, or are, immortal "spirits"?
4. The writer of Ecclesiastes emphatically teaches the mortality of man. (See Ecc. 9:5,6,10; 3:19,20).

MATT. 10:28 "And fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul: but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell."

PROBLEM: This passage is cited by Pentecostals and Evangelicals as the foundaiton proof that man is really an indestructible soul clothed with an earthly body.

SOLUTION:

1. "Rather fear him which is able to *destroy*¹ both body and soul in hell" is proof that the soul is destructible and therefore, not immortal.
2. Since both soul and body can be destroyed in hell ("Gehenna"—the garbage dump outside the walls of Jerusalem), this indicates that the soul is as destructible as the body since both can be destroyed in the same place. Is this what the immortal soulist wants from this passage?
3. What is meant by "not able to kill the soul"? Simply, "Fear not (for an instant) them which kill the body, but are not able to destroy you utterly and finally." For the disciple, his life is "hid with Christ in God" (Col. 3:3) and although men may kill the body, in the resurrection the life will be given back to the body. (See Col. 3:4).
4. The Greek word, "psuche" translated "soul" in this verse has the meaning of "life". In Matt. 16:25, "psuche" is translated "life": "For whosoever shall save his life ["psuche"] shall lose it: and whosoever will lose his life ["psuche"] for my sake shall find it."² (In the R.S.V. "psuche" is translated "life" in vs. 26: "For what will it profit a man, if he gains the whole world and forfeits his life.") The similarity of context suggests that "life" in Matt. 10:28 should be read for "soul".

¹ It is sometimes argued that "destroy" means to "afflict" or "torment" but not to annihilate. The Greek word, "apollu" translated "destroy" means to "destroy utterly". Ethelbert W. Bullinger, A Critical Lexicon and Concordance to the English and Greek Testament, (London: Samuel Bagster and Sons Ltd., 1957), p. 220. There is not the slightest suggestion of torment in any of the places where "apollu" is translated "destroy" in the A.V. (e.g. Matt. 2:13; 12:14; 21:41. 22:7; 27:20.).

² Obviously if the words "immortal soul" were substituted for "life" in this reference, the result would be absurd.

LUKE 16:19-31 The rich man and Lazarus

PROBLEM: This is a stock passage cited by many religious groups to prove that souls of the departed go to torment in hell or bliss in heaven.

SOLUTION:

1. It is noteworthy that this passage mentions neither heaven nor souls.
2. Since this passage is cited as a literal description of actual events (and not as a parable) it is helpful to show that even the immortal soulist cannot take this passage as a literal description. The following is the evidence:
 - a) The passage speaks about bodies not souls. E.g., eyes, bosom (vs. 23) tip of finger and tongue (vs. 24).
 - b) Souls are said to be immaterial (the material body being left in the grave), how then could Lazarus (if really a soul) be carried by angels? (vs. 22).
 - c) The passage states that there was a great gulf fixed between Abraham and the rich man, yet they could both see and converse with each other (vs. 26). Is the great gulf to be taken literally?
 - d) Is heaven literally a place where conversations can be carried on between those enjoying bliss and those agonizing in hell?
 - e) How could Lazarus go literally to Abraham's bosom? Abraham (as now) was unquestionably dead and without his reward. (Heb. 11:8, 13, 39, 40).
3. It is sometimes asserted that parables are simple stories. It is then argued that they should be read simply, (i.e., literally), therefore Lazarus and the rich man must be historical figures and the narrative must have occurred as written. Such a view is not supported by the Master's statements about his parables:
 - a) "... Unto you it is given to know the mystery of the kingdom of God: but unto them that are without, all these things are done in parables: That seeing they may see, and not perceive; and hearing they may hear, and not understand . . . " (Mark 4:11,12).
 - b) "But without a parable spake he not unto them: and when they were alone, he expounded all things to his disciples." (Mark 4:34).
4. Stress is often placed upon words "there was a certain rich man" to emphasize the historical character of the language used. But in Luke 16:1 the parable of the unjust steward commences with the same language. Must this parable be read literally? (Similar language is used in other parables—see Lk. 12:16.)
5. Some take exception to Jesus using a false idea of the Pharisees¹ as a basis for his teaching. But it should be noted that the truth or falsity of the story in a parable is immaterial². The lesson conveyed through the story is the intended point. Jesus makes reference to Beelzebub,

¹ The Pharisaical character of the narrative is indicated by the rich man "praying" (vs. 27) to "father" Abraham (cf. the encounters between Jesus and the Scribes and Pharisees in Jn. 8:31-59). It is useful to have Josephus' description of Hades from his "Discourse to Greeks Concerning Hades": "Now as to Hades, wherein the souls of the righteous and unrighteous are detained, it is necessary to speak of it. Hades is a place in the world not

"the lord of the fly", but this does not commit him to a belief in a real "lord of the fly". (Matt. 12:27).

6. Further objection to reading this passage as a parable is argued on the grounds that Jesus did not definitely call it a parable. This objection is not valid since only 11 of the 26 parables recorded in Luke's gospel are actually named parables.
7. Religious bodies like the Church of Christ hold the view that disbelievers go to hell (left hand side of the divided state of hades) whereas idol worshippers go straight to the lake of fire. It should be pointed out that this view puts Abraham in the lake of fire and not in hades since it is recorded that Abraham "was gathered unto his people" (Gen. 25:8) and his people were idol worshippers. (Joshua 24:2).
8. In an effort to support their interpretation of Luke 16, Church of Christ preachers assert that bodies never go to hades. This assertion is false. In Acts 2:27, 31 the writer cites Psa. 16:10 where the Hebrew word for "hell" is "sheol". The Hebrew parallelism (where the writer expresses the same thought in slightly different words) of verse 10 indicates that "thou wilt not leave my soul in hell" is equivalent to, "neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption". Clearly then, "my soul" is synonymous with "Holy One". Therefore, bodies are placed in hades.
9. Although the issue to be settled in a consideration of this passage is whether or not it provides support for the doctrine of the immortality of the soul and heaven the place of reward for the righteous, it is useful to be able to explain what the passage does mean. The following is a suggested exposition:
vs. 14,15—The Pharisees deride Jesus after his attack on materialism. The Pharisees were noted for their asceticism³ regarding externals, but Jesus pointed out their covetous designs.

regularly finished; a subterranean region, where the light of this world does not shine . . . This region is allowed as a place of custody for souls, in which angels are appointed as guardians to them . . . the just are guided to the right hand, and are led with hymns sung by the angels appointed over that place, unto a region of light . . . with whom there is no place of toil, no burning heat, no piercing cold, . . . while they wait for that rest and eternal new life in heaven, which is to succeed this region. This place we call The Bosom of Abraham. But as to the unjust, they are dragged by force to the left hand, by the angels allotted for punishment, no longer going with a good will . . . Now those angels that are set over these souls, drag them into the neighbourhood of hell itself; who, when they are hard by it, continually hear the noise of it, and do not stand clear of the hot vapour itself; but when they have a nearer view of this spectacle, as of a terrible and exceeding great prospect of fire, they are struck with a fearful expectation of a future judgment, and in effect punished thereby . . . even hereby are they punished; for a chasm deep and large is fixed between them; insomuch that a just man that hath compassion upon them, cannot be admitted, nor can one that is unjust, if he were bold enough to attempt it, pass over it." Josephus Complete Works, trans. by William Whiston, (Grand Rapids, Michigan: Kregel Publications, 1966), p. 637.

2 Similarly, the Old Testament parable of Jotham (Judges 9:7-15) does not require the trees of the forest to enter into political discussion and finally invite a bramble to be king.

3 See, for example, Matt. 9:14; 23:23; Lk. 18:12. Also Flavius Josephus, Antiquities, Book XVIII, chapt. 1, section iii, pp. 376,377 in Josephus: Complete Works, trans. by William Whiston, (Grand Rapids: Kregel Publications, 1966).

vs. 16—The Pharisees had long been locked with the Sadducees in a bitter disputation over the oral and written traditions. Their conduct had resulted in the exclusion of publicans, sinners, and the Lazarus class from spiritual food which ought to have been provided by the chief priests. They had taken away the key of knowledge. (Lk. 11:52, 46). But with the coming of John, the kingdom was preached and every man pressed into it. (See Lk. 7:29, 30). Even the Pharisees and Sadducees, desirous no doubt, of a kingdom in which they would be prominent, went out to hear John. They were indicted as a “generation of vipers” and told to “bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance.” (Matt. 3:2, 7-10).

vs. 17—But lest it be thought that God’s demands on men had slackened with the teaching on the kingdom and every man pressing into it, Jesus told his hearers, “It is easier for heaven and earth to pass, than one tittle of the law to fail.”

vs. 18—Jesus cites the teaching of the law on adultery as an example, and in so doing, condemns the notorious loose-living of the Sadducees.

vs. 19—“Which was clothed” is in the imperfect tense and means to be habitually clothed.

—Purple is a colour which is used in Scripture for the following: priestly garments (Ex. 39:2,24,29); royal apparel (Judges 8:26; Esther 8:15); and is synonymous with wealth in Rev. 18:16.

—Fine linen was used extensively in the priestly garments such as the ephod, robe, mitre, and bonnet. (Ex. 39). Linen is used as a symbol of wealth in Rev. 18:16.

Only one class in Israel was habitually clothed in purple and linen and fared sumptuously *every day*⁴—the High Priestly class of Sadducees.⁵ Caiaphas is likely the unnamed (for obvious reasons) rich man.

vs. 20—Lazarus is the only character personally named in the parables of Jesus, implying that Lazarus must have been known to the audience. This parable of Jesus might have been uttered after he received news of the death of his friend, Lazarus. The parable was given at Perea, east of the Jordan at Bethabara (where news of Lazarus’ death came to him, Jn. 11:6 cf. Jn. 10:40; 1:28). It was an easy day’s journey from Bethabara to Bethany.

vs. 21—Lazarus was typical of all Jews of his day. They were deprived of even the most meager crumbs of the bread of life from the rich man’s table. (i.e., High Priestly class, but Caiaphas in particular).

4 Some interpretations suggest that the rich man represented the Pharisees, but the Pharisees did not fare sumptuously every day. They generally lived austere lives and fasted twice a week. (Lk. 18:12).

5 At the time of Jesus the Sadducees had much political power derived from their wealth, office and political connections. They were unpopular with the public because of their avaricious spirit. Special hatred was felt toward the chief representative, the family of Annas. See Flavius Josephus, Antiquities, Book XIII, chapt. 10, section vi, p. 281 and Book XVIII, chapt. 1, section iv, p. 377, also Wars of the Jews, Book 11, chapt. 8, section xiv, p. 478, in Josephus: Complete Works, trans. by William Whiston, (Grand Rapids: Kregel Publications, 1966). The Sadducees had installed booths in the outer court of the temple in Jerusalem which increased their wealth by currency exchange and sale of sacrificial animals. (See John 2:13-16; Matt. 21:12,13.).

However much Lazarus might patiently await the rich man's (Caiaphas) condescension, the High Priest was incapable of dispensing even spiritual crumbs.⁶

vs. 22-31—Lazarus dies and in the parable, the premature death of Caiaphas is made to follow. In hades they meet but in situations reversed. Caiaphas requests Abraham (with whom he claimed privilege by virtue of ancestry, (Matt. 3:9) to warn his five brothers. The five brothers are the five brothers-in-law of Caiaphas, the Sadduceean High Priest.⁷ Caiaphas was son-in-law of Annas who had been deposed by the Romans for openly resisting them. The request is refused on the grounds that they had not heard Moses and the Prophets(e.g. in their attitude to adultery and resurrection, Luke 16:18; 20:27-38) nor would they respond if one rose from the dead. The resurrection of Lazarus further incensed the Pharisees, chief priests⁸ and Caiaphas who feared their loss of power. (Jn. 11:47-57).

10. The parable condemns Caiaphas the chief Shepherd of Israel for his selfish irresponsibility in neglecting the spiritual and material needs of Jews in Israel. Lazarus represents this neglected class.⁹ The parable is a further indictment of the Sadducees (who denied the resurrection of the body and were about to reject the miraculous resurrection of Lazarus) in their disbelief of Moses and the prophets. The parable is presented in terms of the popular belief of the Pharisees about the death state.

ACTS 7:59 "Lord Jesus receive my spirit"

PROBLEM: It is frequently understood from this passage that Stephen expected Jesus Christ to immediately receive his "immortal soul" in heaven.

SOLUTION:

1. If the real Stephen was the spirit, what is the "he" of verse 60 which "fell asleep"? The personal pronouns are associated with the body,

6 The Lazarus class was like the Gentile dogs who hoped for crumbs from their Master's table. (Matt. 15:27).

7 Josephus records, "Now the report goes, that this elder Ananus [Annas] proved a most fortunate man; for he had five sons, who had all performed the office of a high priest to God, and he had himself enjoyed that dignity a long time formerly, which had never happened to any other of our high priests . . ." Antiquities, Book XX, chapt. 9, section i, p. 423. Elsewhere, Josephus gives the names of Annas' five sons as Eleazar, Jonathan, Theophilus, Matthias, and the younger Annas.

8 If as Josephus records, the five brothers were to succeed to the high priesthood after Caiaphas, they would be the most eminent members of "the chief priests." (In addition to the ex-high priests the title was applied to members of those families from which the high priests were usually chosen.) See J. D. Douglas ed., The New Bible Dictionary, (Grand Rapids: Wm. B. Eerdmans Book Co., 1962), p. 1124.

9 Ezekiel's condemnation of the priests of his day appropriately underlies Jesus' censure of Caiaphas: "Woe be to the shepherds of Israel that do feed themselves! should not the shepherds feed the flocks? Ye eat the fat, and ye clothe you with the wool, ye kill them that are fed: but ye feed not the flock. The diseased have ye not strengthened, neither have ye healed that which is sick . . . but with force and with cruelty have ye ruled them." (Ezek. 34:2-4).

not something inside the body. This use of the pronouns is fatal to the idea that the real Stephen was an immortal essence within the body.

2. "Sleep" is a scriptural expression describing the unconsciousness of death and implying the waking at the Resurrection Day. For this there is unimpeachable evidence in John 11: esp. vs. 11, 14, 24, 25, cf. Dan. 12:2; 1 Cor. 15:6,18. The fact that Stephen fell asleep indicates he did not immediately go to his reward. (See 1 Thess. 4:13-16.)
3. One could handle the problem of what Stephen meant by the expression "Lord Jesus receive my spirit" by taking the following approach:
 - a) Show scripturally when the righteous (and hence Stephen) will receive their reward, e.g., 1 Cor. 15:22-23.
 - b) Indicate the uses of spirit—e.g., that the "spirit" is not the immortal part of man, but the life-power which God gives. (Job 34:14,15; Gen. 7:21,22,—"the breath of the spirit of life" mg.).
 - c) Then finally show that Stephen had the confidence that as God sent forth His Spirit and raised Jesus, likewise he would be raised. In the death state Stephen's life would be "hid with Christ", and when Christ appears the second time, then Stephen would appear with him in glory. (Col. 3:3,4).
4. Jesus uttered similar words to those of Stephen, "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit". (Luke 23:46). But Christ went to hell¹, not heaven. (Acts 2:27; cf. John 20: 17 "I am not yet ascended to my Father").

1 THESS. 5:23 "Spirit and soul and body"

PROBLEM: It is inferred from this verse that one has a soul and spirit.

1. The words, "spirit" ("pneuma") and "soul" ("psuche") are used in a variety of ways in Scripture. However, they are never referred to as conscious immortal entities within man.
2. It is likely that in the passage under consideration by "spirit" is meant "mind"², and by "soul" is meant "life". The expression, "spirit and soul and body" is synonymous with the whole person. Consider the following:
 - a) Spirit, soul and body are synonymous with the whole person since the preceding words, "And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly" imply a parallelism between the two expressions.
 - b) The word "spirit" is used elsewhere by the Apostle Paul as synonymous with the "mind". For example:
 - i) "For I verily, as absent in body, but present in spirit . . ." (1 Cor. 5:3).

¹ The Greek word "hades" translated "hell" in Acts 2:27 simply means "the grave". This can be proven from other passages which state that after his crucifixion, Jesus was placed in the tomb. (Matt. 12:40; Acts 10:38-40; 1 Cor. 15:4-5. "Hades" is translated "grave" in 1 Cor. 15:55.

² J. B. Phillips in his translation renders the Greek word "pneuma" (translated "spirit" A.V.) in this verse by "mind". J. B. Phillips, The New Testament in Modern English, (London: Geoffrey Bles, 1960).

- ii) "That ye stand fast in one spirit, with one mind . . . " (Phil. 1:27).
- iii) See also 1 Cor. 7:34; 2 Cor. 7:1.
- c) The word "soul" is used elsewhere by the Apostle for "life". For example:
 - i) "So being affectionately desirous of you, we were willing to have imparted unto you not the gospel of God only, but also our own souls, because ye were dear unto us." (1 Thess. 2:8).³
 - ii) "Moreover I call God for a record upon my soul . . . " (2 Cor. 1:23).
- 3. A corpse is a body without life. An idiot is a body with a soul (life), but with only an improperly functioning spirit (mind). It is the person with spirit and soul and body—the whole person, which Paul prays may be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ."
- 4. If the body is destroyed, then necessarily the life and mind cease to function. In death there is a dissolution of being. (Ecc. 9:5,6; Psa. 146:4).

HEB. 12:23 "The spirits of just men made perfect."

PROBLEM: It is argued by Evangelicals that the "spirits of just men made perfect" refers to the immortal spirits (or souls) of the departed.

SOLUTION:

1. The same writer to the Hebrews expressly states that the great cloud of witnesses catalogued in the 11th chapter, "having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise: God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect." (Heb. 11:39,40). In chapter 12 the writer uses the perfect tense to describe an event yet future, but assured—"the Spirits of just men made perfect". This mode of expression is a common feature of Scripture and is clearly stated in Rom. 4:16,17. (See also Rev. 13:8—Christ was not literally slain from "the foundation of the world"; Matt. 25:34—the kingdom is not yet established.)
2. When will the spirits of "just men" be made "perfect"? Not until after resurrection and judgment when immortality is granted. (2 Cor. 5:10 cf. Phil. 3:9-12—"Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect"). A person is justified (made righteous) by appropriating the great salvation of the gospel at his baptism. (Rom. 6:3,4 cf. vs. 17,18; 4:24). The law of Moses could not make the offerer of sacrifices perfect (Heb. 10:1). but Christ "by one offering . . .

³ Benjamin Wilson translates the Greek word "psuche" (translated "soul" A.V.) in this verse by "lives". Benjamin Wilson, The Emphatic Diaglott: Containing the Original Greek Text of What is Commonly Styled the New Testament, (Brooklyn, New York: International Bible Students Ass., 1942).

hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified.” (Heb. 10:14). The spirit or life of the believer is not made perfect until he has endured unto the end, overcoming the world. (Matt. 24:13; Rev. 2:26,27), but God can speak of believers coming unto the spirits of “just men made perfect” since known to Him are all His works from the “beginning of the world.” (Acts 15:18). In actuality the spirits will not be made perfect until the granting of immortality at the Lord’s return.

3. It is difficult to define precisely the meaning of “spirits” in this passage. “Lives” seems to be a fair approximation. In Heb. 12:9 the writer states: “Shall we not much rather be in subjection unto the Father of spirits and live?” This verse appears to allude to Nu. 16:22; 27:16. The intent of these references being that God is the giver of life, and therefore must be respected when he chastens or punishes. But the life of a person is manifested in the kind of life lived (i.e., the character of the person), hence “spirits made perfect”, refers to the lives of persons made perfect.

1 PET. 3:19 “The spirits in prison.”

PROBLEM: This passage is frequently cited by Mormons and Evangelicals to prove the conscious existence of the dead as “disembodied spirits”. It is alleged that when Jesus died, he preached to these spirits in prison.

SOLUTION:

1. How can the “spirit” go back to God who gave it, (Ecc. 12:7), and yet be imprisoned in hades?
2. The word “spirits” never signifies disembodied persons in Scripture.¹ Even angels who are called “spirits”, (Heb. 1:7) are bodily beings. Lot called them “men”, (Gen. 19:1,8) and Jacob wrestled with one of them. (Gen. 32:24). Similarly, the Apostle John admonishes believers to “try the spirits”, (1 John 4:1) but the same verse identifies the spirits with false prophets.
3. “Spirits in prison” is an expression for a person in bondage to sin and death. Prison has this association in the following passages:
 - a) “I the LORD have called thee [Christ] . . . to open the blind eyes, to bring out the prisoners from the prison, and them that sit in darkness out of the prison house.” (Isa. 42:6,7).
 - b) “The Spirit of the Lord GOD is upon me; because the LORD hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; he hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound.” (Isa. 61:1).
 - c) See also Eph. 2:1,2—Prior to becoming believers, Paul told the Ephesians: “And you hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins: Wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience."

¹ Lk. 24:37,39 might be cited as an exception since the Greek word “pneuma” signifies a spirit in this passage. The context, however, offers no proof that spirits actually exist. The disciples mistakenly thought they had seen a spirit when they actually saw the risen Master.

4. The Mormon and Evangelical interpretations of this passage are shown to be false since they both require an opportunity for dead persons to respond to instruction. Scripture is clear: "It is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment." (Heb. 9:27); "They that go down into the pit cannot hope for thy truth." (Isa. 38:18): "The dead know not any thing". (Ecc. 9:5). The "dead" in 1 Pet. 4:6 were alive when preached to by Noah, but dead at the time of Peter's writing.
5. The "spirits in prison" proves too much for the Mormons. Mormons practise proxy baptisms only for relatives who die in ignorance of the gospel. The "spirits in prison" however, were not ignorant, but disobedient, condemned by the preaching of Noah. (1 Pet. 3:19,20 cf. 2 Pet. 2:5; Heb. 11:7). Why was Christ's mission confined to those disobedient in the days of Noah (who had a preacher—Noah) at the expense of all the ignorant who died before and after the time of Noah?
6. The passage does not state that Jesus personally preached to the spirits in prison, but rather, "by which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison." (vs. 19). It was the "Spirit of Christ" in Noah which preached to the spirits in prison (live persons in bondage to sin and death) many years before Jesus was born in the days of Herod the King. (Matt. 2:1). By means of the Holy Spirit given to the prophets (2 Pet. 1:21) they were able to speak as though they were Christ. Consider the following passages:
 - a) "For thou wilt not leave my soul in hell; neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption." (Psa. 16:10 cf. Acts 2:26-27).
 - b) "Behold, I and the children whom the LORD hath given me." (Isa. 8:18 cf. Heb. 2:13)).
 - c) "A body hast thou prepared me." (Heb. 10:5 cf. Psa. 40:6).
Literally there was no flesh and body of Christ when these words were written. The Spirit of Christ in the prophets enabled them to testify "beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow." (1 Pet. 1:11). Noah, "a preacher of righteousness" (2 Pet. 2:5) "being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house; by the which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith." (Heb. 11:7).
7. Peter by inspiration draws a figure. He says "the like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us . . ." (1 Pet. 3:21). The whole human race stands as a community of prisoners condemned to death on account of sin. Even while awaiting the inexorable judicial sentence they are "all their life-time subject to bondage". (Heb. 2:15). The way of escape from this prison is by baptism into Jesus Christ, the anti-typical ark. "For as many of you as have been baptised into Christ have put on Christ." (Gal. 3:27).

REV. 6:9 “I saw under the altar the souls.”

PROBLEM: This passage is quoted to support the teaching of Evangelicals that souls of the dead depart to heaven.

SOLUTION:

1. It is generally taught that souls which go to heaven enjoy a state of bliss, but this passage speaks of souls crying “with a loud voice.” (vs. 10).
2. Instead of this passage supporting the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, the context shows the passage to be directly opposed to it. The souls are given white robes. (vs. 11). Can immaterial souls be clothed?
3. The souls in this text are under the altar. Is this where immortal souls are said to reside?
4. It is a principle in Scripture that “the life of the flesh [soul, ‘nephesh’] is in the blood”. (Lev. 17:11). By personification, a slain person’s blood is said to “cry” or “speak”. (Gen. 4:10 cf. Heb. 12:24). The Revelation contains over 500 references to the Old Testament, and in this text the allusion is to the blood of the burnt offering which was poured at the base of the brasen altar. (Lev. 4:7). The passage, therefore, refers to the lives of martyrs given as a testimony to their faith. (Paul makes a similar allusion: “For I am already on the point of being sacrificed [‘poured out’¹]; the time of my departure has come.” (2 Tim. 4:6 R.S.V.)

MATT. 5:12 “Great is your reward in heaven.”

PROBLEM: This passage is understood by Evangelicals and Pentecostals to teach that the righteous go to heaven at death, or are rewarded later in heaven.

SOLUTION:

1. If the reward is in heaven, then there are two possibilities:
 - a) The righteous go to heaven to obtain it.
 - b) The reward comes from heaven to the righteous (here on earth).
2. The following passages are conclusive—the reward comes to the righteous:
 - a) The reward is “reserved in heaven” (1 Pet. 1:4) “and when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away.” (1 Pet. 5:4).
 - b) “For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works.” (Matt. 16:27).
3. See also 1 John 5:11 cf. Col. 3:2-4 and Rev. 22:12.

¹ The Greek word, “spendomai” translated “offered” in the A.V. means, “to be poured out”. Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965).

MATT. 17:3 "And, behold, there appeared unto them Moses and Elias talking with him."

PROBLEM: This passage is used to prove that the reward of the righteous will be in heaven since Elijah, taken in a whirlwind, was still alive many hundreds of years later, and conversed with Jesus in the transfiguration.

SOLUTION:

1. It is assumed that Elijah lived from the time he was taken to heaven in a whirlwind until the time he appeared to Jesus in the transfiguration, but the passage does not state this to be the case. Moses was present, but he had been dead, (Deut. 34:5). Therefore, the fact that Elijah was alive (assuming that he was bodily present) at the transfiguration, is not in itself proof that he continued to live after he was taken to heaven in a whirlwind. He may have died and been raised for the occasion.
2. Even if Elijah was bodily present at the transfiguration, miraculously preserved since he was caught up in a whirlwind, his experience offers no grounds for present believers to expect a similar privilege. God has not promised to do for present believers what he did for Elijah.
3. There is evidence that Elijah was back on earth after he was taken away in the whirlwind. It can be shown that a letter was received by Jehoram, King of Judah, from Elijah, after Elijah was taken to heaven. Either the letter was written before he went to heaven and delivered by a messenger on earth (unlikely), or Elijah was "caught away" as was Philip from the Gaza Road to Azotas, (about 17 miles, Acts 8:39) for an unspecified purpose and returned to the earth. Consider the evidence:
 - a) Elijah had been taken to heaven in a whirlwind. (2 Kings 2:11).
 - b) Elisha had taken over the duties of Elijah in the reign of Jehoshaphat. (2 Kings 3:10,11).
 - c) Jehoram received a letter from Elijah, the prophet. (2 Chron. 21:1, 9-12). King Jehoram reigned after Jehoshaphat. (2 Chron. 21:1).
4. Elijah did not ascend to the heavens (the dwelling place of God)¹ since it is expressly stated: "no man hath ascended up to heaven." (John 3:13).
5. Matthew's account records Jesus' instruction to his disciples: "Tell the *vision*² to no man, until the Son of man be risen again from the dead." (Matt. 17:9). These words may mean simply, "Do not tell what you have seen", or they may imply that Elijah and Moses were not bodily present but what occurred, transpired as a subjective experience. A vision does not necessarily have objective reality (e.g. Acts 10:3; 10,

¹ "Heavens" is used in Scripture for the place where the birds fly (Gen. 7:23), where the stars are located (Gen. 1:16,17), and where God dwells (Psa. 115:16).

² The Greek word, "horama" means "a sight, vision". Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965). "Horama" is translated "sight" (Acts 7:31) in a context which requires objective reality—an angel really did appear to Moses "in a flame of fire in a bush". (Acts 7:30).

17; notice the contrast in Acts 12:9 where what was objective, was thought by Peter to be merely subjective), although it may, as when the Lord appeared to Paul on the road to Damascus (Acts 26:19 cf. vs. 13-18)³ and possibly when the women at the tomb of Christ saw a "vision of angels". (Luke 24:23 cf. vs. 4).

MATT. 22:32; LUKE 20:38 "God is not the God of the dead, but of the living."

PROBLEM: This verse is considered to be proof that Jesus meant to teach that Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob are alive in heaven.

SOLUTION:

1. Such reasoning indicates a complete disregard for the context. The conversation is between Jesus and the Sadducees who denied the resurrection of the body. Jesus said, "But as touching the resurrection of the dead . . ." (Matt. 22:31). The passage has nothing to do with immortal souls alleged to be in heaven.
 2. If Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are alive, as the immortal soulist asserts, how does Jesus' argument prove the resurrection of the dead?
 3. The essence of Jesus' argument is as follows: God is a God of living people and not of dead people, therefore the fathers must one day rise from the dead.
 4. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, although heirs of the same promise, "all died in faith, not having received the promises." (Heb. 11:13 cf. 8, 9, 39, 40).
-

LUKE 23:43 "And Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee To day shalt thou be with me in paradise."

PROBLEM: This passage is used principally by Evangelicals to prove the immortality of the soul and the departure of the "saved" to heaven at death.

SOLUTION:

1. This passage mentions neither souls nor heaven.
2. The thief did not request a place in heaven. He said, "Lord "Remember me when thou comest into ["in" not "into", R.S.V.] thy kingdom." (vs. 42). The same hope was expressed by the Apostle Paul. (2 Tim. 4:1,8). The thief was not thinking of "going to be with the Lord", he was requesting a place in the coming of a future event.
3. Jesus answered: "You ask me to remember you then, but I say unto you now . . ." (Luke 23:43). This repunctuation is not merely tinkering with the text. The Green word "semeron" translated "today", "this day” is used as a term of emphasis.¹ In the following references “semeron” qualifies the preceding verb: Lk. 2:11; 22:34; Acts 20:26; 26:29; 2 Cor. 3:14,15. Rotherham in his translation places the comma after “this day”² and there are a large number of passages in the Septuagint translation in which the Greek construction corresponds to that of Lk. 23:43: “I say unto you this day” corresponds to the emphatic, “I testify unto you this day”, e.g. Deut. 6:6; 7:11; 8:1; 10:13; 11:8,13,28.

³ In this verse a different Greek word, "optasia" is translated "vision". "Optasia" means, "a sight, apparition, vision". Ibid.

4. If the argument on repunctuation proves ineffective, the disputant can still be led to the desired conclusion by assuming that by “today”, Jesus meant the thief would go to paradise the day he died. But where did the thief go that very day? (Since the thief was promised a place with Jesus, by establishing where Jesus went the day he died, it follows that the thief went to the same place.) Most will quickly assert that Jesus went to heaven. The Christadelphian need only demand proof to show that this assertion is foundationless.
5. The disputant should be pressed for an explanation to the following passages:
 - a) Jesus said, “So shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth.” (Matt. 12:40 cf. Matt. 16:21). How could the Son of man be both in heaven and in the earth at the same time?
 - b) Jesus, after his resurrection, said “Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father.” (John 20:17).
6. Since Jesus lay dead in the grave on the day of his crucifixion, therefore this passage offers no proof for the immortality of the soul, nor for the belief that the thief went that day to heaven. The thief was with the Lord in the grave. By implication, if the expression “Verily I say unto thee, today shalt thou be with me in paradise” be read as meaning the thief went with Jesus to the grave, then the grave must be paradise. Is that what the immortal soulist wants?
7. Hopefully at this stage in the discussion the merit of repunctuation will have become evident. It remains to be shown that Jesus really did answer the thief’s request to be remembered in his kingdom. Paradise in Scripture is always associated with a place on earth, never in heaven. Consider the following:
 - a) Those who overcome will “eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God.” (Rev. 2:7). The allusion to the Garden of Eden is unmistakable. The Garden of Eden (paradise) is often used to describe the paradise-like condition of the earth in the kingdom of God. (See Gen. 13:10; Is. 51:3; Ezek. 36:35).
 - b) Paradise is translated from the word “paradeisos” which Bullinger says was used by the Greeks “to describe a large pleasure-garden

1 Bullinger repunctuates and comments as follows: “‘And Jesus said to him, Verily, to thee I say this day, with Me shalt thou be in Paradise.’ The words to-day being made solemn and emphatic.” Ethelbert W. Bullinger, A Critical Lexicon and Concordance to the English and Greek New Testament, 8th ed., (London: Samuel Bagster and Sons Ltd., 1957, p. 811.

2 Joseph Rotherham, The Emphasized Bible: A translation designed to set forth the exact meaning, the proper terminology, and the graphic style of the sacred original, (Grand Rapids, Michigan: Kregel Publications, 1967).

with trees, or park of an Eastern monarch.”³ The word itself, therefore, is descriptive of an idyllic place on earth, not in heaven.⁴

8. Jesus taught that eternal life is preceded by the resurrection and judgment at the last day.

- a) “For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works.” (Matt. 16:27).
- b) Those that have done good come forth “unto the resurrection of life . . . ” (Jn. 5:29). They are raised up at the “last day”. (Jn. 6:39,40,44,54).
- c) The righteous go “into life eternal” after the judgment. (Matt. 25:31-46).

The thief will receive his reward, therefore, at the last day, when Christ comes in his kingdom.

JOHN 14:2. “In my Father’s house are many mansions . . .”

PROBLEM: The “many mansions” are understood to refer to a dwelling place in heaven where the righteous depart at death.

SOLUTION:

1. The passage teaches nothing of the kind. Every reference to God’s house in Scripture is to His house on the earth. See Jn. 2:16; 2 Kings 20:5; Micah 4, esp. vs. 1,2. It is a false assumption to read into this passage that the Father’s house is in heaven.
2. The passage does not refer to literal mansions in the ordinary sense of the word mansion, for a mansion, by definition, is larger than a house. How then can one have mansions in a house? The simple solution is that the house referred to is a spiritual house. Consider the following passages:
 - a) “Ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ.” (1 Pet. 2:5).
 - b) “Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go no more out: and I will write upon him the name of my God . . . ” (Rev. 3:12). “And Moses verily was faithful in all his house, as a servant, for a testimony of those things which were to be spoken after; But Christ as a son over his own house [God’s house, R.S.V.]; whose house are we if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end.” (Heb. 3:5,6).
 - c) “Ye . . . are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone; In whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto an holy temple

³ Ethelbert W. Bullinger, A Critical Lexicon and Concordance to the English and Greek New Testament, 8th ed., (London: Samuel Bagster and Sons Ltd., 1957).

⁴ The Septuagint translation uses the Greek word “paradeisos” for the garden of Eden. (e.g. Gen. 2:8).

in the Lord: In whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit." (Eph. 2:19-22).

God's house is a spiritual one in which are many abiding places.¹

3. Heaven is not an unprepared place. It is the Father's throne (Psa. 115:16; Matt. 5:34) where his will is done. (Matt. 6:10). Christ is preparing a place for his followers by his High Priestly mediation in the house of God. (Heb. 3:1-6). Under God, he is building the house of believers, preparing the stones for right and left-hand places of honour in his kingdom; God being judge of their worthiness. Jesus said to the mother of Zebedee's children: "To sit on my right hand, and on my left, is not mine to give, but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared of my Father." (Matt. 20:23).
4. If Christ's disciples went to heaven at death, then Christ's assurance, "I will come again, and receive you unto myself" would be a separation and not a reunion. (Jn. 14:3).
5. Some have mistakenly interpreted the "going away" to refer to Christ's crucifixion, and the "coming again" to his resurrection. The correct interpretation is that Christ was going away to his Father, and would come again to the earth.² This can be shown from the following:
 - a) Jesus said, " . . . and as I said unto the Jews, Whither I go, ye cannot come; so now say I to you." (Jn. 13:33). Earlier Jesus had said to the Jews "Yet a little while am I with you, and then I go unto him that sent me. Ye shall seek me, and shall not find me: and where I am, thither ye cannot come." (Jn. 7:33,34). See also Jn. 8:21. Since God is in heaven (Matt. 6:9), Jesus must have been referring to his going away to heaven.
 - b) In Jn. 14:12, Jesus said, "I go unto my Father".
 - c) Also in Jn. 14:28, Jesus said, "I go unto the Father".
6. "I will come again and receive you unto myself" is interpreted by Evangelicals to mean that Christ comes to gather the saints together and take them to heaven. But nowhere is his reign spoken of as being in heaven. See Luke 1:32,33; cf. Dan. 2:44; Psa. 2:6 and Isa. 2:3.
7. It is sometimes pointed out that Jesus said to Peter, "Whither I go, thou canst not follow me now; but thou shalt follow me afterwards." (Jn. 13:36). From this verse it is implied that Peter at his death would follow Christ to heaven. Two points require stressing:
 - a) Peter was promised a place on the earth, not in heaven. "Then answered Peter and said unto him, Behold, we have forsaken all, and followed thee; what shall we have therefore? And Jesus said unto them . . . when the son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." (Matt. 19:27,28). Jesus will sit in his throne at ¹ The Greek word translated "mansions" is "moné" and means an "abode" or "abiding place". Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, 8th ed., (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965). "Moné" is translated "abode" in Jn. 14:23, and translated "abiding places" in John 14:2 R.V.

² The allusion in Jn. 14:1-3 appears to be that of the High Priest's atonement for the sin of the people. (Lev. 9). Likewise, Jesus must first offer the sacrifice, then present it in the Divine Presence and in due course come forth to bless the people in the name of the LORD. (Heb. 9:28). The literal going away requires a literal return.

Jerusalem (Lk. 1:32,33) when he returns. (See also Matt. 25:31,32).

- b) Jesus did not make contradictory assertions within the short space of four verses. It is known what John 13:36 does not mean. It does not mean that Peter would go to heaven. What does it mean? That Peter would follow his Master's death. Jesus told Peter what death he was to die. (Jn. 21:18,19).
-

2 COR. 5:8 "We are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord."

PROBLEM: This passage is a standard proof text, used by Evangelicals to prove that Paul's desire was to leave behind his mortal body and depart in the soul or spirit to be with Christ in heaven. The inference is drawn that all the saved will go to be with their Lord in heaven.

SOLUTION:

1. This passage is usually mis-quoted to read "to be absent from the body is to be present with the Lord." The Apostle says he is "willing rather to be absent from the body and to be present with the Lord." The former reading assumes an instantaneous transition from death to be with Christ, the latter allows for the interval of "sleep" in the grave, resurrection and judgment. The following passages indicate the teaching of the Apostle Paul:
 - a) Sleep of death—1 Cor. 15:6,18,20,51 (cf. Dan. 12:2); 1 Thess. 4:13,14.
 - b) Resurrection and judgment—2 Tim. 4:1,8; 2 Cor. 4:14 cf. 5:10.
2. To be "unclothed" does not mean to leave behind the mortal body and depart as an immortal soul or spirit. If it did, Paul would have desired to be "unclothed". But he says, "not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon that mortality might be swallowed up of life". (vs. 4).
3. Verse 10 needs forthright emphasis: "For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad." (vs. 10). Appropriate questions can be advanced on the basis of this verse. For example:
 - a) When does Scripture teach that believers must appear before the Judgment Seat?
 - b) What will faithful believers receive after judgment?
4. It requires stressing that an exposition of this passage must be in line with other expositions of the Apostle in his Epistles. This is a safe guide to follow since the Apostle Paul speaks of "things in which are some things hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest, as they do also the other scriptures, unto their own destruction." (2 Pet. 3:16).
5. Verse 1 provides the contrasts between "our earthly house of this tabernacle" which can be dissolved (temporary mortality) and "a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens" (the permanent immortality reserved with Christ, but to be brought at his return).¹

6. Verses 2-4 indicate that the interpretation of verse 1 is the correct one. Note the following:
 - a) "For we that are in this tabernacle do groan." (vs. 4). Paul groaned for the redemption of the body. "Even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body." (Rom. 8:23 cf. 2 Cor. 4:14). But when does the redemption of the body take place? Not at death for at death the body undergoes the very opposite of the process of "redemption". Not until the resurrection is the body raised to incorruption. (1 Cor. 15:53-55).
 - b) "Not that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life." (vs. 4). The Apostle Paul contrasts two states, mortality and life, (in 1 Cor. 15:44 he calls the two states "a natural body and a spiritual body") but he never desires disembodiment. "Mortality . . . swallowed up of life" (2 Cor. 5:4) is synonymous with his earlier words, "We shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump . . . for this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality." (1 Cor. 15:51-53).
7. The Apostle's manifest desire to be "absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord" was a desire to be free from the imperfections of mortality, (e.g. 2 Cor. 4:16-18) and to be with Christ in an immortal nature. The Apostle expresses this hope elsewhere. For example:
 - a) "But our commonwealth is in heaven, and from it we await a Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who will change our lowly body to be like his glorious body . . ." (Phil. 3:20,21 R.S.V.).
 - b) "Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood [i.e., mortality] cannot inherit the kingdom of God, neither doth corruption inherit incorruption." (1 Cor. 15:50 cf. 1 Cor. 15:19-22).

2 COR. 12:2-4 "Caught up to the third heaven . . . caught up into paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for a man to utter."

PROBLEM: This passage is pressed into service by Evangelicals for the following reasons:

- a) Since Paul's friend could exist without body, this proves that the real person is not the body, but the immortal soul within the body.
- b) Since Paul's friend was taken to be with his Lord in paradise (heaven), this implies that all the saved go to be with their Lord at death.

¹ See, for example, 1 Pet. 1:4,5; 2 Tim. 4:8 cf. 4:1. Col. 3:3.

SOLUTION:

1. Paul said that he wasn't sure if the man he knew was in the body or out of the body. (vs. 2,3). If the inspired Apostle didn't know for certain, how can this reference be cited to prove that one can, in fact, exist outside his body?
2. Two assumptions advanced in the problem require proof. These are as follows:
 - a) It is assumed that the man Paul knew died; the passage does not say so.¹ Until it is proven that he did die, there is no warrant for the sweeping generalization that the souls of any righteous dead persons go to heaven.
 - b) It is assumed that to be in the third heaven is to be "with the Lord". Until it is proven that to be in the third heaven is to be with the Lord, there is no warrant for asserting that the man Paul knew, or any, go "to be with their Lord" at the instant of death.
3. The contextual evidence strongly suggests that the man Paul knew was none other than Paul himself. Consider the evidence:
 - a) The Apostle says, "And lest I should be exalted above measure through the abundance of the revelations, there was given to me a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet me, lest I should be exalted above measure." (vs. 7). If the visions and revelations which occupy the preceding verses were those of the man Paul knew (and not Paul himself) why should the Apostle be chastened lest he be exalted above measure? Surely the concern ought to be for the recipient of the visions and revelations.
 - b) The Apostle Paul claims: "I am become a fool in glorying; ye have compelled me: for I ought to have been commended of you: for in nothing am I behind the very chiefest apostles, though I be nothing." (vs. 11). Such a comment is entirely appropriate if the subject of the glorying (vs. 1) has been Paul. It is difficult to see how such a comment follows from a consideration of the glory of a person other than Paul.
 - c) Paul's authority was being undermined in Corinth. (2 Cor. 10:10, 11; 11:4, 12-15). Even the ecclesia had demanded proof that Christ was speaking in him. (2 Cor. 13:3). The Apostle vindicates his rightful position in the following ways:
 - i. By an open attack on the adversaries. (2 Cor. 10:11,12; 11:4-5,13).
 - ii. By challenging the ecclesia to demonstrate his lack of integrity. (2 Cor. 11:7).
 - iii. By becoming a "fool" (2 Cor. 11:1,17; 12:11) in boasting of his accomplishments as a disciple. (2 Cor. 11:21-29).
 - iv. By citing personal acts of divine favour. (2 Cor. 11:30-33).

¹ Some Evangelicals, like the Gospel Hall, teach that the man Paul knew was Paul himself, but they speculate that the visions were received when he died by stoning at Lystra. The record in Acts does not state that Paul actually died—"having stoned Paul, drew him out of the city, supposing he had been dead." (Acts 14:19). If the Apostle were the victim of stoning to death, then it is certain that he did not receive any visions at this time since the "dead know not anything". (Ecc. 9:5 cf. Ps. 146:3,4).

- v. By recounting his personal privilege and glory in receiving visions and revelations. (2 Cor. 12:1-4).

It can be seen that if the man Paul knew was none other than Paul himself, then the appeal to visions and revelations is an integral part of the Apostle's argument. It is difficult to see how the experiences of glory of any other person would complement Paul's argument vindicating his authority in the Corinthian ecclesia.

4. "Whether in the body, or out of the body, I cannot tell: God knoweth." (vs. 2,3). Various interpretations of these words have been proposed. The following one has the advantage of fitting the context: Paul did not know for certain whether he was transported to participate objectively in the visions and revelations, as did Daniel (Dan. 10), or whether his experience was subjective, as was Peter's vision of the sheet let down from heaven. (Acts 10:10,11,17). Later, when Peter was led out of prison by an angel he "wist not that it was true which was done by the angel; but thought he saw a vision." (Acts 12:9). Peter thought his objective experience might only be subjective—that what was actually occurring might only be transpiring in his mind. When Peter was "come to himself, he said, Now I know for a surety . . ." (Acts 12:11). Similarly, Paul was unable to know for certain whether he was in the body (actually participating) or out of the body (whether the events transpired only in a vision in the mind).
5. The Greek verb "harpazo" translated "caught up", does not denote direction. It can be translated, "caught away".²
6. Paradise³ is descriptive, not of a place in heaven, but on the earth. The following passages show this:
- a) Luke 23:43—The thief requested a place in the kingdom. (Luke 23:42). But the kingdom is to be on the earth. (Dan. 2:44; 7:27).
- b) Rev. 2:7—A symbolic allusion to the garden of Eden.
- c) The Septuagint translation uses the word "paradeisos" for the garden of Eden. See Gen. 2:8; Cf. also Ezek. 28:13; 36:35.

Since Paul says that the man he knew was caught away to the third heaven (vs. 2) and caught away to paradise (vs. 4) it can be inferred that the two locations are synonymous. Since it is known that paradise refers either to the Garden of Eden or to paradise-like conditions on the earth, by implication it is also known that the third heaven refers to the same thing. The word "heavens" is used figuratively elsewhere in Scripture. See 2 Pet. 3:13 cf. Isa. 65:17.

² "Harpazo", the verb translated "caught up", means to "snatch away". Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, 8th ed., (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965). Bullinger comments: "In 2 Cor. xii. 4 the verb is . . . 'catch away', not, 'up'." Ethelbert W. Bullinger, A Critical Lexicon and Concordance to the English and Greek New Testament, 8th ed., (London: Samuel Bagster and Sons Ltd., 1957), p. 569. See the use of the same verb, "to pluck", for example, in Jn. 10:28,29.

³ This conclusion is further borne out by the meaning of the word "paradise". "Paradeisos", the Greek word translated "paradise", means "a park, garden ground". Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, 8th ed., (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965).

COL. 1:5 "For the hope which is laid up for you in heaven . . ."

PROBLEM: This passage is cited by Evangelicals and Pentecostals to support their belief that heaven is the promised place of reward for the righteous.

SOLUTION:

1. The passage does not say that believers go to heaven, it only asserts that the believer's hope is laid up in heaven.
2. What is the hope which is laid up for believers in heaven? It is immortality which Christ will give to the faithful at their resurrection in the last day and his return. Consider the evidence:
 - a) The "hope which is laid up for you in heaven" is the "hope of the gospel" (vs. 23), "the hope of glory" (Col. 1:27), "For ye are dead [i.e., to sin], and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." (Col. 3:3,4).
 - b) Paul elsewhere identifies this hope with the resurrection:
 - i) "Even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body. For we are saved by hope . . . But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it." (Rom. 8:23-25). See also 1 Cor. 15:19-22; Titus 1:2; 2:13; 3:7; 1 Jn. 3:2,3.
 - ii) "But this I confess . . . believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets: And have hope toward God . . . that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust." (Acts 24:14,15 cf. Acts 23:6).
3. The "lively hope" in "an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time." (1 Pet. 1:4,5). The "last time" is a Scriptural expression for the period when "the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works." (Matt. 16:27 cf. 2 Cor. 5:10; Jn. 6:39,40,44,54).
4. The hope of the believer is with the Saviour, Jesus Christ in heaven. (1 Tim. 1:1). But the believer is not going to heaven to see his hope fulfilled. The Scriptures make it clear that the hope (i.e., eternal life) is brought with Christ when he returns. Unto those who look for him, he shall "appear the second time without sin unto salvation." (Heb. 9:28).

PHIL. 1:21-23 "For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain . . . I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ; which is far better."

PROBLEM: This passage is a stock proof text of Evangelicals. It is argued that since death for Paul would be gain, he was not thinking of sleep in the grave but rather of departure in the soul or spirit to be with his Lord. It is inferred that all the saved have the same expectation of being with the Lord at the instant of death.

SOLUTION:

1. It is mistakenly assumed by such expositors that "to depart" means to be immediately with Christ. Evangelicals should be pressed hard for justification of this assumption. Elsewhere in the same letter the Apostle Paul indicated where his hope lay for being in the presence of the Lord. This was in the return of Christ and the resurrection. Note the following passages:
 - a) "Until the day of Jesus Christ." (Phil. 1:6,10; 2:16).
 - b) "If by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead." (Phil. 3:11).
 - c) "We look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body . . ." (Phil. 3:20,21).
2. Peter referring to the letters of the Apostle Paul said that there were "some things hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest, as they do also the other scriptures, unto their own destruction." (2 Pet. 3:16). It is a wise guide to follow therefore, in interpreting a disputed passage to consult the other writings of the Apostle Paul. When did the Apostle expect to be with Christ? At the return of Christ following resurrection and judgment. Consider the following evidence:
 - a) "Knowing that he which raised up the Lord Jesus shall raise up us also by Jesus, and shall present us with you." (2 Cor. 4:14).
 - b) "We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ." (2 Cor. 5:10).
 - c) "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." (2 Tim. 4:8 cf. 4:1).
3. The time sequence must be capable of Scriptural verification. Paul did not look for an instantaneous arrival into the presence of Christ. The Apostle knew he would "sleep" as other saints until the Resurrection Day,¹ (1 Cor. 15:51-53), unless his Master returned while he was still alive. (1 Cor. 15:6,18,20,51; 1 Thess. 4:13,14 cf. Dan. 12:2,3).
4. In what sense would "to depart" (to die) be gain? In the death state "the dead know not anything." (Ecc. 9:5 cf. 3:20). The Apostle would, therefore, have relief from his suffering. (2 Cor. 11:23-29). He realized, however, for the sake of the work he could do among the Philippians it would be better to "abide in the flesh" (i.e., to continue to live). (vs. 24-26).

¹ This explains the juxtapositioning of "depart", and "to be with Christ". From the point of view of the Apostle Paul, the next conscious moment after his departure would be the resurrection and judgment seat of Christ. After this he would "ever be with the Lord." (1 Thess. 4:17).

PHIL. 3:20 "For our conversation is in heaven; . . ."

PROBLEM: It is noted by Evangelicals that "conversation"¹ is more accurately translated "citizenship". It is then argued that the real person (i.e., the immortal soul) must belong in heaven, its homeland, where it returns at the death of the body.

SOLUTION:

1. The Apostle is silent about souls leaving the body and departing to heaven at death. His hope is the resurrection of the dead at the return of Christ. Note the context:
 - a) "If by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead." (Phil. 3:11).
 - b) "For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ: Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body . . ." (Phil. 3:20, 21).
2. In what sense is the believer's citizenship in heaven? Philippi was a colony of the Roman Empire. On Paul's second journey his company landed at Neapolis, "and from thence to Philippi, which is the chief city of that part of Macedonia, and a colony² . . ." (Acts 16:12). A Roman colony was a miniature Rome, a reproduction and outpost of the city.³ The Roman citizens attempted to reproduce the life and customs of Rome. Their citizenship and commonwealth was in Rome. This background information forms the basis of Paul's instruction. He says, "Let your conversation [literally, citizen life] be as it becometh the gospel of Christ." (Phil. 1:27). The citizen life to which the Apostle refers is not that of Rome but of a higher relationship. Philippian believers had become "fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of God." (Eph. 2:19), Paul contrasts those whose interests are fixed on the earth (Phil. 3:19) with those whose citizenship is in heaven. Phil. 3:20). Just as the Philippian colonist was a part of an outpost of Rome, so the believer looked to heaven as the centre of his government from whence would come the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ. (Phil. 3:20). Ecclesial and individual life were therefore, to be patterned after the heavenly, not after Rome.⁴

1 "Conversation" as the word is used today, means "speech", "talk". This specialized use of the word is different from its meaning at the time of the King James translators (1611). The word then meant "behaviour". The Greek word, "politeuma", translated "conversation" in the A.V. means "commonwealth" (R.S.V.) or "citizenship" (R.V.).

2 A colony of the Roman Empire, like Philippi, was only a city and not a country as were the colonies of Great Britain.

3 See Dictionary of the Bible, James Hastings ed., (New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, 1963), p. 763.

4 Believers were commanded by Jesus to "be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." (Matt. 5:48). The disciples were instructed to pray for the kingdom to come that God's will might be done on earth as it is in heaven. (Matt. 6:10). In so doing, believers were "outposts" of heaven. Moffatt, in his translation paraphrases, Phil. 3:20—"We are a colony of heaven."

1 THESS. 4:17 "Caught up . . . in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord."

PROBLEM: This passage is the foundation text for the Evangelical doctrine of the "rapture of the church", i.e., that at the second coming, Christ will gather the saints together, take them to heaven, and rule over, but not on the the earth.

SOLUTION:

1. Nowhere does this passage state that the saints are taken to heaven. The evidence is the other way, since "the Lord shall descend from heaven." (vs. 16).
2. "And so shall we ever be with the Lord." Where? On the earth, not in heaven. This is the testimony of the Apostle Paul elsewhere in his writings (Rom. 4:13 cf. Gen. 13:15 and Gal. 3:27-29) and the teaching of scores of Biblical references. (E.g., Dan. 7:18-27 esp. verse 27; Psa. 37:11,22,29; Matt. 5:5; Rev. 5:10.)
3. Even if the passage be taken literally, the meeting of the Lord and the saints is said to be in the air. But the air extends upwards for 600 miles (a generous estimate). Are the saints to spend eternity suspended in mid-air? If it is contended that the saints only meet the Lord and are then taken up to heaven, then proof that such is the case is required. It does not come from this passage.
4. The Greek word, "harpazo" translated "caught up" does not in itself denote direction (either up or down). It simply means, "to snatch away"¹ Its usage is illustrated in the following references where the same verb occurs:
 - a) "The spirit of the Lord caught away Philip." (Acts 8:39).
 - b) "The wolf catcheth them, and scattereth the sheep." (John 10:12).
 - c) "No man is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand." (John 10:29).
5. What is meant by "the clouds"? Three possibilities exist. These are as follows:
 - a) The saints are caught away in literal clouds. Jesus was taken from the disciples' gaze by a cloud. (Acts 1:9). He will return with the same literal clouds. See Rev. 1:7 cf. Dan. 7:13; Matt. 24:30.
 - b) The clouds refer to large numbers of saints. The Greek text does not contain the definite article. The passage reads, therefore: "Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught away in clouds" (i.e., clouds of saints). Support for this interpretation is found in Heb. 12:1 where a similar image is used: "Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses . . ." (i.e., the faithful listed in Heb. 11). Saints are compared with the innumerable water droplets comprising a great cloud. Some have seen the further image of the saints being ex-haled from the sea of nations by the powerful beams of the Sun of Righteousness.

¹ Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, 8th ed., (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965). Bullinger comments: "To snatch away, to carry off (suddenly and by force) esp. of wild beasts." Ethelbert Bullinger, A Critical Lexicon and Concordance to the English and Greek Testament 8th ed., (London: Samuel Bagster and Sons Ltd., 1957) p. 138.

- c) The clouds are those of divine glory, indicating the Divine Presence. It is stated in Matt. 24:30 that the Son of man will come "in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory", but it is not certain that the great glory refers to the clouds of heaven. One disadvantage with this interpretation is that the divine cloud is invariably one cloud.² The word "clouds" in 1 Thess. 4:17 is plural. It was the cloud which covered Mt. Sinai (Ex. 34:5) and guided Israel during the wilderness journeyings. (Ex. 13:21; 14:19). Similarly, it was the cloud of glory which filled the Tabernacle (Nu. 9:15,16) and the Temple of Solomon. (1 Kings 8:11).

HEB. 11:5 "By faith Enoch was translated that he should not see death
..."

PROBLEM: This passage is cited to prove that the souls of the righteous depart to heaven at the instant of the death of the body.

SOLUTION:

1. It is difficult to see how this passage can prove either that man has an immortal soul, or that at death the soul departs to heaven. The passage mentions neither souls nor heaven.
2. Enoch was translated that he might not see death, but how can his experience be cited as proof for what will happen to those who have died, or will die?
3. It is probable, but not certain, that Enoch is dead. Consider the evidence:
 - a) The writer to the Hebrews includes Enoch¹ when he says, "These all died in faith, not having received the promises . . ." (Heb. 11:13).
 - b) "Death reigned from Adam to Moses." (Rom. 5:14). No exceptions are noted in the context to this categorical assertion of the kingship of death.
4. Enoch did not ascend to heaven—the dwelling place of God, since it is expressly stated: "no man hath ascended up to heaven". (Jn. 3:13).
5. Enoch is an example of the unknown in Scripture. It is not known for certain in what way he was "translated" or changed. Neither is it known where he went, when God took him. (Gen. 5:24). Only the hard pressed will resort to this passage to prove either the immortality of the soul or heaven the home of the righteous. The exhortation of Deuteronomy 29:29 is appropriate: "The secret things belong unto the LORD our God: but those things which are revealed belong unto us . . ."

² The parallel passage in Luke 21:27 reads: "And they shall see the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory."

¹ It might be argued that Enoch merits exception because of the specific statement earlier in the chapter that he was "translated that he should not see death". (vs. 5).

2 PET. 3:10 “ . . . the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up.”

PROBLEM: It is argued that since the earth is to be destroyed by fire, the future inheritance of the righteous must be in heaven, and not on the earth.

SOLUTION:

1. Peter states that “the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved.” (vs. 12). Are those who argue for the literal burning up of the earth prepared to allow the literal dissolution of the heavens? What in the literal heavens is burnable?
2. The literal earth will not be destroyed. This is proven from Peter’s quotation from Isa. 65:17 and Isa. 66:22. The “new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness” (2 Pet. 3:13) is portrayed in Isaiah as a time on the earth when Jerusalem will be a rejoicing and the nature of the animals changed. (Isa. 65:18-25). The prophecy requires the continued existence of the earth.
3. The “heavens” and “earth” (2 Pet. 3:10,12) is figurative for a constitution or order on the earth. This is also proven by Peter’s quotation from Isa. 65:17. Since the new heavens and earth is the creation of “Jerusalem a rejoicing, and her people a joy” in which “they shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain” (Isa. 65:19-25), the heavens and earth which are destroyed must be prior constitutions or orders on the earth which are removed for the establishment of the new.
4. Peter says that the “world”¹ in the days of Noah perished. (2 Pet. 3:6). The literal earth or “world” did not perish, only the “everything living” (R.S.V.) of Gen. 7:21 perished. Similarly, “I will destroy them with the earth” (Gen. 6:13) did not mean the literal destruction of the planet, but only the wicked order of things on the earth.
5. The burning up of the earth is an Old Testament expression for the destruction of a wicked order, but not the literal earth. Consider the following:
 - a) “ . . . my determination is to gather the nations, that I may assemble the kingdoms, to pour upon them mine indignation, even all my fierce anger: for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of my jealousy.” (Zeph. 3:8). The prophet continues, however, to tell of the day when the people would speak a pure language and “from beyond the rivers of Ethiopia my suppliants, even the daughter of my dispersed, shall bring mine offering.” (Zeph. 3:9,10).
 - b) “And the mountains shall be molten under him, and the valleys shall be cleft, as wax before the fire . . . ” (Micah 1:4). The prophet continues, however, to speak about the day when the law of the LORD would go forth from Zion and Jerusalem. (Micah 4:1,2).
6. Rather than being destroyed in a great conflagration, the earth is to become filled with the glory of the Lord. (Nu. 14:21; Hab. 2:14; cf. Ecc. 1:4; Isa. 45:18).

¹ The Greek word “kosmos” translated “world” literally means “order, i.e., regular disposition and arrangement.” Ethelbert W. Bullinger, A Critical Lexicon and Concordance to the English and Greek Testament, (London: Samuel Bagster and Sons Ltd., 1957), p. 900.

REV. 5:10 “... we shall reign on the earth.”

PROBLEM: This verse is translated “over” rather than “on” by the Plymouth Brethren, and the “Jehovah’s Witnesses”, in an attempt to evade the difficulty of having the righteous live and reign on the earth.

SOLUTION:

1. In 6 other places in Revelation the identical phrase is translated “on the earth” or “upon the earth”, but not “over the earth” as though suggesting remote control. (E.g., Rev. 6:10; 7:1; 11:10; 13:14; 14:6; 17:8).
 2. Even if “over” were the correct translation, it is said that the Queen reigns over England without suggesting that she reigns above it.
-

MATT. 25:46 “And these shall go away into everlasting punishment.”

PROBLEM: This passage is used to prove the eternal torment of the wicked. It is argued, that since the same Greek word, “aionios” is used for the duration of life for the righteous as for the punishment of the wicked, therefore the wicked are subject to eternal torment.

SOLUTION:

1. The punishment is everlasting, but it is not conscious eternal torment. The punishment will be a final and complete cutting off. (Psa. 37:9, 34). Life eternal is reserved for the righteous, but the wicked are to die “the second death” (Rev. 21:8) which in Scriptural terms means to be without thoughts. (Psa. 146:3,4; Eccl. 9:5). The word “everlasting” is used of a result, not a process. Similarly, “eternal judgment” (Heb. 6:2) and “eternal redemption” (Heb. 9:12) do not mean that judgment and redemption will continue throughout eternity, but rather that their results are eternal.
2. The wicked are to suffer torment at the Judgment Day (Matt. 8:12; 13:30,40-42,49-50; Luke 12:47,48), but this is not eternal torment. Other Scriptures either state or imply a termination of the torment. For example:
 - a) Speaking of those who “know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ”, the Apostle Paul states that they “shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power.” (2 Thess. 1:9).
 - b) Jesus stated that “if a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered; and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned.” (John 15:6). To be “cast forth as a branch” and “burned” suggests termination of the burning when that which is burnable is consumed.

- c) "And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake . . . to shame and everlasting contempt." (Dan. 12:2 cf. Jn. 5:29). It is the contempt or damnation which is everlasting, not the conscious torment.
3. Even if by "everlasting punishment" is meant "everlasting conscious torment", this passage in itself does not prove the eternal torment of the wicked since the Greek word, "aionios", can mean either limited or unlimited duration.¹ Although the New Testament nearly always uses "aionios" with the meaning of unlimited duration,² there are a number of occurrences in the Septuagint³ (where the Hebrew equivalent "olam" is translated "aionios") in which a limited duration is obviously intended. For example:
- i. "The lasting [aionios] hills"; "The eternal God is thy refuge and underneath are the everlasting [aionios] arms." (Deut. 33:15,27). The intended meaning of "aionios" is limited duration in the first reference whereas in the same chapter the second reference is to unlimited duration.
 - ii. The Aaronic priesthood is termed, "an everlasting [aionios] priesthood throughout their generations." (Exod. 40:15). Limited duration is intended in this reference since the Aaronic priesthood was later to change (Heb. 7:12) when that which "waxed old" was ready to "vanish away". (Heb. 8:13).
 - iii. See also Gen. 49:26; Exod. 12:17; 21:6; Jonah 2:6; Hab. 3:6 ("perpetual" hills="aionios" hills).
4. Many passages in Scripture teach that eternal life is the reward for the righteous (e.g., Luke 20:35,36). There are also many passages which teach that the ungodly and wicked will be destroyed or perish (e.g., 1 Thess. 4:13 cf. John 3:16; 2 Thess. 1:9). It is not therefore, merely an arbitrary decision to choose endless duration for "aionios" life of the righteous and limited duration for "aionios" punishment of the wicked. The decision has been based on the use of the Greek word elsewhere in Scripture and the teaching of other passages on the respective rewards of the righteous and wicked.
5. The word "punishment" is translated from the Greek word, "kolasis" which means "a pruning". It comes from the verb, "kolazo" which means "to curtail, dock, prune, but usually like Lat., 'castigare', to keep within bounds, check, chastise."⁴ This denotation is in complete harmony with the Scriptural teaching on the punishment of the wicked. Jesus said that the wicked would be cast like branches into the fire.

1 "Aionios" means "age-lasting", Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965).

2 Two N.T. passages should be noted: The "eternal fire" (Grk: aionios) which consumed Sodom and Gomorrah (Jude 7) is not now burning. (cf. Lam. 4:6; 2 Pet. 2:6; Deut. 29:23). Similarly, Philemon is instructed to receive Onesimus "forever" (Grk: aionios). (Phm. 15).

3 In the 3rd century B.C., the Greek king Ptolemy of Egypt commissioned the translation of the Hebrew Scriptures into Greek. This translation is now known as the "LXX" or the Septuagint Version.

4 Ethelbert W. Bullinger, A Critical Lexicon and Concordance to the English and Greek Testament, (London: Samuel Bagster and Sons Ltd., 1957), p. 612. "Kolasis" is translated "torment" in 1 Jn. 4:18 and "torment" is one of the meanings given for "kolasis" in James Strong, Strong's Exhaustive Concordance of the Bible, (New York: Abington Press, 1951).

(Jn. 15:6). The Psalmist said they would be “cut off” (Psa. 37:9) and “shall not be”. (Psa. 37:10). Malachi states that the wicked will be burnt like stubble leaving them “neither root nor branch” (Mal. 4:1), like “ashes” to be trodden under foot. (Mal. 4:3). This is not the kind of language one would associate with immortal souls in torment for eternity.

MARK 9:43-48 “The fire is not quenched.”

PROBLEM: This passage is argued vigorously by Holiness-Fire Pentecostals and other Evangelical bodies as positive proof that the souls of the wicked will spend eternity suffering the torment of hell-fire.

SOLUTION:

1. Pentecostals insist on taking “the fire is not quenched” literally, but what about “where their worm dieth not”? Are there immortal worms in hell? Similarly, is one to take literally the cutting off of hand (vs. 43), foot (vs. 45) and the plucking out of one’s eye (vs. 47)?
2. Jesus is almost certainly quoting from Isa. 66:24: “And they shall go forth, and look upon the carcasses of the men that have transgressed against me: for their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched; and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh.” But this unquenchable fire is not the hell-fire of Pentecostal teaching. Note the differences:
 - a) The fire is located outside Jerusalem in Israel. (Isa. 66:20). This is not the location of the hell-fire of Pentecostal and Evangelical teaching.
 - b) Travellers will observe the carcasses of the men that have transgressed against God. Pentecostal teaching consigns souls, not bodies, to hell.
3. The Greek word, “Gehenna” translated “hell” comes from the Hebrew, “Ghi-Hinnom”¹, the name of the valley to the south of Jerusalem² where the kings Ahaz and Manasseh offered their sons to the god Molech. (2 Chron. 28:3; 33:6; Jer. 32:35). The area was polluted by Josiah (2 Kings 23:10) and was called Topheth (altar).³ It subsequently became the city’s garbage dump, where dead animals were thrown and refuse burned.⁴ What remained from the fire was consumed by the worm. Jesus, therefore, uses the word “Gehenna” as a symbol of complete and utter destruction, not as a term denoting eternal preservation in torment.

¹ Ethelbert W. Bullinger, A Critical Lexicon and Concordance to the English and Greek New Testament, (London: Samuel Bagster and Sons Ltd., 1957), p. 367.

² See Josh. 15:8.

³ Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965). Young comments: “A place in the valley of Hinnom where sacrifices were offered and the dead bodies buried or consumed.”

⁴ James Hastings, (ed.) Dictionary of the Bible, (New York: Charles Scribner’s Sons, 1963). p. 319.

4. Fire is used in Scripture for utter destruction, not for preservation in torment. Consider the following:
 - a) Sodom and Gomorrah were destroyed by fire and brimstone and are now set forth as “an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire.” (Jude 7 cf. Gen. 19:24). But are these cities still burning? Scripture affirms that these cities were overthrown in a moment (Lam. 4:6) and turned to ashes. (2 Pet. 2:6 cf. Deut. 29:23).
 - b) Nadab and Abihu (sons of Aaron) were “devoured” and died by fire which came out from the LORD. (Lev. 10:1,2).
 - c) A fire from the LORD “consumed” the 250 men who illegally offered incense in the rebellion of Korah, Dathan and Abiram. (Nu. 16:35).
 - d) Fire came down from God out of heaven and “consumed” the messengers from the King of Samaria during the time of the Prophet Elijah. (2 Kings 1:10).
5. “Unquenchable fire” is an apparently absolute expression which is limited in application, (i.e., until that which is the subject of reference, is totally and utterly consumed). Two passages serve as an illustration:
 - a) “Behold, mine anger and my fury shall be poured out upon this place, upon man, and upon beast, and upon the trees of the field, and upon the fruit of the ground; and it shall burn, and shall not be quenched.” (Jer. 7:20) Nevertheless God will have mercy upon Zion when the “set time is come”. (Psa. 102:13). Jerusalem will be the city of the great King. (Matt. 5:35 cf. Luke 1:31-33).
 - b) “I will kindle a fire in the gates thereof, and it shall devour the palaces of Jerusalem, and it shall not be quenched.” (Jer. 17:27). The fire was not quenched until it had consumed all that could be burned. The fire is not now burning.

REV. 14:10,11 “He shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb: And the smoke of their torment ascendeth up for ever and ever.”

REV. 19:3 “And her smoke rose up for ever and ever.”

REV. 20:10 “And the devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are, and shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever.”

PROBLEM: These verses are stock references quoted in proof of eternal hell torment for the wicked.

SOLUTION:

1. “Fire and brimstone” is used figuratively, not literally in Revelation. Consider the evidence:
 - a) In the first occurrence of the expression, “fire and brimstone” is said to issue from horses' mouths. (Rev. 9:17). This is certainly no hell-fire.

- b) If literal torment in hell were intended, then the language of the passage would require Jesus to be with his angels in hell, since it is stated: "He shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels . . . and the Lamb." (Rev. 14:10).
 - c) Consistency demands that if "tormented with fire and brimstone" is literal, so must "the same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation". (Rev. 14:10). But the latter is an obvious figure drawn from Jer. 25:15. Why then insist on literal fire and brimstone?
 - d) A figurative interpretation of "fire and brimstone" is in keeping with the general symbolic character of the Revelation. The woman = "that great city" (Rev. 17:18); waters = "peoples" (Rev. 17:15); the Lamb similarly represents Jesus Christ. (Rev. 17:14).
2. Fire is used in Scripture for utter destruction, not for preservation in torment. Sodom and Gomorrah were destroyed by fire and brimstone and are now set forth as "an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire". (Jude 7 cf. Gen. 19:24). But are these cities still burning? Scripture affirms that these cities were overthrown in a moment (Lam. 4:6) and turned to ashes. (2 Pet. 2:6; Deut. 29:23). See also Lev. 10:1,2; Nu. 16:35; 2 Kings 1:10.
3. "And her smoke rose up for ever and ever" (Rev. 19:3) is no hell-fire torment for the scene is the destruction of "Babylon the great", and is witnessed by lamenting merchants and shipmasters. (Rev. 18:8-10,15,18). "For ever and ever" emphasizes complete destruction.
4. Rev. 19:3 appears to draw its symbol from Isaiah 34:10. In this passage a fire from the Lord on Idumea (Idumea = "Edom", R.S.V. vs. 6) "shall not be quenched night nor day; the smoke thereof shall go up for ever." (Isa. 34:10). But again, this is no hell-fire since the prophet Isaiah continues to speak of the land lying waste, a dwelling place for the owl and raven. (vs. 11).

REV. 19:20 "These both were cast alive into a lake of fire burning with brimstone."

REV. 20:14 "And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire."

REV. 21:8 "But the fearful . . . shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death."

PROBLEM: These verses are cited by Pentecostals and Evangelicals to prove that hell is a literal place of torment.

SOLUTION:

1. The non-literal character of "the lake of fire" is established by the following considerations:

- a) Death is cast into the lake of fire. (Rev. 20:14). How can death literally be cast into a lake of fire?
 - b) Hell is cast into the lake of fire. (Rev. 20:14). Therefore hell is not the same place as the lake of fire.
 - c) Frequently in the Revelation symbols are interpreted. For example: "the woman" is "that great city" (Rev. 17:18); "waters" are "peoples" (Rev. 17:15). Similarly, the "lake of fire" is interpreted to be "the second death". (Rev. 20:14; 21:8).
2. The "lake of fire and brimstone" expresses figuratively what is stated literally—"the second death." To die means to have no thoughts (Psa. 146:4), and to "know not anything." (Ecc. 9:5). This Scriptural definition of death is incompatible with the interpretation that the lake of fire and the second death refer to conscious eternal torment.

IMMORTAL EMERGENCE

1 COR. 15:52 "The dead shall be raised incorruptible."

PROBLEM: It is argued on the basis of this passage that the righteous "sheep" are known of the Shepherd during their life and therefore there is no need for them to appear before the Judgment to obtain immortality. They will rise from the grave immortal.

SOLUTION:

1. The dead shall be "raised incorruptible", but this is not the same as saying the "dead shall come out of their graves immortal." The word "raised" (translated from the Greek, "egeiró") does not in itself imply immortal emergence. Lazarus was raised (egeiró) (John 12:1), but he did not come forth immortal.¹ Neither does "egeiró" denote an instantaneous change from mortality to immortality. The following examples indicate this:

- a) Luke 1:69 "And hath raised up an horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David."
- b) Acts 13:23 "Of this man's [David—vs. 22] seed hath God according to his promise raised unto Israel a Saviour, Jesus."
- c) Rom. 9:17 (Speaking of Pharaoh), "Even for this same purpose have I raised [Grk: egeiró] thee up . . ."

Therefore, when Paul says the "dead shall be raised incorruptible", he is not using a word (raised) which in itself denotes an instantaneous transformation in which the dead come forth immortal.

2. In 1 Cor. 15:35, the question asked is: "How are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come?"² The answer given compares the raising of the dead with the raising of wheat. To raise a crop of wheat implies the whole process of sowing, cultivating and reaping. As Jesus said: "For the earth bringeth forth fruit of herself; first the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear." (Mk. 4:28). Likewise, "the dead shall be raised incorruptible" is a process. It commences (as the parable of the sower indicates) when the word is heard, understood, and obeyed. (Matt. 13:23). The process involves ¹ Lazarus could not have come forth immortal, since Christ was the "firstfruits of them that slept". (1 Cor. 15:20; 1 Cor. 15:45). This obviously applies to Christ's resurrection to immortality since he was not the first fruits by virtue of being raised only. Many resurrections preceded his.

² In answer to these questions the Apostle sets out two arguments:

- a) The life to come is not merely the continuation of life as it now is—life in the resurrection is different in kind.
- b) Resurrection preserves personal identity; there is a continuity of personal identity before and after resurrection.

Two analogies are cited in support of these two arguments:

- i) When grain is sown ("bare grain"—vs. 37) it produces a different seed bearing plant from the original seed, yet the distinctiveness of the grain is preserved—corn produces corn seed, not wheat or barley.
- ii) There are different kinds of flesh—human, animals, birds, and fish, yet each is flesh. (vs. 39).

the resurrection of the dead from their graves (1 Cor. 15:42; Isa. 26:19) and judgment with the subsequent granting of immortality. (Matt. 25:31-34,46; Rom. 14:10; 2 Cor. 5:10). The process is complete when believers are given a "spiritual body".

3. It is sometimes argued that believers are "sown" when at the resurrection their mortal bodies are made alive. But this interpretation must be rejected since at the resurrection believers are reaped, not sown. Jesus said, "the harvest is the end of the world; and the reapers are the angels." (Matt. 13:39). The "sowing" is the life of the believer in a nature which tends to corruption, dishonour, and weakness (inherent in the natural body). In the good soil of the Word, believers sow to the spirit and reap everlasting life, incorruption, glory, power (inherent in the spiritual body). (Gal. 6:7,8; 1 Cor. 15:42,43). Jesus further employed the analogy of the seed in the context of resurrection: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone: but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit. He that loveth his life shall lose it; and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal." (Jn. 12:24,25). Likewise, Paul protested, "I die daily". (1 Cor. 15:31). The dying in these two passages cannot be restricted to mere physical death. The dying is a continuous process in the life of the believer in which the "old man" of the flesh is crucified with his lusts and affections. (Gal. 5:24; Rom. 6:6).

4. "It is sown a natural body" (vs. 44) cannot refer to the dead body in the ground (as is required by the doctrine of immortal emergence) since the Greek for natural body is "psuchikon soma" which means a living body.³ This point becomes even stronger once it is noted that Paul compares the natural body and Adam (a living soul, not a dead body) with a spiritual body and Christ. The contrasts are as follows:

It is sown	It is raised
in	in corruption, dishonour	incorruption, glory
weakness, a natural body	power, a spiritual body or quickening spirit
first that which is	afterwards that which is natural	spiritual
Adam	Christ

5. Although the judgment of believers is not detailed in this section of the epistle, it is in 2 Cor. 5:9-10. The consideration here is with those whose privilege it is to inherit the kingdom, not with those who are unfaithful. Similarly, although Paul asserts we "shall all be made alive" (1 Cor. 15:22) and "we shall all be changed" (1 Cor. 15:51), these statements do not nullify his earlier teaching that believers can be destroyed, can perish and become castaways. (1 Cor. 3:17; 8:11; 9:27).
6. It requires stressing that the righteous go "into life eternal" (and therefore are not already immortal). (Matt. 25:46). The invitation to enter into eternal life is preceded by the Judgment which determines who are sheep and who are goats. The "sheep" (i.e., the righteous) come forth mortal, therefore, and not immortal. Similarly, Jesus stated that those in the graves who hear his voice will come forth "unto the resurrection of life." (John 5:28,29). The righteous come forth to eternal life, not with eternal life.

³ Cf. Gen. 2:7, Adam was made a "living soul" ("Psuche" being the equivalent of the Hebrew word, "nephesh").

PHIL. 4:3 " . . . my fellowlabourers, whose names are in the book of life."

PROBLEM: This passage is used to support the idea that the faithful sheep are known by the good Shepherd, hence in the resurrection there is no need for judgment as candidates for eternal life. Since their names are written in the book of life, these faithful come forth from their graves immortal.

SOLUTION:

1. Names of the faithful are written in the book of life, but names can also be removed from the book of life. (Rev. 3:5). It is the purpose of the Judgment to make manifest which names have been retained and which deleted.
2. One cannot know for certain whether he is in fact a sheep or goat until the Judgment Seat of Christ. Many passages emphasize this. Consider the following:
 - a) The Laodiceans considered themselves rich, increased with goods and in need of nothing. From the divine point of view, they were "wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked." (Rev. 3:17).
 - b) Many are to come in the Day of Judgment and say: "Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works?" And then he will profess unto them, "I never knew you . . ." (Matt. 7:22-23).
 - c) In the parable of the sheep and goats, some of those who thought they were sheep, found out they were goats. (Matt. 25:31-46).
3. It was the Apostle Paul, the recipient of an abundance of visions, (2 Cor. 12:7), who, at the end of his life could say, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith . . ." (2 Tim. 4:7). Caution should be exercised in assessing one's spiritual standing with the same confidence as did the Apostle Paul. The Apostle had earlier written, "I am not aware of anything against myself, but I am not thereby acquitted." (1 Cor. 4:4, R.S.V.). He also wrote: "Therefore, judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the hearts: and then shall every man have praise of God." (1 Cor. 4:5).
4. God, of course, knows whose names are retained in the book of life and whose names are not. The believer is commanded not to judge; it is the Lord Jesus Christ who makes manifest the verdict.

1 JOHN 1:9 "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness."

PROBLEM: It is argued that the righteous dead are raised immortal since they have already received the forgiveness of sins in this life. The judgment to which the righteous are subject is said to be for the dispensing of rewards and not trial for eternal life.

SOLUTION:

1. It is apparent that this passage says nothing about the righteous dead coming forth immortal from the grave. This conclusion is only inferred. The conclusion inferred is invalid because its premises are false. It is assumed that the righteous are ipso facto accepted because of forgiven sins. This assumption is false. Consider the evidence:
 - a) Peter, writing to believers, stated: "And beside this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge . . . for if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off . . . for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall: For so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." (2 Pet. 1:5-11). Entrance into the kingdom is conditional not only on having sins forgiven but on producing fruit. Stewards of the Lord must show the result of their stewardship, the results of trading with the Lord's pounds and talents.
 - b) Paul said "It is a very small thing that I should be judged by you [Corinthians] or by any human court. I do not even judge myself. I am not aware of anything against myself, but I am not thereby acquitted. It is the Lord who judges me. Therefore do not pronounce judgment before the time, before the Lord comes, who will bring to light the things now hidden in darkness and will disclose the purposes of the heart. Then every man will receive his commendation from God." (1 Cor. 4:3-5, R.S.V.). A believer may have sins of ignorance, therefore he is not acquitted until the Lord pronounces judgment. The judgment of the Lord is to make manifest even the secret purposes of the heart.

Forgiveness of sins at baptism and throughout one's probationary period is one of the most precious assurances given to believers. But to maintain that forgiveness of sins merits immortal emergence from the grave is to indicate a mistaken view of the nature of judgment. There is everything to judge except the sins which are forgiven.
2. Jesus said that the righteous go "into eternal life". (Matt. 25:46). But the invitation to enter into eternal life is preceded by the Judgment which determines who are sheep and who are goats. The "sheep" (i.e., the righteous) come forth mortal, therefore, and not immortal. By implication, the purpose of the Judgment cannot be merely to dispense rewards since at its conclusion, the righteous are invited to enter into life eternal.
3. The purpose of the Judgment Seat of Christ is not merely to pass sentence without trial as is sometimes assumed. The meaning of the Greek word, "bēma",¹ translated "judgment" is illustrated in Acts 25. A "hearing" took place in which Festus on his judgment seat (Acts 25:17) heard the charges of the Jews and the defence of Paul. Similarly, in statements about the Judgment Seat of Christ, believers will all appear to receive good or evil, according to what they have done in the body. (2 Cor. 5:10). The fact that some will receive "evil" indicates that the judgment is not merely the distribution of rewards but trial for eternal life.

PSA. 50:5 "Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice."

PROBLEM: This passage is used to prove that only those who are in covenant relationship with God (the Jews or baptized believers) will be at the Judgment Seat. It is argued that there would be no purpose in God raising "enlightened rejectors"² since they have neither part nor lot in the eternal scheme of things. Since they will not be given immortality, and their fate is known by God before the resurrection, why raise the enlightened rejector for a few hours, days or weeks and then consign them back to the eternal grave?

SOLUTION:

1. Psal. 50:5 states who will be gathered³ — those who have made a covenant by sacrifice. It is evident that this applies to the Jews but how does this apply to New Testament believers?
2. This passage can only be used to prove who will be gathered, not to state who will not be gathered. To argue otherwise is to make a mistake in logic. It is like arguing:

All crows are black birds.

Therefore, All black birds are crows.

But, (Some black birds are pigeons)

The parallel is as follows:

All saints will be gathered.

Therefore, All the gathered are saints.

¹ The Greek word "bēma" translated "Judgment seat" (A.V.) is translated "tribunal" (R.S.V.) "Bema," is used of the Judgment Seat of Christ in 2 Cor. 5:10 and Rom. 14:10.

² "Enlightened rejector" refers to a person who understands but rejects the call of the Gospel to be baptized. Only God, however, knows precisely when a person understands sufficiently to be accountable to the Judgment Seat. The word "enlightened" is taken from Jn. 3:19-21 and Psal. 119:130. The principle that knowledge brings responsibility is well-founded in Scripture. See for example:

Rom. 3:20—"By the law is the knowledge of sin."

Rom. 4:15—"Where no law is, there is no transgression." (cf. Rom. 5:13).

Rom. 7:7—"I had not known sin, but by the law: for I had not known lust, except the law had said, Thou shalt not covet."

Jn. 9:41—"If ye were blind, ye should have no sin: but now ye say, We see; therefore your sin remaineth."

Jn. 15:22—"If I had not come and spoken unto them, they had not had sin: but now they have no cloke for their sin."

³ This is assuming that the gathering is to Judgment, which is by no means certain, since the Judgment Seat is not under consideration in the context.

3. It is not always a sufficient answer to say that these enlightened rejectors will be raised because God has promised that he would do so (although this is, of course, perfectly true). This answer often implies that it is a great privilege to be raised from the dead. Indeed it is a joy for the accepted saints, but it is anguish, sorrow and gnashing of teeth for the rejected. (Matt. 8:11-12).
4. The answer lies in the ideal Scriptural attitude of mortal man toward his Maker. This attitude is commanded to be one of reverence. (Psa. 89:7; Heb. 12:9;—a perfect blend of love and fear). This attitude can be discerned in the relationship of an obedient son to an earthly father. The father loves his son and the son loves his father—but in reserve—he has a healthy fear of his father. This fear may involve punishment for disobedience. Human nature being what it is, requires two things to keep it in the way of obedience:
 - Offer of reward
 - Fear of punishment
 These two things are like two blades of a pair of scissors; linked together, they act as a strong instrument of action.
5. Although humans cannot state which persons are, for certain, enlightened rejectors, it is clear that Scripture teaches that enlightened rejectors are resurrectionally responsible. Enlightenment, not baptism, is the ground of accountability.
6. The following is a summary of the relevant passages which indicate that “enlightened rejectors” will be at the Judgment Seat of Christ:
 - i) Jn. 12:48 (cf. Jn. 15:22; Jn. 9:41) “He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day.” Notice that the occasion which evokes this statement of Jesus was the failure of the believing Pharisees to break with their traditions (vs. 42). The following require stressing:
 - a) There is no more evidence that this passage applies only to Jews in covenant relationship than does the parable of the good Samaritan. Note the emphasis of Deut. 18:18,19, “Whosoever will not hearken”—this is not limited only to Jews.
 - b) There can be no doubt that this passage applies to the Day of Judgment. See its similarity with Mat. 12:36; Lk. 12:1-9.
 - c) “The word that I have spoken shall judge him in the last day” is sometimes understood to refer to the judgment of Christ on Israel in 70 A.D. This interpretation is most unlikely since the “last day” in John’s Gospel refers exclusively to the resurrection and judgment. See Jn. 6:39,40,44,54; 11:24. The only exception is in Jn. 7:37 where the expression refers to the last day of the feast.
 - ii) Rom. 2:12-16)—Notice especially “as many as have sinned in the law shall be judged by the law. (Then follows a parenthetical section until verse 16). In the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ according to my gospel.”

The words of this passage are addressed to "Therefore thou art inexcusable, O man, whosoever thou art . . ." (vs. 1) and not, therefore, to Jews only. Notice, too, that law existed before the Mosaic law. Law was given to Adam and Eve (Gen. 2:16-17), to Noah (Gen. 6:14), and to Abraham. (Gen. 26:5).

- iii) Acts 24:25—Felix trembled when Paul reasoned of "righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come". Why did Felix (a Roman) tremble unless he became aware of his personal accountability to Christ's Judgment Seat? (Note vs. 22—"Felix having a rather accurate knowledge [cf. vs. 15] of the Way", R.S.V.).
- iv) 1 Pet. 4:3-6 (see R.S.V.)—Gentiles are the ones who shall "give account to him that is ready to judge the quick and the dead." Are these baptized believers?
- v) Rev. 21:8—"But the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers and sorcerers, and idolaters and all liars shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death." The second death requires a first death and resurrection. Are the ones raised in this verse baptized believers?
- vi) Matt. 12:41-42—"The men of Nineveh shall rise in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it . . . The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it . . ." These verses require that men of Nineveh and the queen of the south be present at the Day of Judgment. Were they believers in covenant relationship with God?
- vii) Rom. 2:8—"But unto them that are contentious, and do not obey the truth . . ." The Greek word "apeitheo" translated "obey" is always used of the unbaptized (e.g. Rom. 11:30,31; 15:31)⁴, yet these unbaptized, who obey not the truth, will be judged "in the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ." (Rom. 2:16).

HEB. 13:20 "Now the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant."

PROBLEM: This is the principal verse cited to prove the theory that only the baptized will be raised to the Judgment Seat of Christ. This conclusion is based on the following premises:

- a) That Jesus himself was raised from the dead by the blood of the everlasting Abrahamic covenant. (Heb. 13:20).
- b) That this blood was his own blood which ratified and confirmed the covenant. (Rom. 15:8).

⁴ The one exception only occurs in the A.V. of Gal. 3:1. The R.S.V., R.V., and Nestle Greek Text omit the words "that ye should not obey the truth".

Therefore, unless a mortal man enters into the everlasting covenant by means of baptism (in this dispensation) and thereby is washed in the blood of Christ, he cannot rise from the dead since the agency of resurrection, (namely the blood of Christ) is not available to him.

SOLUTION:

1. This theory distorts the significance of the blood of Christ and the scriptural teaching on the resurrection which is a means, or an instrument to an end—the distribution of rewards and punishments. The actual rising forth out of the ground is only an incidental event. This is proved by the fact that at the appearing of Christ, saints will go into the kingdom without experiencing death at all, (1 Thess. 4:15-17), yet all these have been washed in the blood of the Lamb. (Rev. 5:9; 7:14).
2. When the writer to the Hebrews declared that the Lord Jesus was brought again from the dead, he was not referring merely to the rising forth of the ground but of the whole great and glorious bestowal of immortality. To confine the meaning of this verse to a mere rising out of the ground is a narrow, mechanical, and erroneous view of the whole process.
3. The following two passages indicated the way in which resurrection is not confined to a mere emergence from the ground, but rather a means to what follows thereafter:
 - a) When Paul declared, “of the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question” (Acts 23:6), he was not confining his hope to mere emergence from the ground, but rather he was looking forward to being bestowed with the crown of life which fadeth not away. (cf. 2 Tim. 4:8; Phil. 3:20-21).
 - b) “In the resurrection whose wife of them is she?” (Luke 20:33). Would any assert that the meaning here is only the rising from the ground? It is obvious that the meaning here has to do with conditions after the actual raising from the dead has been accomplished.
4. Whatever interpretation is given to explain the blood of Christ as the agent for bringing again the dead, must also be the same explanation to apply to the quick (living). On the day appointed for the appearing of the Lord two classes of saints will be gathered at the voice of the archangel and the trump of God:
 - a) first—the dead
 - b) second—those who are alive and remain. (1 Thess. 4:13-17).Whatever efficacy the blood of Christ has, it is just as efficacious for the quick as it is for the dead.
5. Even if it could be proven (which it cannot) that this passage means that all those touched with the blood of Christ will come out of the ground, it does not necessarily follow that only those touched with the blood of Christ will rise out of the ground. The logic involved in this theory is:
 1. All baptized will be raised.
 2. Therefore, all the raised are the baptized.Which is like saying:
 1. All crows are black birds.

2. Therefore, all black birds are crows.
(Obviously all black birds are not crows, some are pigeons.)
6. This legalistic theory of the blood of Christ which in fact means that God cannot raise those not baptized must be rejected as infringing on the sovereignty of God. It allows that mortal man can decide by his own act (or failure to act i.e., to be baptized) whether or not he will make himself accountable to his Creator. What more pernicious and erroneous theory than that which teaches a teen-ager that it rests in his own hands whether or not he makes himself accountable to God?

1 COR. 15:22 "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive."

PROBLEM: It is argued that since all men are born "in Adam" and therefore subject to death, the only way they can come out of the grave is to become "in Christ" (i.e., to be baptized).¹ Hence it is said that only the baptized will be raised for judgment; those not baptized will remain eternally in the grave.

SOLUTION:

1. The chief fallacy in the above interpretation is the assumption that baptized believers are no longer "in Adam". The erroneousness of this assumption is evidenced by the fact that baptized believers still experience the pull of fleshly desires and are subject to death. (Cf. Rom. 7:18-25). The deliverance at baptism is potential, not actual. It is not actual until believers are freed from the "law of sin and death" (Rom. 8:2) when their mortal bodies are redeemed from its power by change to an immortal nature. Deliverance begins at baptism and the process continues through the probationary period until resurrection to judgment, and if faithful, the granting of immortality.
2. Believers are baptized for the forgiveness of their own sins, and not for the sin of Adam. This is indicated from the following passages:
 - a) "... and hath forgotten that he the believer was purged from his own sins." (2 Pet. 1:9).
 - b) "And now Paul why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." (Acts 22:16).
 - c) "... Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins . . . " (Acts 2:38 cf. 3:26; 5:31).

Believers (along with the rest of humanity) inherit the effects of Adam's sin, but not the guilt.
3. Resurrections have occurred in the past of those who evidently were neither Jews nor baptized. (Elijah raised the son of the widow of Zarephath, a Phoenician city between Tyre and Sidon—1 Kings 17:21-23). Baptism, therefore, cannot be the deciding factor by which God raises the dead, nor does He regard the Adamic sentence of death as a barrier to His raising the unjustified dead.

¹ Or by sacrifices in patriarchal and Mosaic dispensations.

MATT. 2:17,18 "Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by Jeremy the prophet, saying, In Rama was there a voice heard, lamentation, and weeping, and great mourning, Rachel weeping for her children, and would not be comforted, because they are not."

PROBLEM: This passage is quoted by J.W.'s in support of their belief that children will be raised to a life of opportunity in the kingdom of God. It is reasoned by them, that Jer. 31:15,16 indicates resurrection cannot be limited to the "responsible" since these babes will come back from the land of the enemy and Rachel will be rewarded for her labours.¹

SOLUTION:

1. "The land of the enemy" (Jer. 31:16) is not the grave but the countries in which natural Israel has been scattered. This is indicated by the context:
 - a) Natural Israel is punished for her unfaithfulness to Yahweh. (vs. 15,18,28 cf. also 30:12-15; 32-42).
 - b) Yahweh will extend forgiveness to unfaithful Israel. ("I will build thee, and thou shalt be built" Jer. 31:3,4; "I will turn their mourning into joy, and will comfort them, and make them rejoice from their sorrow." vs. 13; "I will surely have mercy upon him [Ephraim] saith the LORD" vs. 20 cf. 30:17).
 - c) Natural Israel will be restored to the land of Israel. (Jer. 31:8, 10,28, also vs. 11-13,16,21).
2. Rachel and Leah "did build the house of Israel". (Ruth 4:11). In this sense Rachel is the "mother" of Israel. Some of her sons "are not" because of Yahweh's punishments through Herod. But comfort is extended to Rachel (Jer. 31:16) with the promise that her scattered sons will return from the lands of the enemy to the land of Israel (cf. Ezek. 36,37). This passage has nothing to do with the resurrection of babies.
3. The destiny of children who die before the age of accountability is illustrated in the death of David's child by Bathsheba: "While the child was yet alive, I fasted and wept: for I said, Who can tell whether God will be gracious to me, that the child may live? But now he is dead, wherefore should I fast? can I bring him back again? I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me." (2 Sam. 12:22,23 cf. Acts 2:34). See also Job 10:18,19; 3:11-13.

JOHN 5:28,29 "Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation."

¹ See "The Watchtower", (August, 1962), No. 15, Vol. LXXXIII p. 475.

PROBLEM: These verses are cited to support the doctrine of universal resurrection. Stress is placed on the words of Jesus that all in the graves shall hear his voice and come forth from their graves.

SOLUTION:

1. The 'all' are those who hear the voice of the Son of God and are, therefore, responsible to his Judgment. (vs. 24). There is, however, a large segment of humanity that has never heard the words of Jesus and will not come forth in the resurrection. (Isa. 26:14; Jer. 51:57; Psa. 49:19,20). These are the dead that God remembers "no more". (Psa. 88:5).
2. 'All' is frequently qualified by the context in which it occurs. The following are examples:
 - a) Lk. 2:1—"All the world should be taxed" referred to the Roman world and not to the areas of North, Central and South America.
 - b) Jn. 10:8—"All that ever came before me are thieves and robbers", but this did not include John the Baptist and other prophets.
 - c) Rom. 1:7—"All that be in Rome" referred to the beloved of God—those called to be saints, and not to the populace.

Similarly, in the passage under consideration, the "all" refers only to those who hear the words of the Son of God and not to pagans, idiots and children.

1 COR. 7:14 'For the unbelieving husband is sanctified by the wife, and the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the husband: else were your children unclean; but now are they holy.'

PROBLEM: J.W.'s reason that children of believers who die before reaching the age of accountability would not be termed "holy" if their destiny was that of perishing with the rest of the ignorant.¹

SOLUTION:

1. "Holy" in the New Testament means "separate, set apart".² It is used with this meaning in the following two passages:
 - a) "Every male that openeth the womb shall be called holy to the Lord." (Lk. 2:23).
 - b) Israel is spoken of as the "holy" firstfruit. (Rom. 11:16).But neither passage carries the implication that all Israelites or all first-born sons have a resurrectional destiny with the faithful.³

¹ See "The Watchtower", (August, 1962), No. 15, Vol. LXXXIII p. 475.

² The Greek word "hagios" translated "holy" means "separate, set apart, holy." Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965).

³ The Apostle states that the unbelieving partner is "sanctified" by the believing mate. (1 Cor. 7:14). But "sanctified" comes from the same root word in the Greek as does "holy". Does this imply the resurrection of all or even some unbelieving partners? J.W.'s indicate the inconsistency in their argumentation since in their literature no claim is made for the resurrection of all unbelieving partners. See "The Watchtower", (March 1, 1965), No. 5, Vol. LXXXVI, pp. 146-148. No doubt some mates would be Gentiles "without hope". (1 Thess. 4:13; Eph. 4:18,19; 2:11,12).

2. The context of 1 Cor. 7:14 is a consideration of the status of a Christian believer having previously married a pagan partner. The marriage may have been anything but a Christian union⁴ when contracted, but Paul affirms that the children of such a union are legitimate. The believing partner would have the responsibility to bring the children up "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord". (Eph. 6:4). For this reason, and for the sake of the believing parent, the children are "set aside" or "separate" under God's special care. In the Old Testament the whole house of Abraham was blessed for Abraham's righteousness and Paul indicates to the believers in Corinth the effect of the same principle.⁵ But the passage nowhere states that "holy" has any application to resurrection.

1 JOHN 2:2 "And he is the propitiation for our sins: and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world."

PROBLEM: This passage is cited by J.W.'s in proof of their doctrine that God will raise those who are ignorant of his great salvation to a life of opportunity in the paradise-like conditions on the earth.¹

SOLUTION:

1. The redemption effected by the sacrifice of Christ is now available to all the world, but for it to have benefit for an individual, faith and belief are required. "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." (John 3:16). Those who do not believe—"perish", or are destroyed.
2. Scripture states that the Gentiles who perish have their "understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness of their heart". (Eph. 4:18). They perish, "without Christ", "aliens from the commonwealth of Israel", "strangers to the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world". (Eph. 2:12).
3. Those who come forth at the resurrection do so for judgment unto "life" (if they have done good) or unto "damnation" (if they have done evil). (Jn. 5:29). There is no opportunity for a third group of ignorant individuals to come forth since they cannot be commended for having done good. "It is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment" (Heb. 9:27). Therefore, only those responsible, who do "good" or "bad" will rise for judgment.
4. There are many statements in Scripture which either state or imply

⁴ Marriage is not a sacrament of the ecclesia. Marriage between believers and unbelievers is still a marriage and binding in God's sight.

⁵ The same principle is illustrated in Gen. 39:5,6: "And it came to pass from the time that he [Potiphar] had made him [Joseph] overseer in his house, and over all that he had, that the LORD blessed the Egyptian's house for Joseph's sake; and the blessing of the LORD was upon all that he had in the house, and in the field." Cf. also Gen. 30:27.

¹ "The Watchtower," (Feb. 1, 1965), No. 3, Vol. LXXXVI, pp. 85-87; also (Aug. 1, 1962), No. 15, Vol. LXXXIII, p. 475.

that those ignorant of God's salvation will sleep a "perpetual sleep" in the grave. See Isa. 26:13,14 cf. with believers vs. 19; Jer. 51:39,57; 1 Thess. 4:13.

5. The divine purpose today requires the visiting of the Gentiles to take out of them a "people for his [Yahweh's] name". (Acts 15:14). The "taking out" has been made possible by the sacrifice of Christ, but his propitiation "for the whole world" does not require the resurrection of those who have their "understanding darkened". (Eph. 4:18). It is difficult for religionists to understand that in the Divine appraisal "all flesh is grass, and all the goodliness thereof is as the flower of the field" for "surely the people is grass". (Isa. 40:6,7). "All nations before him are as nothing: and they are counted to him less than nothing and vanity." (Isa. 40:17).

REV. 20:5 "But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection."

PROBLEM: Many religious groups separate the resurrection of the righteous and the wicked. The righteous, it is argued are raised at the return of Christ but the wicked i.e., "the rest of the dead" are not raised until the thousand years are finished.

SOLUTION:

1. The word "lived" in verse 4: "And they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years" refers to eternal life. See this use of the Greek word "zao" in Rev. 1:18; 4:10; 5:14; 10:6; 15:7.
2. Similarly "lived" in verse 5 has the force of "eternal life". The dead are the righteous dead as is indicated by the context in verse 4. The dead under consideration are those who sit upon thrones and reign with Christ. (cf. Matt. 19:27,28), hence the rest of the dead must be the remainder of the righteous dead. These are the rest of the class seen in the vision. "The "firstfruits" are those who are raised before the 1,000 year period, and the "harvest", those who are faithful during the 1,000 year period and ingathered at the end of the millennium. (Rev. 14:1-5; 7:9).
3. "But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished" should be read as parenthetical. "This is the first resurrection" refers not to the rest of the dead, but to those who "lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years" (vs. 4 and 6)—i.e., those immortalized at Christ's return.
4. In the parables of Jesus ,the wicked and righteous are judged at the same time—when he appears. (Matt. 25:31-46—the righteous and wicked converse with Jesus at the time designated: "when the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory"; cf. Lk. 13:24-30—the sitting down in the kingdom is presented in the same context as the casting out of the wicked, thereby indicating that there is not a 1,000 year interval between the resurrection of the just and unjust).

MARK 10:14 "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God."

MATT. 18: 4 "Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven."

PROBLEM: These references are cited to justify the widespread practice of "baptizing" infants. The United Church of Canada puts it this way:

" . . . if the Kingdom belongs to little children, they cannot be denied baptism which is the sacrament of initiation into that kingdom . . . If even adult candidates for baptism have to become like little children, how can baptism be refused to the children whom they are supposed to imitate?"¹

SOLUTION:

1. Infant sprinkling is not mentioned in this text or any other in the New Testament.
2. If the United Church interpretation were the correct one, then the doors of the kingdom would be shut to all but baptized infants since Jesus said, "Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein." (Mark 10:15).
3. "Of such" and "as" ("like", see R.S.V., Mark 10:14,15) indicate that Jesus is making a comparison. Unless the adult has child-like qualities the doors of the kingdom will be shut. Child-like qualities are stressed elsewhere in Scripture, e.g., "Brethren, be not children in understanding: howbeit in malice be ye children, but in understanding be men." (1 Cor. 14:20); "Wherefore laying aside all malice, and all guile, and hypocrisies, and envies, and all evil speakings, as newborn babes, desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby." (1 Pet. 2:1,2).
4. The Matthew account leaves no doubt as to the intent of Jesus' words: "Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven. Whosoever, therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven." (Matt. 18:3,4). See verses 10 and 14—"little ones" are the disciples.
5. In the Mark account, Jesus refers to his disciples as "children." (Mk. 10:24).

MARK 7:4 "And when they come from the market, except they wash . . ."

LUKE 11:38 "And when the Pharisee saw it, he marvelled that he had not first washed before dinner."

¹ "The Doctrine and Practice of Infant Baptism", Church Membership: Doctrine and Practice in The United Church of Canada: A report presented and accepted at the Twentieth General Council in 1962. (Toronto: The Board of Evangelism and Social Service, and The Board of Christian Education, 1963), p. 25. It was a stated objective of the report to "be of use in helping the Church come to a clearer understanding of God's purpose and a more faithful obedience to his will."

PROBLEM: Since the Greek word, "baptizo" is translated "wash" and "washed" in these passages, it is argued that one cannot insist that the form of baptism must be immersion.

SOLUTION:

1. These are the only two passages in the A.V. where "baptizo" is translated other than baptism. In 74 other passages "baptizo" is translated by "baptize".¹ The Greek word, "rhantizo" which means "sprinkle" is never translated "baptize".
2. The word "baptizo" comes from "bapto" which means, "to cover wholly with a fluid . . . to fully wet . . . by implication, to stain (as with a dye): dip"².
3. The descriptive language of Biblical baptisms clearly implies immersion. For example:
 - a) John the Baptist—"John also was baptizing in Aenon near to Salim, because there was much water there." (John 3:23).
 - b) Jesus—"Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water . . ." (Matt. 3:16).
 - c) Eunuch—" . . . and they went down both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him. And when they were come up out of the water . . ." (Acts 8:38,39).
4. Baptism is likened to a burial in Rom. 6:4, (cf. Col. 2:12) "Therefore, we are buried with him [Jesus Christ] by baptism into death." The figure of death and burial is preserved in immersion in water; it is not preserved in sprinkling or pouring.

JOHN 4:2 "Though Jesus himself baptized not, but his disciples."

PROBLEM: Since Jesus did not baptize, it is reasoned that baptism cannot be necessary for salvation.

SOLUTION:

1. It should be immediately apparent that the conclusion, "baptism cannot be necessary for salvation" does not follow from the statement, "Jesus himself baptized not," since his disciples did baptize.
2. It is a mistaken idea that baptism is less important when performed by the disciples than if performed personally by Jesus Christ. John records, "After these things came Jesus and his disciples into the land of Judea; and there he tarried with them and baptized." (John 3:22). The disciples were the instruments by which the baptismal act was performed. Similarly, Jesus told his disciples "He that receiveth you receiveth me . . ." (Matt. 10:40). He later told the seventy, "He that heareth you, heareth me." (Luke 10:16).
3. Many Biblical passages record instructions for candidates to be baptized (Acts 2:38; 8:38; 10:48) yet no prescriptions are set out as to ¹ The Greek word "baptismos" is translated "washing" in the A.V. of Mark 7:4,8 and Heb. 9:10.

² James Strong, Strong's Exhaustive Concordance of the Bible, (New York: Abingdon Press, 1965).

- who should perform the baptism. The historical narratives indicate that the immerser (when identified) was always a believer. E.g., Philip (Acts 8:38); Peter (Acts 10:47,48); Paul or Silas (Acts 16:31-33).
4. Baptism is essential for salvation. The following passages indicate this:
- a) Jesus himself said, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved . . ." (Mark 16:15,16) Who has the authority to whittle Jesus' instruction to mean that one can be saved without water baptism?
 - b) "Be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins . . ." (Acts 2:38). This implies that until baptism one does not have forgiveness of sins.
 - c) "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." (Gal. 3:27). Baptism, therefore, is the divinely appointed way to "put on Christ."
 - d) Paul was told, "And now why tarriest thou? arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins . . ." (Acts 22:16). This implies that (even although Paul had confessed: "What shall I do Lord?"—vs. 10) Paul was "in" his sins until they were washed away in baptism.
 - e) " . . . the longsuffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is eight souls were saved by water. The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us . . ." (1 Pet. 3:20,21). Were any saved outside the ark of Noah? Since baptism is a "like figure" can one be saved outside of the divine provision of baptism?

ROM. 10:9 "That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved."

ROM. 10:13 "For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved."

PROBLEM: These passages are used primarily by Evangelicals who teach that all that is needful for salvation is to "Accept the Lord Jesus and take him as your own personal Saviour". The assumption is made that baptism is an outward sign of an inward change, but is not essential for salvation.

SOLUTION:

1. These verses in Romans are sound enough when understood in a Scriptural sense. Baptism is essential as the plain evidence of Matt. 3:15; Mark 16:16; John 3:5; Acts 2:38; 10:48; 22:16; 1 Pet. 3:21 shows.
2. Is Paul going to suggest that baptism is not essential after writing so powerfully about it in the sixth chapter? (Rom. 6:3-5).
3. Can one really be a believer and disallow the plainest and simplest (so far as ease of obedience goes) of Christ's commandments?
4. A permissible rendering of Rom. 10:13 is: "Whosoever shall call the name of the Lord upon himself shall be saved". See James 2:7 (R.V. margin) and Acts 22:16, where the same form of the Greek verb is used. How does one call the name of the Lord upon himself except by baptism? (Gal. 3:27).

5. The same phrase, "Whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved", is used in Acts 2:21 and here it is certainly followed in baptism by those who "gladly" received Peter's words. (Acts 2:40,41).
6. Sometimes in an endeavour to prove that doctrine is not essential Evangelicals quote Acts 8:37: "I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God". The following points require stressing:
 - a) These words are not in the Greek text. They are deleted by R.S.V., R.V., Rotherham's, The Emphasized Bible, N.E.B., and Nestle Greek Text.
 - b) To "preach Christ" is a comprehensive expression. This is indicated by a comparison of Acts 8:5 and Acts 8:12. "Then Philip went down to the city of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them", but in verse 12 Philip is preaching "the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ . . ."
 - c) Even to believe that Jesus is Lord requires an understanding of his nature and sacrifice. Similarly, to believe that God raised him from the dead requires an understanding of hell, soul, spirit, and quickening spirit.
 - d) As false doctrines and perversions increased with the growth of the Truth in the first century this made necessary negative as well as positive teaching. (See for example: 1 Cor. 15:35,36; 1 Tim. 1:19,20; 2 Tim. 2:17,18; 1 Jn. 4:1-3; Titus 1:14).

1 COR. 1:17 "Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the gospel."

PROBLEM: This passage is quoted to prove that baptism is not necessary for salvation.

SOLUTION:

1. Such an interpretation is sheer perversion of the context for Paul says he did baptize Crispus, Gaius and the household of Stephanas, (vs. 14-16), which would mean Paul writes his own condemnation if "Christ sent me not to baptize" be understood to be a prohibition of him baptizing converts.
2. The context shows that there was a partisan spirit in Corinth. Converts were saying "I am of Paul", "I am of Apollos", (1 Cor. 1:12, 13), but Paul would have none of it. Hence his sigh of thankfulness: "I thank God that I baptized none of you . . . lest any should say that I had baptized in mine own name." (vs. 14,15).
3. This passage indicates that no special virtue is associated with the baptizer.¹ Paul himself was commissioned by Christ to be, first and foremost, a preacher of the Gospel. Whether he personally undertook the baptism of converts was a matter of no importance.
4. That baptism is essential to salvation is evident from Mark 16:16; Jn. 3:5; 1 Peter 3:21; Gal. 3:27; Acts 2:38; 22:16; 16:30-33.

¹ Jesus did not personally baptize, this was done by his disciples. (John 4:2).

"SAVED" (ETERNAL SECURITY)

PRELIMINARY POINTS

There are likely very few Christadelphians who have not at some time or another been confronted by those who argue for "eternal security". Usually these individuals can cite hour and place when "saved". Christadelphian open-air speakers are often challenged by these Evangelicals "Have you accepted the Lord Jesus as your personal Saviour? Have you been born again and washed in the blood of the Lamb? Are you a saved man?" These zealots are quick to testify: "Hallelujah! Praise the Lord! I'm a saved man!" Little headway is made in such an exchange until the Christadelphian speaker insists on the questioner explaining what he means by "saved". There is, for example, a temporary and an ultimate sense in which "saved" can be used.

The following illustration shows the differing, but related ways in which 'saved' can be used: Imagine a downed bush pilot in the Canadian Arctic desperately attempting to maintain his body heat in -60°F weather. Weakened by loss of blood and broken bones, the cold of the icy blasts drives like nails through the parka's folds. At night the circle of half-starved wolves becomes increasingly brazen. But suddenly in the few hours of daylight, a noise is heard out of the skies and overhead a rescue plane is seen coming in the direction of the downed craft. "Thank God, I'm saved" cries the bush pilot. But he is not completely out of danger. The rescue craft may be unable to land on the rough ice surface and by the time a rescue team travels several miles the pilot may perish from loss of blood or fall victim to the wakeless sleep of the Arctic cold. Even when rescued by the team and placed in the rescue aircraft he is not "saved" in the strict sense of the term. The rescue craft may lose a ski on a protruding chunk of ice or may itself be ruined from carburetor-icing or a down-draft. Not until the bush pilot is safely back at the base and fully recovered from his ordeal, can he be said in the fullest sense to be "saved".

Similarly in the Bible, Jude states that God "having saved the people out of the land of Egypt, afterward destroyed them that believed not." (Jude 5). "Having saved" is not used in the ultimate sense of eternal salvation.

Three distinct uses of "saved" occur in Scripture. Care in their use is required to avoid the misleading and disastrous conclusions of Evangelicals.

1. "Saved" in the past tense referring to the sacrificial work of Christ or when the believer avails himself of that sacrifice at his baptism.
 - a) "Who hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began." (2 Tim. 1:9). The reference here is to the sacrifice of Christ in the plan of God.
 - b) "Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Spirit.” (Titus 3:5). This verse refers to the believer’s acceptance of divine salvation at baptism, therefore the past tense is used.

2. “Saved” in the present tense (continuous tense in the Greek). These passages indicate that salvation is a continuing process throughout the whole of the believer’s life.
 - a) “. . . And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved [were being saved, R.S.V.].” (Acts 2:47).
 - b) “For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but unto us which are saved [being saved, R.S.V.], it is the power of God.” (1 Cor. 1:18).
 - c) “By which salvation ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you . . . ” (1 Cor. 15:2).
 - d) “For we are unto God a sweet savour of Christ, in them that are saved [are being saved, R.S.V.] . . . ” (2 Cor. 2:15).
3. “Saved” in the future tense and ultimate sense.
 - a) “. . . but he that endureth to the end shall be saved.” (Matt. 10:22).
 - b) “If any man’s work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss: but he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire.” (1 Cor. 3:15). This passage refers to salvation at the Day of Judgment.
 - c) “To deliver such an one unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus.” (1 Cor. 5:5). This passage likewise refers to salvation at the Day of Judgment.
 - d) “Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee.” (1 Tim. 4:16). Timothy had been appointed leader of the ecclesia by Paul. According to Evangelical teaching Timothy was “a saved man”. But note, the Apostle Paul writes of Timothy’s salvation as yet future and conditional on giving heed to the doctrine.

In the past, God manifested His great salvation in the person and work of Christ. This is appropriated by the believer at his baptism. A life of discipleship follows in which the salvation is worked out in fashioning a new creation. It is not until the Day of Judgment, that one is ultimately saved. It is, therefore, presumptuous for a man to consider himself unalterably reserved for eternal life before that time.

SUGGESTED STRATEGY

1. Once clarification has been successfully undertaken on the word “saved”, a very strong group of passages can be mustered against the view “once saved, for ever saved” or “eternal security”. One approach is to argue as follows from the Epistle to the Hebrews:
 - a) Read Heb. 3:12-14; 6:4-6 and 10:26-29. There is no way the “saved” Evangelicals can evade the force of these passages. Were or were not these believers saved? Since the references specifically state that they were “brethren”, were “partakers of Christ”, “enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Spirit . . . and have tasted . . . the powers of the world to come”, it is idle for Evangelicals to evade the issue by saying they never were in the way of life or “saved”.

- b) The second question follows: Since these believers were in the way of life, did (or could) they fall away? The fact that a “sorer punishment” and “fiery indignation” awaited such reprobates (of who it is said that it is impossible to renew them again to repentance since they crucify afresh the Son of God and put him to an open shame—Heb. 6:6) is proof that either the believers had committed such offences, or were about to. Either is fatal to Evangelical claims that believers are irrevocably reserved for eternal blessedness.
 - c) The logic of the above reasoning may be summarized as follows:
 - i. Believers in the way of life had either fallen or were about to fall from their calling.
 - ii. Upon such a “sorer punishment” will come.
 - iii. But if believers are to be punished, then they are not irrevocably reserved for eternal favour, and by implication believers have no justification for claiming “eternal security”.
2. Another approach, is to argue from the life and statements of the Apostle Paul:
- a) Was the Apostle “saved” when he confessed, “What shall I do, Lord?” (Acts 22:10). (The answer is inevitably, “Yes.”) Then why was he told, “And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord.” (Acts 22:16). If he were “saved”, (having had his sins washed away when he said, “What shall I do, Lord?”) why was he told not to tarry but to arise and wash away his sins?
 - b) If the Apostle were “eternally secure” how is one to understand the following language: “That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death; If by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead. Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect . . . Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended . . .” (Phil. 3:10-13). Similarly: “But I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection: lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway.” (1 Cor. 9:27). Is this the language of a man who knows that his eternal blessedness is already fully assured?
 - c) The Apostle Paul said, “That being justified by his grace, we should be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life.” (Titus 3:7). But the Apostle defined hope explicitly: “hope that is seen is not hope: for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for?” (Rom. 8:24). If the Apostle had already been assured of eternal security, why was he in hope of eternal life?

- JOHN 3:36 "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: and he that believeth not¹ the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him."
- JOHN 6:47 "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me hath everlasting life."
- JOHN 6:54 "Whoso eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day."
- 1 JOHN 5:11 "And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son."
- 1 JOHN 5:13 "These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God; that ye may know that ye have eternal life, and that ye may believe on the name of the Son of God."

PROBLEM: These verses are stressed by the Gospel Hall groups, Pentecostals and Evangelicals. Since the past tense, "hath eternal life" is used by John, it is argued that believers have eternal life as a present possession—their eternal security assured.

SOLUTION:

1. Almost without exception, those who claim to have "eternal security" also believe in the immortality of the soul. But if believers and non-believers alike have immortal souls, what is the eternal life that Jesus said he would give to believers?
2. If it is argued that by "getting saved" one is immune from hell-fire and the lake of fire, where is this taught in John's Gospel or Epistles?
3. What objective evidence is there that a "saved man" is really saved? He may say that he is saved, but how is one to know for certain that his profession is true?
4. The "saved" arguments in the above passages rest on a mistaken understanding of the use of the tenses in the writings of John. The past tense is used by John of future events, to emphasize the certainty of their outcome. Consider the following examples:
 - a) "The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand." (John 3:35). But the writer to the Hebrews explicitly states, "But now we see not yet all things put under him." (Heb. 2:8).
 - b) "I have overcome the world." (John 16:33). But Gethsemane lay ahead.
 - c) "I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do." (John 17:4). Jesus had yet to die "for our sins according to the Scriptures." (1 Cor. 15:3).
 - d) "And the glory which thou gavest me I have given them . . ." (John 17:22). But believers are not ultimately glorified until the return of Christ and the granting of immortality. (Col. 1:27 cf. 2 Tim. 2:10-12).
 - e) " . . . That they may behold my glory which thou hast given me . . ." (John 17:24). Jesus was not glorified until after his resurrection. (Luke 24:26; 1 Tim. 3:16).

¹ "Believeth not" should be translated "does not obey" as in R.S.V. and Nestle Greek Text, (London: Samuel Bagster and Sons Ltd., 1967).

- f) See also: Rom. 4:17-21, Isaac was not born at the time of the promise; 2 Tim. 1:10, but people still die. Not until the end of the millennium will death be abolished cf. 1 Cor. 15:24-28.
5. Similarly, eternal life is spoken of as a present possession, when it is still future—to be given “at the last day.” This is proven in two ways: A) by showing that John refers to eternal life to be given at the last day and B) by citing other references in the New Testament which show that eternal life and ultimate salvation are still future. The following is the evidence:
- A) Eternal life to be given at “last day”:
- a) “And this is the Father’s will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day.” (John 6:39).
 - b) And this is the will of him that sent me, that every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life: and I will raise him up at the last day.” (John 6:40).
 - c) Whoso eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day.” (John 6:54).
- Eternal life is promised, (1 John 2:24,25) but resides with the Son (1 John 5:11) until the “last day” when it will be given to the faithful.
- B) Other passages which indicate that eternal life is not a present possession of believers:
- a) “In hope of eternal life which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began.” (Titus 1:2).
 - b) “That being justified by his grace, we should be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life.” (Titus 3:7 cf. Rom. 8:24, “hope that is seen is not hope: for what a man seeth why doth he yet hope for?”).
 - c) “And these shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal.” (Matt. 25:46 cf. Dan. 12:2). The context of this passage indicates the righteous are first judged and then invited to enter into life eternal. (Matt. 25:31-46). This implies that the righteous do not have eternal life before entering into life eternal.
- C) Salvation is an ultimately future experience:
- a) “. . . for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed.” (Rom. 13:11). If salvation was nearer than when saints believed, it was obviously not a present possession.
 - b) “Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation.” (Heb. 1:14). An heir is not a present possessor.
 - c) “For a helmet the hope of salvation.” (1 Thess. 5:8). One does not hope for that which he already possesses.

JOHN 10:28 “And I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand.”

PROBLEM: This passage is cited by Evangelicals to prove that those who “accept the Lord as their personal Saviour” are eternally secure, their future salvation being assured.

SOLUTION:

1. This passage applies to those who are Christ's sheep, but who is to know before the Day of Judgment who is a "sheep" or a "goat"? (Matt. 25:33).
2. Many who think they are "sheep" will find that they are really "goats". (Matt. 25:41-46; 7:21-23; Luke 13:26-27).
3. "And they shall never perish" does not mean "they shall never die." For the disciple, death is not a perishing, but a sleep. (John 11:11-14; 1 Cor. 15:6,18; 1 Thess. 4:13). It is the unbeliever who is consigned to perish. (Jn. 3:16; Luke 13:3,5; cf. Jer. 51:53,57).
4. Note the steps Christ outlines. The sheep:
 - a) "hear my voice" (vs. 27) — response
 - b) "follow me" (vs. 27) — discipleship
 - c) "I give unto them eternal life" — resurrection¹
 - d) "They shall never perish" — security in the kingdom
 - e) "neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand" — security from false prophets²Evangelicals make the mistake of placing step d) before c).

JOHN 11:26 "And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die."

PROBLEM: This passage is cited by Pentecostals and Evangelicals as proof that when one "accepts the Lord Jesus as his personal Saviour", he is saved for eternity.

SOLUTION:

- . Jesus said "whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." He refers to living believers who will be transformed directly from mortality to immortality without experiencing death.
2. This interpretation is supported from the context:
 - a) Verse 24—speaks of the resurrection at the last day.
 - b) Verse 25—refers to believers who die before the last day, "though he were dead, yet shall he live."
 - c) Verse 26—completes the picture. Disciples alive at the Lord's return will put on immortality without experiencing the sleep of death.
3. The Apostle Paul stated: "I am not aware of anything against myself, but I am not thereby acquitted. It is the Lord who judges me. Therefore do not pronounce judgment before the time, before the Lord comes, who will bring to light the things now hidden in darkness and will disclose the purposes of the heart. Then every man will receive his commendation from God. (1 Cor. 4:4-5 R.S.V.). Similarly, Jesus indicated in his parables that many who think they are "sheep" will find out that they are rejected as "goats". (Matt. 25:41-46 cf. 7:21-23; Lk. 13:25-30). It is presumptuous, therefore, for one to declare "before the time" that one is irrevocably reserved for eternal favour.

¹ Disciples alive at the return of Christ will be transformed to immortality without experiencing the sleep of death. (Jn. 11:26; 1 Cor. 15:51; 1 Thess. 4:13-17).

² The same Greek word "harpazo" translated "pluck" (vs. 28,29) is translated "catcheth" in verse 12. The "wolf" represents false teachers. (cf. Acts 20:28-30).

EPH. 2:8,9 "By grace are ye saved . . . it is the gift of God . . . not of works, lest any man should boast."

PROBLEM: This passage is used by Evangelicals to justify their doctrine of "eternal security" when "Jesus comes into the heart". This "eternal security" is said to be independent of subsequent works.

SOLUTION:

1. Let it be said at the outset that one cannot obtain salvation as a return for works done. The law taught this lesson. (Gal. 2:21; Rom. 3:21; 5:21).
2. There are two sides to salvation. The divine side which is grace and the human side which is obedient faith. Evangelicals argue that if one "works" for salvation then the reward is paid as wages rather than a gift. This is an over-simplification. God gives us food, but we must work for it. God gave Joshua the city of Jericho, but he was still commanded to march around the walls for seven days. (Josh. 6:2,4). Likewise salvation is the free gift of God, but man must comply with the conditions.
3. It is true to say that no man can ever be saved without the grace of God, but there are other characteristics required in the receiver of grace, for salvation. The following is a representative list:
 - a) "For we are saved by hope." (Rom. 8:24).
 - b) "Therefore being justified by faith we have peace with God . . . " (Rom. 5:1).
 - c) "And being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." (Heb. 5:9).
 - d) "The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us . . . " (1 Pet. 3:21).
 - e) "But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." (1 John 1:7).
 - f) ". . . Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling." (Phil. 2:12).
 - g) "Ye see then how that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only." (James 2:24).
 - h) "Save yourselves from this untoward generation." (Acts 2:40).
 - i) "By which also ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you . . . " (1 Cor. 15:2).

Grace involves three things: a giver, a gift, and a receiver. From these passages it is clear that the receiver must evidence hope, faith, obedience, baptism, works, and that he also saves himself.¹

4. Ultimate salvation is not now a present possession. The following passages indicate this:

¹ The question as to which single characteristic saves the man is an abstraction. An illustration is helpful. A man who has fallen into the river screams for help. A man on the bank runs with a rope and throws it to the man in the river. He catches hold and is pulled to safety. What saved him? Was it his scream? Was it the rope? Was it the man on the bank? Did he save himself? Or was it all of these working together?

- a) “. . . he that endureth to the end shall be saved.” (Matt. 10:22).
 - b) “. . . the gospel . . . by which ye also are saved if ye keep in memory what I have preached unto you . . . (1 Cor. 15:1,2).
 - c) “. . . give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall.” (2 Pet. 1:10).
 - d) “Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God . . . lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin. For we are made partakers of Christ if we hold the beginning of our confidence stedfast unto the end.” (Heb. 3:12-14).
5. Evangelical logic has a superficial impressiveness. When examples are cited of “saved” members who have fallen away (e.g., drunkards, who will be excluded from the kingdom, Gal. 5:19-21), Evangelicals reply by stating that such individuals never were really “saved”. This is sheer logical emptiness. Security has been purchased at the price of truth.
 6. Almost without exception, those who are quick to stress Eph. 2:8 are the very ones who dismiss baptism as a mere outward sign of an inward change. When such occasions arise Gal. 3:27 (“For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ”), should be emphasized. It is also impressive to cite the baptism of Paul, since it can be shown that a man can be “converted” (Acts 22:10), but does not have his sins washed away until baptized. (Acts 22:16 cf. Acts 2:38,41).

SATAN, DEVIL, DEMONS

PRELIMINARY POINTS

1. Wrested scripture on the devil may be categorized into three areas:
 - a) Passages which are cited to prove that the devil is a fallen angel (e.g., Job 1; Rev. 12).
 - b) Passages which are quoted to prove that the devil is a personal super-human being. (e.g., Matt. 4).
 - c) Passages in which demons are said to "possess" humans. (e.g. Matt. 12:22).
2. The devil and the "pre-existence" of Christ are two areas of discussion which often bog down and sometimes generate more heat than light. A discussion on these two areas, unless strictly regimented, inevitably brings in subsidiary evidence which becomes impossible to clarify because of the number of unproven assertions and counter assertions. It is often advantageous in these two areas to assume the negative and let the non-Christadelphian select the passages which he considers proves the proposition. This is a productive way in which to sift the evidence passage by passage—"Does or does not passage 'x' prove that the devil is a rebel angel?"
3. In such discussions it is sometimes advantageous to withhold expository knowledge. Assuming for example, that it has been shown that Rev. 12 does not prove the proposition that the devil is a rebel angel, it may be far more appropriate either to advance to another passage which the non-Christadelphian considers does prove the proposition, or to expound the Bible's teaching on the devil. To expound the meaning of the woman, man-child, sun, moon and stars etc. of Rev. 12 will probably afford too many opportunities for irrelevant considerations.
4. The following are passages which should be a part of every Christadelphian's arsenal:
 - a) Origin of sin—James 1:13-15; Mk. 7:20-23 cf. Jer. 17:9.
 - b) The meaning of satan (adversary)—the following are referred to as "satan" or "adversary":
 - i. God — 2 Sam. 24:1 cf. 1 Chron. 21:1.
 - ii. An obedient divine angel — Num. 22:22
 - iii. Hadad the Edomite — 1 Kings 11:14.
 - iv. Peter — Matt. 16:23.
 - c) The meaning of "devil" (accuser; calumniator)—the following are referred to as a "devil" or "slanderer":
 - i. Judas — Jn. 6:70
 - ii. Women — 1 Tim. 3:11 cf. Titus 2:3.
 - iii. men — 2 Tim. 3:3.
 - iv. "Sin in the flesh" — Heb. 2:14 cf. Heb. 9:26 and Rom. 5:21; 6:23 (to show that "devil" is synonymous with "sin") and then cf. Rom. 7:17,18.

DEMONS

PRELIMINARY POINTS

Belief in demons is still a prominent doctrine among groups like the J.W.'s. This is indicated by one of their publications which comments as follows:

"They ['fallen angels' at the time of Noah] are no longer counted among the sons of God, because they have made demons of themselves. They have become the angels of the great symbolic dragon, Satan the Devil, the first demon. As the leader in demon activities, he has become their prince or ruler. The Bible speaks of him as 'the ruler of the demons.' As such, he was given the name Beelzebub."¹

SUGGESTED STRATEGY

1. The following is an analysis showing that what was attributed to demon possession at the time of Jesus is today diagnosed in different terminology but involves the same symptoms. Jesus simply used the vernacular of the times:

Description	Vernacular at the time of Jesus	Diagnosis Today
Matt. 12:22 "Then was brought unto him one possessed with a devil ['daimonizomai; demoniae, R.S.V.], blind and dumb: and he healed him, in-somuch that the blind and dumb both spake and saw."	"possessed with a devil [demon]"	blind and dumb
Mk. 5:1-5 "No man could bind him, no, not with chains: Because that he had been often bound with fetters and chains, and the chains had been plucked asunder by him, and the fetters broken in pieces: neither could any man tame him. And always, night and day, he was in the mountains, and in the tombs, crying, and cutting himself with stones."	a man with an unclean spirit	insanity, schizo-phrenia?
Mk. 9:17-27 "He teareth him: and he foameth, and gnasheth with his teeth, and pineth away . . . and oft-times it hath cast him into the fire, and into the waters, to destroy him."	"hath a dumb spirit"	epilepsy
Lk. 13:11-17 "A woman which had a spirit of infirmity eighteen years, and was bowed together, and could in no wise lift up herself."	"spirit of infirmity"	arthritis

¹ "Things In Which It Is Impossible For God To Lie", (Brooklyn, New York: Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of N.Y., Inc., Int. Bible Students Ass., 1965), p. 169.

See also Jn. 10:20; Mk. 3:21 where "he hath a devil and is mad" means "he is beside himself".

2. Patients today with the same symptoms as those said to be possessed with demons in New Testament times, respond to chemotherapy. This is significant, for if indeed the ailment were due to demon possession, as some suggest, how can the patient's recovery through medicine and therapy be explained? Can pills cast out demons?
3. Although the narratives appear to indicate that the "spirits" cried out, it is clear that the vocalization of the sounds came from the demoniac. This is implied in the shift of pronouns in Mark 5:7,9: "What have I to do with thee?"² cf. "I adjure thee by God that thou torment me not". cf. "My name is Legion: for we are many."
4. After the miraculous cure by Jesus, Legion is described as "clothed and in his right mind". (Mk. 5:15). This implies that his affliction was insanity and not the influence of a fallen angel. (The request that the unclean spirits enter the swine is characteristic of some kinds of schizophrenics who fear the return of the insanity).

GEN. 3:4,5 "And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die: For God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods knowing good and evil."

PROBLEM: A typical interpretation of these verses is given in the following quotation:

"What the serpent said to Eve, did it think up and say of its own accord? Impossible! We know that no serpent has the brains of a man to understand God's command . . . [and] to converse with man in man's own language . . . Who, then, caused the serpent to talk to Eve? . . . It must have been some superhuman invisible intelligent creature . . . It must have been . . . [an] angelic son . . . now turned traitor to his own heavenly Father . . . Because of developing a greed for power over mankind, this rebellious son of God actually took steps to turn mankind away from obedience to God and to line mankind up on his side as rebels against Jehovah God."¹

SOLUTION:

1. If angels can become such rebels what guarantee is there that believers who are to be made like them (Luke 20:35,36) will not likewise become rebels?

² This should read: "What have you to do with me . . . ?" "I" is not in the Greek text. See The Interlinear Greek-English New Testament: The Nestle Greek Text, 2nd ed. (London: Samuel Bagster and Sons Ltd., 1967).

¹ "Things In Which It Is Impossible For God To Lie", (Brooklyn, New York: Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of N.Y., Inc., & Int. Bible Students Ass., 1965), pp. 158,159.

2. God deals with three parties in the fall of mankind: Adam, Eve and the serpent. An alleged fourth—the devil—is not mentioned in the Genesis narrative.
3. God said to the serpent, “Thou hast done this”. (vs. 14). Paul likewise says, “the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtilty”. (2 Cor. 11:3). Now this language is entirely appropriate if the serpent were the guilty party, but the language is totally inappropriate if the helpless serpent had merely been used as a tool by a powerful angel. Why the curse on the serpent: “thou art cursed above all cattle, and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life”, (Gen. 3:14)—a victim used by the devil for his own ends when the devil, the instigator, gets off “scot-free”?
4. The interrogation of Adam by God resulted in a typically human projection of the blame:
 - a) Adam blamed Eve (and God?): “The woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat”. (vs. 12).
 - b) The woman blamed the serpent: “The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat”. (vs. 13).
 - c) The serpent blamed no one. The blame was not placed on a fallen angel, because there was no fallen angel to be blamed.
5. It is objected that serpents cannot talk because they lack man’s brain power. Of course, serpents as they are known today do not talk, neither do asses. But an ass did speak in Biblical times: “the dumb ass speaking with man’s voice forbad the madness of the prophet.” (2 Pet. 2:16). It is carefully outlined that the serpent was more “subtle” or “crafty” (Septuagint) than any beast of the field, (Gen. 3:1), its propensities being used to provide a trial of the integrity of the first parents.
6. Since the fall of man the seed of the serpent has been symbolically identified with sin. (e.g., Matt. 23:33).

GEN. 6:2 “ . . . the sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair; and they took them wives of all which they chose.”

PROBLEM: The “sons of God” are claimed by J.W.’s and others to have been angels who had sinned and spread evil by marrying the daughters of men. A J.W. publication puts it this way:

“To marry the daughters of men, those heavenly sons of God [angels] materialized human bodies, clothing themselves with fleshly bodies like those of men on earth . . . When the Flood came, those disobedient sons of God could not get into Noah’s ark, and so, to escape from the floodwaters, they dematerialized, dissolved their assumed human bodies, and returned to the spirit realm. They were not admitted back to the heavenly family of God’s perfect, sinless sons. They were degraded to a very low state that the Bible calls ‘Tartarus’ . . . [J.W.’s teach they became the spirits in prison, 1 Pet. 3:19,20.] In view of this form of impr-sonment those disobedient spirit 'sons of the true God' cannot materialize anymore and live like husbands with women. But they still keep as close as they can to mankind, especially to women, whom they prevail upon to serve as spirit mediums, fortune-tellers, clairvoyants, and so forth."¹

SOLUTION:

1. All existence in Scripture is bodily existence. Nothing is known in Scripture of "materializing" and "dematerializing" "assumed" bodies. J.W.'s should be pressed hard for evidence to justify such a doctrine.
2. Luke 20:35,36 is conclusive—angels do not marry: "But they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry, nor are given in marriage: Neither can they die any more: for they are equal unto the angels; and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection."
3. "Sons of God" can refer to angels as it may in Job 38:7, but the expression is also used of men. (See Deut. 14:1, R.S.V.; Hosea 1:10; Lk. 3:38; Jn. 1:12; 1 Jn. 3:1). In Gen. 6:2 the "sons of God" were the righteous line of Seth (Gen. 4:26)² intermarrying with the evil Cainites.
4. It is sometimes contended that only angel-human offspring could produce "nephilim" (mighty ones or giants, cf. Gen. 6:4). But the sons of Anak (Num. 13:33) were also giants, ("nephilim") and these were certainly not angel-human offspring, as they existed long after the flood.
5. Divine angels can not sin. They are "ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation". (Heb. 1:14). These angels are not rebels, but do Yahweh's commandments, "hearkening unto the voice of his word . . . ministers of his, that do his pleasure." (Psa. 103:20,21).
6. The "spirits in prison" passage in (1 Pet. 3:19,20) is considered elsewhere in this handbook.

JOB 1:6 "Now there was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before the LORD, and Satan came also among them."

PROBLEM: This passage is usually connected with Rev. 12 to prove that the devil is a fallen angel. A J.W. publication puts it this way:
" . . . an angelic son of God in the heavens had rebelled against Jehovah God, thus making himself Satan ('Re-sister')".¹

¹ "Things In Which It Is Impossible For God To Lie", (Brooklyn, New York: Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of N.Y., Inc., Int. Students Ass., Brooklyn, N.Y., 1965) pp. 167-169.

² See the A.V. mg.: "Or, to call themselves by the name of the LORD."

¹ "Things In Which It Is Impossible For God To Lie", (Brooklyn, New York: Watchtower Bible And Tract Society of N.Y. Inc., Int. Bible Students Ass. Brooklyn, N.Y., 1965), p. 48.

“At a conference of the angelic sons of God in heaven, Satan the Devil came also ‘from roving about in the earth and from walking about in it.’ So Jehovah God called Satan’s attention to a man down there on earth, Job in the land of Uz, as being different from all others, ‘a man blameless and upright, fearing God and turning aside from bad.’ ”²

SOLUTION:

1. Nowhere in the book of Job is Satan explicitly stated to be a fallen angel. The argument that Satan is a fallen angel is an inferred one, and involves the following assumptions:
 - a) That the “sons of God” refers to angels. The expression is possibly identified with angels in Job 38:7, but is used of humans elsewhere in Scripture: Deut. 14:1, R.S.V.; Psalms 82:6, R.S.V.; Hosea 1:10, Lk. 3:38; John 1:12; 1 John 3:1.
 - b) That Satan was a “son of God”. The passage only states that he “came among them”, but not that he was himself a “son of God”.
2. It is inferred that “a conference” took place in heaven from the following two references: “To present themselves before the LORD” (Job 1:6); “so Satan went forth from the presence of the LORD” (Job 2:7). But note the following:
 - a) The “conference” need not to have taken place in heaven. When men came before Yahweh’s accredited representatives on earth (e.g., the judges), they were said to be standing “before the LORD”. The following are two examples:
 - i. “Then both the men, between whom the controversy is, shall stand before the LORD, before the priests and the judges, which shall be in those days.” (Deut. 19:17).
 - ii. “. . . Take heed what ye do: for ye judge not for man, but for the LORD who is with you in the judgment.” (2 Chron. 19:6).
 - b) To leave the presence of the Lord (Job 1:12) does not require Satan (“adversary”, A.V. mg., Job 1:6) to have had access to the dwelling place of God in heaven. Cain “went out from the presence of the LORD” (Gen. 4:16) and he certainly was not in heaven. The adversary was well travelled on the earth: “going to and fro on the earth, and from walking up and down on it.” (Job. 1:7 R.S.V.). (Is walking the usual mode of locomotion for a mighty angel?)
3. It is impossible that a rebel angel could have had access to the dwelling place of God in heaven for the following reasons:
 - a) God does not tolerate evil: “Evil may not sojourn with thee.” (Psalms 5:4,5, R.S.V.); “Thou art of purer eyes than to behold evil, and canst not look on iniquity . . . ” (Hab. 1:13). How then could a rebel angel have access to heaven from before the creation of Adam and Eve until 1914? Or if, as it is sometimes asserted that Satan was cast out of heaven before the creation of Adam and Eve, how did he manage to regain access to heaven?

² Ibid., p. 299.

- b) If Satan were a rebel angel with access to heaven until 1914 (as J.W.'s assert), this would invalidate the Lord's prayer. Jesus prayed: "Thy Kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven." (Matt. 6:10). Did Jesus believe that heaven was the seat of revolution, intrigue, and disorder, and later to be the scene of a great war?
4. Job never attributed his afflictions to a rebel angel. His declaration was simply: "The hand of God hath touched me". (Job 19:21 cf. 2:10). Even Job's brethren, sisters and acquaintances acknowledged that the evil was brought upon Job by the LORD: "they bemoaned him, and comforted him over all the evil that the LORD had brought upon him." (Job 42:11).
5. Although it can be shown what the passage does not mean, an attempt need not be made to identify the adversary. Scripture does not provide a positive identification, and although some evidence might be deduced, ultimately "the secret things belong unto the LORD our God: but those things which are revealed belong unto us". (Deut. 29:29). The onus of proof rests with those who cite this passage as proof that Satan is a fallen-angel devil. To this issue the discussion should be confined since to do otherwise allows too many "red-herring" opportunities in which considerations irrelevant to the main issue are soon dragged in, resulting in a tangle of unresolved propositions and assertions.

ISA. 14:12-14 "How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning! how art thou cut down to the ground, which didst weaken the nations! For thou hast said in thine heart, I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God: . . . I will be like the most High."

PROBLEM: This verse is used to prove that Satan is a fallen angel. A S.D.A. book of official doctrine puts it this way:

"As to Satan, or the devil, we hold the uniform teaching of the Word to be that he is definitely a personal being—the supreme adversary of God and man . . . He was, however, once an angel of light, the highest of the angels. He was named Lucifer, son of the morning (Isa. 14:12-14). But he fell from his high estate (Eze. 28:13-18; Luke 10:18; John 8:44), and drew down with him a host of angels, first unto disaffection and then into open rebellion against God and His government . . ."¹

SOLUTION:

1. This passage nowhere mentions the terms "devil", "satan" or "fallen angel". The argument in support of a fallen angel is, therefore, an inferred argument.

¹ Seventh-day Adventists Answer Questions on Doctrine: An Explanation of Certain Major Aspects of Seventh-day Adventist Belief, (Washington, D.C.: Review and Herald Publishing Ass., 1957), pp. 618,619.

2. Lucifer is identified in the narrative, but not with a rebel angel. It is explicitly stated: "Take up this proverb² against the king of Babylon, and say, How hath the oppressor ceased!" (vs. 4). (The preceding chapter is a prophecy against Babylon itself, but now the prophecy is directed against the king of Babylon).
3. Some questions require answering:
 - a) Is Satan really accompanied by the noise of viols (sound of harps, R.S.V.)? (vs. 11).
 - b) Is Satan to be covered by worms in the grave (vs. 11) or is he not rather to be cast into the lake of fire? (Rev. 20:10).
 - c) Why is Satan desirous of a place "in the sides of the north"? (vs. 13).
 - d) If Satan is a rebel angel, why is he called "the man"? (vs. 16).
 - e) Why did Satan say, "I will ascend into heaven" if in fact he had access to heaven until 1914? (As J.W.'s assert.)
 - f) What land has Satan possessed, the destruction of which merits him dishonourable burial? (vs. 20).
 - g) Where are Satan's people buried? (vs. 20) Is not the lake of fire said to be the common receptacle of Satan and his cohorts?
 - h) When did Satan have charge over a prison, refusing to let the people go home? (vs. 17 R.S.V.).
4. Lucifer means "Day Star" (R.S.V.) and the verse employs the figure of the brilliant planet Venus which appears low in the sky just before dawn and climbs higher and higher in the sky until unseen in the daylight.³ The same bright planet is also an "evening star" seen at sunset and going lower and lower until lost beneath the horizon. Hence the figure of Lucifer, king of Babylon, rising in power to his zenith and saying in his heart "I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God" (which parallels the arrogance of another king of Babylon—Nebuchadnezzar—who said: "Is not this great Babylon, that I have built for the house of the kingdom by the might of my power, and for the honour of my majesty?" (Dan. 4:30). The "evening star" seen at sunset going lower and lower until lost beneath the horizon portrays the demise of Lucifer—"brought down to hell, to the sides of the pit." (vs. 15).
5. "Ascending to heaven" is a Biblical idiom for increase in pride or exaltation, and "falling from heaven", an idiom for complete humiliation. See Jer. 51:53 (refers to Babylon); Lam. 2:1; Matt. 11:23 (refers to Capernaum).

2 The "proverb" was a "taunting speech" (mg.) in which trees spoke (vs. 8), and the dead in hell were made to speak when the king died with his pomp and glory. (vs. 9-10).

3 See James Hastings (ed.), Dictionary of the Bible, (New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, 1963), p. 936. The Amplified Old Testament, (Michigan: Zondervan Publishing House, 1962), comments in a footnote to Isaiah 14 as follows: "... the application of the name Lucifer to Satan, in spite of the long and confident teaching to that effect, is completely erroneous. . . . Nowhere in the Bible is Satan called Lucifer. The misapplication of the name has existed since the third century A.D., and is based on the false supposition that Luke 10:18 is an explanation of Isaiah 14:12. . . . It is the satanic king himself who is being addressed." p. 503. The J.W.'s, for example, have recognized the force of these arguments and now no longer in their official publications refer to Satan as "Lucifer", nor is Isaiah 14 cited in support of their belief that Satan is a fallen angel.

EZEK. 28:13-15 "Thou hast been in Eden the garden of God . . . Thou art the anointed cherub that covereth; . . . Thou wast perfect in thy ways from the day that thou wast created, till iniquity was found in thee."

PROBLEM: This passage is cited to prove that Satan is a fallen angel. A S.D.A. publication puts it this way:

"Thus we believe Satan to be but a created being, though of the highest rank. He was once called the 'anointed cherub that covereth' (Ezek. 28:14). He was described as 'full of wisdom, and perfect in beauty' (verse 12). He was the embodiment of created perfection, and apparently led the worship of the universe. He was in the 'mountain of God,' where God manifests His glory, and was 'perfect' in his ways until 'iniquity' developed in him (verses 14,15). His heart became lifted up because of his beauty, and his wisdom was corrupted because of his brightness (verse 17). Unholy ambition and jealousy ruined him, and he led a host of angels in rebellion against God and Christ (Rev. 12:7-9). As a result he was 'cast' out of the mountain of God (Ezek. 28:16), and down to the 'ground', or earth (verse 17; Isa. 14:12)."¹

SOLUTION:

1. This passage nowhere mentions the terms "devil", "satan", or "fallen angel". The argument in support of a "fallen angel" interpretation, is therefore, an inferred argument.
2. The anointed cherub (accepting the A.V. translation)² is identified in the passage, but not with a rebel angel: "Son of man, say unto the prince³ of Tyrus . . ." (vs. 2). In chapters 26 and 27 prophecies recorded the then impending doom of the city of Tyre.
3. Some questions require answering:
 - a) In chapters 26 and 27 of Ezekiel's prophecy the destruction of Tyre is recorded—and literally enough, since today the site of ancient Tyre is like "the top of a rock . . . a place to spread nets upon" and has never been rebuilt. (Ezek. 26: 14). The remainder of chapter 28 is a prophecy directed against Sidon and the future restoration of Israel. Why, in this context, would the prophet introduce a "revelation" about the origin of Satan?
 - b) If Satan is a rebel angel, why is he called "a man"? (vs. 2,9 R.S.V.).
 - c) Does Satan the devil really traffic in riches—gold and silver? (vs. 4,5). Is not his concern for humans?

1 Seventh-day Adventists Answer Questions on Doctrine: An Explanation of Certain Major Aspects of Seventh-day Adventist Belief, (Washington, D.C.: Review and Herald Publishing Ass., 1957), p. 619.

2 The A.V. rendering of this verse identifies the cherub with the "king of Tyrus". The R.S.V. translates this verse as follows: "With an anointed guardian cherub I placed you"—in which case the guardian cherub does not refer to the king of Tyre.

3 Or "king of Tyrus". (vs. 12). "Prince" is translated from the Hebrew word "nagid" which means "leader". It is translated most often by "ruler" in the A.V., "King" is translated from the Hebrew word "melek" which means "king, counsellor". Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965).

- d) It is said by J.W.'s that Satan rebelled "because of developing a greed for power over mankind."⁴ But how is this to be squared with vs. 4,5 "and thine heart is lifted up because of thy riches"?
- e) Since Jesus stated that angels do not die: "neither can they [children of the resurrection] die any more: for they are equal unto the angels' (Lk. 20:36), how is Satan to die "by the hand of strangers" (vs. 10), to be devoured by fire and brought "to ashes" (vs. 18), and "to be no more for ever" (vs. 19, R.S.V.)?
4. "There is no secret that they can hide from thee." (vs. 3). This is an illustration of the way in which "the children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light." (Lk. 16:8). The king of Tyre was wise in his ability to increase his riches through trade (vs. 5, Zech. 9:2), but this does not mean that he was wiser than Daniel in divine matters.
 5. "Thou has been in Eden the garden of God." (vs. 13). It is reasoned that the real character must have been Satan the devil since the king of Tyre could not have lived contemporary with Adam and Eve. But the passage does not require the King of Tyre to have lived contemporary with Adam and Eve. It just requires the king to have been in Eden, the garden of God, but without specification as to time. Eden appears to have been an extensive area in which the garden was placed in the east. (Gen. 2:8; cf. Ezek. 27:23). In figurative language, Pharaoh, king of Egypt is depicted as being a cedar in Lebanon taller than any of the other trees of Eden (trees are used here symbolically for nations). (Ezek. 31:2,3, R.S.V., 8,9,16,18). But this reference to Eden does not imply that Pharaoh must have lived contemporary with Adam and Eve.
 6. "Thou wast perfect in thy ways from the day that thou wast created, till iniquity was found in thee." (vs. 15). It is sometimes argued that the passage cannot refer to the literal king of Tyre since he was not "perfect". The Hebrew word "tamim" translated "perfect" means "perfect, plain, whole, complete".⁵ Noah was a "just man and perfect" (Gen. 6:9—same Hebrew word, "tamim"), but there is no question of his being an angel.
 7. It is sometimes argued that the literal king of Tyre would have been procreated, not created (vs. 13,15), therefore, the passage must refer to an angel. But the Hebrew word, "bara" translated "create" means "to be prepared, formed, created."⁶ The same word is used for the creation of "people" (Psa. 102:18) and the Ammonites (Ezek. 21:30). Clearly in these passages the word cannot imply the creation of angels.
 8. Tyre occupied a privileged position in its relationship to Israel. David and Hiram had been close friends (2 Sam. 5:11; 1 Kings 5:1,6,7,10) and Hiram and Solomon had made a league in which Hiram supplied materials for the building of the temple. (1 Kings 5:12,17,18). The language of Ezek. 28:13-18 is taken from Israelitish worship and used symbolically for the relationship of Israel and Tyre (by implication suggesting the divine favour which rested upon Tyre because of its association with Israel). Consider the following:

⁴ "Things In Which It Is Impossible For God To Lie", (Brooklyn, New York: Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of N.Y., Inc., Int. Bible Students Ass., 1965), p. 159.

⁵ Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965).

⁶ Ibid.

- a) "Every precious stone was thy covering" (vs. 13); "thou hast walked up and down in the midst of the stones of fire." (vs. 14). This is an allusion to the stones set in the breastplate of the high priest of Israel.⁷ (Exod. 39:10-14). They were "stones of fire" "because of the way they would shine when exposed to the brilliance of the Shekinah glory of the sanctuary. They symbolized the twelve tribes of Israel. (Exod. 39:14). The king of Tyre walked in the midst of these stones of fire when he moved among the children of Israel (as in the preparation of the materials for the temple). The position of Israel in the divine purpose provided a "covering" for Tyre on the basis of the decree in Genesis 12:3: 'I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee'. God blessed the house of Potiphar because of Joseph: "... the LORD blessed the Egyptian's house for Joseph's sake; and the blessing of the LORD was upon all that he had in the house, and in the field." (Gen. 39:5). Similarly, Tyre was "covered" by Israel.
- b) "Thou art the anointed cherub that covereth." (vs. 14). The cherubim were figures of beaten gold at either end of the mercy seat. (Exod. 37:7-9). Their wings overshadowed the mercy seat with which they were of one piece. (Exod. 25:19,20). Although the translation of the Hebrew is uncertain, (accepting the A.V.), the suggestion may be that Tyre as a great mercantile power was privileged to cast its "wings" over Israel.⁸ It was the abuse of this exalted position that was a factor in the ruin of Tyre. (vs. 4,5).
- c) "Thou wast upon the holy mountain of God." (vs. 14). This holy mountain is Mt. Zion, the future site of God's house of prayer for all people. (Isa. 2:2,3; 56:7). This "holy mountain of God" is on the earth, not symbolically in heaven as J.W.'s assert. (See Ezek. 20:40).
- d) "Thou hast defiled thy sanctuaries by the multitude of thine iniquities." (Ezek. 28:18). This verse may imply that Tyre had set up forms of worship similar to that of Israel. Hiram was "ever a lover of David" and rejoiced with Solomon in the building of the temple. (1 Kings 5:1-12). The king of Tyre would no doubt have learned about God's kingdom in Israel from these two kings of Israel. Or, the verse may be interpreted this way: Tyre's sanctuaries were in Israel where the divine presence and favour were manifest. But Tyre failed to appreciate its privileged association with Israel. When Nebuchadnezzar came down into Jerusalem (586 B.C.), the prince of Tyrus said: "Aha, the gate of the peoples is broken, it has swung open to me; I shall be replenished, now that she is laid waste." (Ezek. 26:2 R.S.V.). In so saying, Tyre had spoken her own nemesis according to the decree of Gen. 12:3: "I will . . . curse him that curseth thee." Tyre, in her self-centered mercantile interests, had profaned the sanctuaries and was herself to be reduced to ashes.

⁷ Only 9 of the 12 stones are recorded in the Hebrew text. The Septuagint, however, has 12 stones.

⁸ Wings suggest protection. See Matt. 23:37. Psalms 36:7; 91:4. The Hebrew word "kanaph" (the usual Hebrew word for the wings of the cherubim) carries the meaning of wings as covering and protecting. See Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965).

- e) "I will bring forth a fire from the midst of thee, it shall devour thee, and I will bring thee to ashes upon the earth in the sight of all them that behold thee." (vs. 18). Tyre could not with impunity violate her privileged relationship with Israel. When Nadab and Abihu treated the sacred as secular, "there went out fire from the LORD, and devoured them, and they died before the LORD." (Lev. 10:2). Similarly, Tyre had failed to make a difference between the holy and unholy. It was, therefore, to be reduced to ashes—devoured like Sodom and Gomorrah. (Gen. 19:24,25).

MATT. 4:1-11 "Then was Jesus led of the Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil . . ."

PROBLEM: This is a stock proof-text cited in support of the belief that Satan is a personal being—a fallen angel.

SOLUTION:

- . If the devil were a fallen angel, why would the Holy Spirit lead the Son of God into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil?
- 2. The essence of a temptation rests in its subtlety, not in its obviousness. If Jesus had been confronted by a fallen angel the obviousness of the temptation would have vitiated its power.
- 3. Jesus "was in all points tempted like as we are" (Heb. 4:15), but who today is ever engaged in discussion by a fallen angel devil?
- 4. A temptation, to be a temptation, must be plausible, but if a fallen angel offered to Jesus all the kingdoms of the world and their glory, Jesus would know he were a fake. God, "the most High, [not a fallen angel], ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will." (Dan. 4:32). Jesus knew his Old Testament.
- 5. There is considerable evidence that the temptations were subjective, (i.e., that the conflicts within Jesus are presented in the narratives as if there was a dialogue between Jesus and Satan, when in effect Satan is only a personification¹ of the pull of the desires of Jesus.—cf. James 1:13-15). Consider the following:
 - a) Mark states that Jesus was "there in the wilderness forty days, tempted of Satan" (Mk. 1:13), but at least one of the temptations is said to have taken place in the holy city—Jerusalem. If Jesus literally went to the holy city, then the accounts appear contradictory.
 - b) Where is the mountain in the wilderness which is high enough to view all the kingdoms of the world and their glory in a moment of time? (Matt. 4:8, cf. Lk. 4:5).
 - c) Jesus had been baptized by John and given the Holy Spirit. (Matt.

¹ Personification is commonly used in Scripture. For example: death is personified as "reigning" (Rom. 5:14), sin as a "person", (Rom. 7:11), and riches as a "master" (Matt. 6:24).

3:16). How was this power to be used? To make life easy by using the power for selfish purposes (making stones into bread)? By “converting” Israel through dazzling displays of divine power (by casting himself down from the pinnacle of the temple)? By avoiding the agony and humiliation of crucifixion and death by taking the kingdoms of the world (his miracles would have assured this—cf. Jn. 6:14,15)?

MATT. 12:43-45 “Then goeth he, and taketh with himself seven other spirits more wicked than himself, and they enter in and dwell there: and the last state of that man is worse than the first . . .”

PROBLEM: This verse is cited to prove the existence of unclean spirits or demons. Unclean spirits are said to be emissaries of Satan the Devil, “the god of this system of things.”¹

SOLUTION:

1. Why should a powerful angel (angels excel in strength—Psa. 103:20) walk through dry places seeking rest? (vs. 43).
2. The narrative concerning the unclean spirit concludes: “Even so shall it be also unto this wicked generation.” (vs. 45). This conclusion indicates that the preceding is a parable of comparison and not to be taken literally.
3. The nation of Israel had experienced a cleansing by the teaching of John the Baptist. There “went out to him Jerusalem, and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan, and were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins.” (Matt. 3:5,6). The house was “cleaned” —“swept and garnished” (Matt. 12:44), but it was without its real occupant—the Messiah. “He came unto his own, [house, R.S.V.], and his own received him not.” (Jn. 1:11). The refusal of Israel to respond to the teaching of the Christ merited the description: “and the

1 All manner of evil has been wrought by the teaching that demons are invisible spirit-creatures. Augustine, revered by the Roman Church taught that “all diseases of Christians are to be ascribed to demons, chiefly do they torment the fresh baptized, yes, even the guiltless new-born infant”. Gregory the Great solemnly related that a nun, having eaten some lettuce without making the sign of the cross, swallowed a devil, and that when the devil was commanded to come forth by a “holy man” it did so and is reported to have said: “How am I to blame? I was sitting on the lettuce, and this woman, not having made the sign of the cross, ate me along with it.” Men who then cast out devils were very careful to keep their mouths closed while carrying out their exorcism, lest the devil should jump from the mouth of the patient into their own mouth. See Howard W. Haggard, M.D., Devils, Drugs, & Doctors: The Story of the Science of Healing from Medicine-Man to Doctor, (New York: Pocket Books, Inc., 1959), pp. 310-311. Under the belief that possession by devils causes disease, the sick during epidemics were carried to churches (often bound a dozen at a time), and thrown upon the floor of the church where they remained until they died or the devils expelled. Needless to say, recoveries were not frequent under this treatment, but the patient and not the treatment bore the blame. Projection of blame has also resulted. In France, during the Middle Ages, male demons were blamed for violating women, most of whom were nuns. “Pope” Innocent VIII issued a bull to provide the faithful with an efficacious formula for exorcising incubuses (these demons). In 1637 a formal public discussion took place in Paris on the subject. More recently, in Ontario, Canada, (Jan. 1969) a woman convicted of driving on the wrong side of a highway attributed the blame to “unseen forces” which placed the car in the opposite lane. She was fined and lost her driver’s license.

last state of that man [Israel] is worse than the first [prior to the cleansing of John's teaching]". (Matt. 12:45). Jesus said: "The men of Nineveh shall rise in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: because they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and, behold, a greater than Jonas is here." (Matt. 12:41). The parable was also in effect, a prophecy. In A.D. 70 the frenzied ("demonized") resistance of the Jews to the Roman invasion resulted in their national destruction.

LUKE 10:18 " . . . I beheld Satan as lightning fall from heaven."

PROBLEM: This passage is connected with Isaiah 14:12 to support the doctrine that Satan, a rebel angel, was cast from heaven after a great war with the forces of the Almighty. A S.D.A. book of official doctrine, for example, puts it this way:

"As to Satan, or the devil, we hold the uniform teaching of the Word to be that he is definitely a personal being—the supreme adversary of God and man . . . He was, however, once an angel of light, the highest of the angels. He was named Lucifer, son of the morning (Isa. 14:12-14). But he fell from his high estate (Ezek. 28:13-18; Luke 10:18; John 8:44), and drew down with him a host of angels, first unto disaffection and then into open rebellion against God and His government . . ."¹

SOLUTION:

1. It is usually argued that Satan was cast out of heaven prior to the events of Genesis 1-3, or that he was cast out of heaven in 1914 (as J.W.'s assert), but this passage squares with neither, since Jesus said, "I beheld Satan as lightning fall from heaven". (This was about A.D. 30.)
2. The passage does not state either that Satan was in heaven or that he fell from heaven. Jesus makes a comparison indicated by the simile "as". The comparison is not that as lightning falls from heaven so Satan fell from heaven. The point of the comparison is rather that the swiftness of the fall of Satan is as lightning falling from heaven.
3. The context indicates that the casting out of demons and not the fall of a rebel angel is the subject of reference. (vs. 17).
4. Satan (Greek: adversary)² is used by Jesus to describe the binding effect of sin through diseases. A number of passages indicate this:
 - a) Luke 11:14-23—The cause of dumbness (which was attributed to demon possession in the vernacular of the time—vs. 14) was associated with the "house" of Satan. (vs. 17-18). The subsequent cure was said to be the "kingdom of God" coming, since the power of the King was present. (vs. 20-22).

¹ Seventh-day Adventists Answer Questions on Doctrine: An Explanation of Certain Major Aspects of Seventh-day Adventist Belief, (Washington, D.C.: Review and Herald Publishing Ass., 1957), pp. 618,619.

² Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965).

b) Luke 13:10-17—Jesus healed a woman who had “a spirit of infirmity eighteen years”. (vs. 11). But this same healing is described as “a daughter of Abraham, whom Satan hath bound, lo, these eighteen years”. (vs. 16).

Hence, the victory of the seventy over demons resulted in the dethronement of Satan (the adversary) in his “house”. The cures effected by the disciples were so complete and rapid as to be compared to lightning falling from heaven. Despite this victory over the powers of sin and its effect—disease, Jesus instructs his disciples to rejoice rather than their names were written in heaven. (Lk. 10:20).

LUKE 22:3 “Then entered Satan into Judas surnamed Iscariot, being of the number of the twelve.”

LUKE 22:31 “And the Lord said, Simon, Simon, behold, Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as wheat.”

JOHN 13:2 “And supper being ended, the devil having now put into the heart of Judas Iscariot, Simon’s son, to betray him.”

JOHN 13:27 “And after the sop Satan entered into him.”

PROBLEM: These verses are cited to prove that Satan is a superhuman being.

SOLUTION:

1. Which is the superhuman being, Satan, or the Devil? In Jn. 13:2 the devil put the thought of betrayal into Judas’ heart, but after the sop, Satan entered into him. (John 13:27). Does Satan enter one who is already captured by the devil? (cf. “have not I chosen you twelve, and one of you is a devil?). The distinction between “the devil” (Jn. 13:2) and “Satan” (Jn. 13:27) may suggest that the former was sown by some emissary of the chief priests. The latter may indicate complete abandonment to sin. (cf. Jn. 12:6—Judas’ problems began before the crucifixion: “he was a thief, and had the bag”.)
 2. “Satan hath desired you [plural]” (Lk. 22:31) suggests that the chief priests were looking for two or more of the disciples who they could use for their own evil purposes, or it may suggest that they contemplated rounding up all the disciples.
 3. There is a parallel passage in Acts 5:3,4: Peter said to Ananias, “Why hath Satan filled thine heart . . . ?” But the next verse explains: “Why hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart?” When an individual gives himself over to sin, it is said to be Satan (adversary) entering into his heart.
-

JOHN 12:31; 14:30; 16:11 “Now shall the prince of this world be cast out.”

PROBLEM: Since Jesus refers to “the prince of this world”, this passage is cited to prove the personal existence of Satan.

SOLUTION:

1. The J.W.’s teach that Satan was cast out of heaven in a great war in 1914. Others assert that he was cast out before the fall of Adam, but this passage squares with neither of these, for it emphasizes: "Now shall the prince of this world be cast out".

2. "The prince of the power of the air" is identified with sin in Eph. 2:2,3. Notice the parallel structure: "And you hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins; wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, [Greek: "aion" of this "kosmos"] . . .

the prince of the power of the air,

the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience."

"The prince of this world" which had nothing in Christ was sin. The outward appearances in the death of Christ were deceptive since it appeared as if he were condemned, when it was the sin which was cast out and condemned. (Rom. 8:3). This personification of sin is in the pattern of other Scriptures. Sin is compared with a master who pays wages (Rom. 6:23), a slave owner from whom men are emancipated that they might serve God (Rom. 6:17), a reigning monarch (Rom. 5:21), and as indwelling with men. (Rom. 7:17).

3. The world rulers (Herod and Pontius Pilate) and the chief priests were the embodiment of the "prince of this world". The latter were shortly to be "cast" from their office by the sacrificial death of Christ (his "lifting up", Jn. 12:32).

2 COR. 11:14 "And no marvel; for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light."

PROBLEM: This passage is interpreted as a description of the subtle nature of a personal superhuman being—Satan the Devil. A S.D.A. publication puts it this way:

"The unsaved are in the 'power of Satan' (Acts 26:18), and the wicked world lies in his evil embrace (1 John 5:19, R.S.V.). He has many subtle 'devices' (2 Cor. 2:11), even transforming himself into an angel of light (2 Cor. 11:14).¹

SOLUTION:

1. How can Satan be transformed into an angel of light when it is taught that he was transformed from an angel of light because of his rebellion?
2. The Satan of this passage is not a rebel angel but rebel Jewish adversaries who were undermining the apostle Paul's influence in the Corinthian ecclesia. (See 2 Cor. 10:2, 10-18; 11:3-26). As Paul said: "for such men are false apostles deceitful workmen, disguising themselves as apostles of Christ. And no wonder for even Satan [the chief leader] disguises himself as an angel of light. So it is not strange if his servants [misguided supporters] also disguise themselves as servants of righteousness". (vs. 13-15, R.S.V.). The same Satan is referred to in 2 Cor. 2:11: "Lest Satan should get an advantage of us: for we are not ignorant of his devices."

¹ Seventh-day Adventists Answer Questions on Doctrine, (Washington, D.C.: Review and Herald Publishing Ass., 1957), p. 620.

JAMES 2:19 "Thou believest that there is one God; thou doest well: the devils [Grk. daimonia, 'demons', R.S.V.] also believe, and tremble."

PROBLEM: This passage is quoted by J.W.'s to prove the existence of demons¹—as emissaries of Satan.

SOLUTION:

1. This passage appears to be an allusion by James to the demons cast out by Christ and the disciples. (Mk. 3:11; Lk. 4:34,41).
2. The context of this passage in James indicates a concern for the relationship between faith and works. (vs. 14-18). The demoniacs or demon possessed persons had sufficient sanity to acknowledge "trembling", that Jesus was the Son of God, but this faith was not demonstrated in acceptable works. The Gadarene demoniacs were, for example, "exceeding fierce, so that no man might pass by that way". (Matt. 8:28). Unless believers to whom James addressed his epistle, demonstrated their faith in appropriate works, their professions of faith were in effect no better than those of a demoniac.
3. There is no indication elsewhere in Scripture that demons literally believed and trembled. It was the individual "possessed with demons" who did the speaking. (See Mk. 5:9—"And he answered, saying, My name is Legion: for we are many.") To be "possessed of demons" is equivalent to madness. (John 8:48; 10:20). Similarly, "demon possession" described infirmities of the body. (E.g. blindness—Matt. 12:22; epilepsy—Mk. 9:17-22; dumbness—Matt. 9:32,33.)

1 PET. 5:8 "Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour."

PROBLEM: This passage is cited in support of the doctrine that the devil is a rebel angel.

SOLUTION:

1. The passage does not state that the devil is a rebel angel. The devil is compared to a roaring lion but elsewhere in Scripture lion-like characteristics are ascribed to men, not angels. (e.g., Psa. 22:12,13; 57:4; Prov. 28:15).
2. The Greek word "antidikos" translated "adversary" means "an adversary in law"² and the Greek word "diabolos" translated "devil" means "accuser, calumniator".³ Hence, "the roaring lion" was an opponent at law who maliciously accused. This was none other than the Roman magistracy. The persecution of the ecclesia under Nero and Diocletian are well documented.
3. If it is argued that the devil was really behind the persecution, then proof that such is the case is required from the narrative.

1 "The Watchtower", (Aug. 1962), No. 15, Vol. LXXXIII, p. 477.

2 Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press. 1965).

3 Ibid.

4. Peter's first epistle expresses concern for the steadfastness of the ecclesia because of the imminent period of suffering that the ecclesia was about to enter. He exhorted: "Resist him, firm in your faith, knowing that the same experience of suffering is required of your brotherhood throughout the world"; "Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you." (1 Pet. 5:9 R.S.V.; 4:12). See also 4:16-19.
5. Paul had a similar encounter with a roaring lion (2 Tim. 4:17), but this lion was not a fallen angel, but Caesar's tribunal, (vs. 16,17) from which Paul was delivered at the first trial. Paul was also delivered, not from a rebel angel, but from persecutions and afflictions at Antioch, Iconium, and Lystra, of which he wrote: "... but out of them all the Lord delivered me. Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution . . . But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived." (2 Tim. 3:11-13).

2 PET. 2:4; JUDE 6 "And the angels which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation, he hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day."

PROBLEM: A J.W. publication interprets these verses as follows:
 "... before the flood of Noah's day some of these spirit 'sons of God' materialized as men, that is, they left their place in heaven as spirit creatures and clothed themselves with fleshly bodies. And why? To enjoy human passions by marrying the good-looking daughters of men . . . When the global flood of Noah's day destroyed all the wicked humans, the unfaithful angels dissolved their fleshly bodies and returned to the spirit realm. But they were not allowed to become part of God's organization of holy angels again. Instead, they were confined in a debased condition of spiritual darkness. (2 Pet. 2:4). Since the Flood, God has not permitted these demonic angels to materialize in the flesh as they did before then. Yet they can still exercise dangerous power over men and women. In fact, with the help of these demons Satan is 'misleading the entire inhabited earth.' (Revelation 12:9)."¹

SOLUTION:

1. The above publication assumes without proof the following:
 - a) That the "angels" which sinned were spirit creatures. The Greek word "aggelos" translated "angel" means "messenger, agent",² and is used of both human and divine messengers. It is used of humans in the following places: Matt. 11:10; Lk. 7:24,27; 9:52; James 2:25.

¹ The Truth that leads to Eternal Life, (Brooklyn, New York: Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of N.Y. Inc., Int. Bible Students Ass., 1968), pp. 58,59.

² Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965).

- b) That "sons of God" must refer to divine angels. (It refers to humans in Deut. 14:1, R.S.V.; Psalms 82:6, R.S.V.; Hosea 1:10; Luke 3:38; John 1:12; 1 John 3:1.)
 - c) That evil power can still be exercised by the "angels that sinned" despite the fact that they are "reserved in everlasting chains". (Why bother to chain these angels, if as the J.W. publication contends, they can still 'exercise dangerous power over men and women'?)
2. The angels in this passage are human, not divine angels. This is proven by the following:
 - "The wages of sin is death." (Rom. 6:23).
 - If divine angels were sinners, then they would die.
 - But Jesus said angels do not die. (Luke 20:36).
 - Therefore, the angels which sinned were human, not divine angels.
 3. All existence in Scripture is bodily existence. J.W.'s should be pressed hard for Scriptural evidence for asserting bodies can be "materialized" and "dissolved".
 4. There is evidence that the human angels were the 250 princes of the Israelitish congregation which were led in rebellion by Korah, Dathan and Abiram. (Num. 16). Consider the following:
 - a) They were "angeloi" (angels) since they were assigned to "minister" to the congregation. (Num. 16:9).
 - b) Their "first estate" or "principality" (Jude 6 mg.) was that of "princes" or "leaders" R.S.V. (Num. 16:2).
 - c) They left this "former estate" when they sought the priesthood. (Num. 16:10).
 - d) They were delivered into "chains of darkness" when they were swallowed alive by the earth. (Num. 16:31-33).³
 - e) They were "sinners" in arrogating to themselves the priesthood. (Num. 16:10,38).
 - f) The judgment is that which will be administered by Christ. (2 Tim. 4:1).
 5. It will be noted that in Peter's epistle, "the angels that sinned" is placed chronologically before the time of Noah (2 Pet. 2:4,5), whereas in Jude's epistle, it is placed after the exodus of Israel from Egypt. (Jude 5,6). There are too many similarities between the two epistles to conclude that the accounts refer to two different occasions on which "angels sinned". Rather Jude's epistle must be regarded as setting out the chronological order of events since in verse 6 the Greek text is syntactically connected with verse 5,⁴ thereby implying the historical sequence. But why the reversal of historical allusions in Peter's account? Because verse 4 in Peter's account is connected with verse 1. "But there were false prophets also among the people, [i.e., Israel of old]⁵ even as there shall be false teachers among you . . ." Verses

³ The Greek word for "hell" in 2 Pet. 2:4 is "tartarus" which only occurs in this passage. In popular mythology "tartarus" meant lower than hell ("hades"). This is exactly where Korah, Dathan, and Abiram went when swallowed up by the earth. See James Hasting (ed.), Dictionary of the Bible, (New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, 1963), p. 319.

⁴ 2 Peter 2:5,6 uses the normal disjunctive "kai", but Jude uses "te" which is copulative in character, and indicates the connection between Jude 5 and 6.

⁵ Note the connection between (2 Pet. 2:1 ("among the people") and 2 Pet. 1:21 ("holy men of God"—i.e., in Israel) cf. Acts 4:27.

2 and 3 are a warning of false teachers to come in the future, but verse 4 reverts to verse 1 and illustrates the judgment of God upon false prophets in Israel. In verses 5-7, Peter guided by the Holy Spirit, selects two additional illustrations from Old Testament history.

JUDE 9 "Yet Michael the archangel, when contending with the devil he disputed about the body of Moses, durst not bring against him a railing accusation, but said, The Lord rebuke thee."

PROBLEM: This verse is cited to prove that the devil is a personal superhuman being.

SOLUTION:

1. It is generally taught that the devil is concerned with souls or humans, but this devil is concerned with the body of Moses. Why should the devil want custody of a corpse?
2. It is sometimes argued that the devil wished to lead Israel into idolatry through veneration of the body of Moses, but this conjecture must be rejected for lack of Scriptural support. It is also argued that Jude alludes to an apocryphal writing "The Assumption of Moses"¹ but there is no certain evidence that Jude wrote his epistle later than the apocryphal work.² Some critics suggest that Jude refers to the "Targum of Jonathan" but this work makes no reference to the devil or to any contention concerning the body of Moses.
3. There are two lines of evidence which indicate that the devil of this passage is human and not superhuman. Jude and 2 Peter have so many similarities that Jude 8,9 can be read as an amplification² of 2 Pet. 2:10,11,12. It is clear that the description in Peter's account is about humans, therefore the same must be true of the parallel account in Jude. (See footnote 2a, and cf. Jude 16,19.)
4. The second line of reasoning seeks to show that "the body of Moses" is Joshua the High Priest in the time of Ezra and Zechariah, and that the devil is the group of disaffected priests debarred from priestly

1 The text extant as quoted by early "Christian" writers reads as follows: "Moses having died in the mount, the archangel Michael is sent removing the body. The devil therefore, wishing to cheat him, withstood him saying, 'The body is mine as lord of all material things' or because of his slaying of the Egyptian blaspheming against the holy man and proclaiming him a murderer. The angel, not enduring this blasphemy against the holy one, said to the devil, 'God rebuke thee!'" H.W., "The Apocryphal Associations of the Epistle of Jude", The Testimony Magazine, (June, 1964), Vol. 34, No. 402, p. 188-189.

2 There are further reasons for rejecting the claim that Jude quotes from "The Assumption of Moses". These are as follows:

a) Nearly every verse in Jude has its counterpart in 2 Peter. (It can be inferred that Jude wrote after Peter since Jude 17,18 is taken from 2 Pet. 3:2,3.) Peter's equivalent phrase to "the devil" in Jude's account is "railing accusation against them" (2 Pet. 2:11), thereby indicating that the "devil" in Jude's account is plural, and not singular, as it is in "The Assumption of Moses".

b) The contention alluded to by Peter is "before the lord" (2 Pet. 2:11), whereas "The Assumption of Moses" locates it on top of the mountain where Moses died.

c) If Jude were alluding to the apocryphal work, then his argument would be pointless. How is the self-restraint of a mighty angel in refraining from rebuking a superhuman devil a reason why a "servant of Jesus Christ" should "earnestly contend for the faith once delivered unto the saints"? (Jude 3).

office. It is evident that Jude quotes Zech. 3:2 from the following similarities:

Zech. 3	Jude
an angel of the Lord	Michael the archangel
Satan	the devil
The LORD that hath chosen Jerusalem rebuke thee	The Lord rebuke thee
a brand plucked out of the fire	Pulling them out of the fire (vs. 23)

The children of the priests were debarred from priestly office because they were unable to provide proof of descent. (Ezra 2:62). It can be inferred that this disaffected group was the devil. The priests would likely turn on Joshua. "Then what of you as High Priest? Where is your priestly attire?" (No doubt lost during the Babylonian captivity). Hence the angel's remark: "Take away the filthy garments from him. And unto him he said, Behold, I have caused thine iniquity to pass from thee, and I will clothe thee with change of raiment." (Zech. 3:4). Jude alludes to this event in attacking the would be corrupters of the Faith.

5. The "body of Moses" likely refers to Joshua the High Priest. The Greek word "soma" can be translated "slave" as it is in Rev. 18:13. Compare Heb. 10:5 with Psa. 40:6 where the allusion is to the binding of slaves to their masters by the piercing of the ear. (Exod. 21:2-6); also Rom. 6:6 where "body of sin" means "slave of sin". Joshua the High Priest was Moses' servant (slave) in a figure, since he served the law which Moses gave.

REV. 12:7-9 "And there was war in heaven . . . and the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world: he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him."

PROBLEM: This passage is a stock proof text for those who argue that the devil is a rebel angel. A J.W. publication puts it this way:

"In Eden, Satan used the serpent. And so the Bible identifies the Devil, or Satan, as 'the original serpent,' hence the one who really introduced rebellion and wickedness into the universe.—Revelation 12:9".¹

"Christ would then oust Satan from heaven [1914], the seat of government, hurling him down to the vicinity of the earth, in preparation for putting him completely out of action. In the heavens the grand announcement would then be made: 'Now have come to pass the salvation and the power and the kingdom of our God and the authority of his Christ.' But for the earth, what? 'Woe . . . , because the Devil has come down to you, having great anger, knowing he has a short period of time.' (Revelation 12:5,7-10, 12)²

¹ The Truth that leads to Eternal Life, (Brooklyn, New York: Watchtower Bible And Tract Society of N.Y., Inc., Int. Bible Students Ass., 1968), p. 57.

SOLUTION:

1. Rev. 12 is the chief text on which J.W.'s and S.D.A.'s build their doctrine that the devil is a fallen angel. Since the devil is associated with the serpent (vs. 9) it is argued that the devil used the serpent to obtain the fall of man (Gen. 3). It is further argued that the devil must be a fallen angel since his cohorts are called angels (vs. 9). At the outset the weakness of the total argument should be indicated: Why would the disclosure of the devil's identity be reserved for the last book of scripture, and in a symbolic setting? (Even the most ardent fallen-angel devil expounder must concede the symbolic character of the dragon. A seven-headed, ten-horned red dragon isn't the kind of description one would ordinarily associate with an angel—fallen or otherwise.) Many passages describe in detail, warnings to Israel about apostasy (e.g. Exod. 32; Lev. 26; Num. 16; Deut. 28), but none of these narratives contain a warning about what would, according to J.W. and S.D.A. teaching, be the real instigator—Satan the Devil. Similarly, in the New Testament comprehensive attention is given to sin and the nature of man (e.g. Rom. 7) and just where one would expect the devil of J.W. and S.D.A. teaching to place prominently, the narratives contain no hint of such a creature. It can be expected, therefore, with such poverty of evidence in contexts where evidence is most to be expected, that recourse must be taken by S.D.A.'s and J.W.'s to the symbolic language of Revelation.
2. The devil of Rev. 2 is nowhere stated to be a fallen angel. Satan in the narrative is a red dragon, not a fallen angel, and if the red-dragon is symbolic of a fallen angel, then proof that the symbol should be interpreted this way is required. The argument that Satan is a fallen angel is therefore inferred, since it is not stated that such is the case in the passage.
3. For those who teach that Satan was cast out of heaven before the creation of man, it only needs to be pointed out that this is an anachronism since the Revelation was written about A.D. 96, and its contents are expressly stated to be about things which were shortly [to] come to pass" (i.e., future to about A.D. 96). Rev. 1:1).
4. A discussion on Rev. 12 requires that a clear distinction be made between the literal and the figurative and that a criterion or reason by which to make the choice be established before the discussion. By a fast-and-loose treatment of the figurative and literal in a predominantly symbolic book, one can make a passage support nearly any presupposition.
5. Failure to distinguish the literal and the figurative is at the root of all arguments which press Rev. 12 into service to prove that the devil is a rebel angel. This is indicated in the following approach in which the aim is to establish step by step that the dragon, heavens and war are all symbolic and are not to be taken literally:

² Ibid., p. 83.

- a) Since the devil of this passage is a "great red dragon, having seven heads and ten horns, and seven crowns upon his heads. And his tail drew the third part of the stars of heaven, and did cast them to the earth" (vs. 3,4), is or is not this a literal description of the fallen-angel devil?³
 - b) Assuming that it is conceded that the dragon is figurative, is the heaven of vs. 7 also figurative? (the answer is inevitable, "no"). The use of the word "heaven" in the preceding verses must then be examined to show whether or not there is consistency in this reply (remembering the distinction between the literal and figurative set out at the commencement of the discussion). Is the heaven of vs. 1 figurative? (the reply must be "yes" since the woman is clothed with the sun and the moon is under her feet, which would be a literal impossibility). Is the heaven of verse 3 the same heaven, or a different heaven from the heaven of verse 1? (Consistency demands that the answer again be "yes", but if the answer is "no", then it must be shown by the non-Christadelphian on what basis he decides between the literal and the figurative. Is this the same criterion as set out before the discussion began? Assuming that it is conceded that the heaven of verse 3 is also figurative, it only remains by the same reasoning to establish that the heaven of verse 7 is the same heaven, and therefore, is also figurative.
 - c) Since the dragon and heaven are figurative, then the war (vs. 7) must also be figurative, since one cannot have a literal war when the locale and one of the combatants are figurative.
6. Jesus did not believe the heavens to be the seat of angelic rebellion and subsequent war, since he taught his disciples to pray, "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven." (Matt. 6:10).
 7. If Satan had access to heaven until 1914 as J.W.'s teach, how did the devil manage to last so long since God is of "purer eyes than to behold evil"? (Hab. 1:13; Psa. 5:4).
 8. If the devil were a rebel angel⁴ against the will of God, what guarantee is there that believers who will be glorified with Christ, "made equal unto the angels" (Lk. 20:35,36) will not similarly rise against the authority of the Almighty once they have tasted the blessings of immortality?
 9. The issue is—Does or does not this passage teach the existence of a fallen-angel devil? Although an exposition of the chapter might be attempted, it frequently allows too many red-herrings to be dragged into the discussion without settling the main issue.

³ If any should argue that it is, the impossibility of casting one of the literal stars to the earth can be shown.

⁴ It should be noted that the Greek word "aggelos" translated "angels" (vs. 7,9), can refer to either human or divine angels. The word means "messenger, agent". Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965). Aggelos refers to human messengers or agents in the following passages: Matt. 11:10; Lk. 7:24,27; 9:52; James 2:25.

THE "PRE-EXISTENCE"¹ AND "DEITY" OF CHRIST

PRELIMINARY POINTS

1. The passages which are used to support the pre-existence of Christ can be grouped into the following two classes:
 - a) Those which refer to Christ as the Creator.
 - b) Those which refer to Christ as existing before his birth.Group a) passages are easily explained once it is shown that the creative work of Christ refers to the making of new men and women, and not to the creation of animals, trees etc. of Genesis 1. Christ is the firstborn of the new creation.
Group b) passages require an understanding of the divine point-of-view that God "callesth those things which be not as though they were." (Rom. 4:17; cf. Isa. 46:9,10). Through His foreknowledge, God speaks in the present and past tenses of events yet future. This emphasizes the certainty of the outcome.² As the Great Architect, God can envisage the glory of the saints, the kingdom, and Christ before their actual existence. (See Acts 15:18; Matt. 25:34; Jn. 17:5,24; Eph. 1:4; Heb. 4:3).
2. Belief in the pre-existence of Christ has inevitable effects on one's understanding and appreciation of the Saviour's redemptive work. Consider the following:
 - a) If Jesus was conscious of having existed in heaven as the glorious Creator, how could he in any sense be tempted the same way as are his brethren? (Heb. 4:15).
 - b) If Christ pre-existed the force of the argument in 1 Cor. 15:46 is lost. Paul says, "Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual." But if Christ pre-existed, then for him, this divinely appointed order is reversed—first spiritual, then natural. How then is he the first-born among many brethren (Rom. 8:29), if indeed his experience is the very reverse of theirs?
3. It requires stressing that the description of the birth of Christ precludes the possibility of his having a prior existence. Note the following:
 - a) The words used to describe his birth indicate the beginning of existence, (e.g. "birth", "conceive", Matt. 1:18,20; Lk. 1:31,35; 2:21). If a change from one form of existence to another were intended, such words as "transform" or "incarnate" would have been used.
 - b) The divine action involved in the coming of God's Son into the world is not kept secret or made mysterious. Instead, it is plainly

1 The term "pre-existence" is contradictory since one cannot exist before he exists. It is retained here because of its current usage. "Pre-human" existence would ordinarily be a more accurate term.

2 Although God has divine foreknowledge of the way humans will exercise their free wills, it should not be inferred that He makes them act the way they do.

explained in Lk. 1:34,35; Matt. 1:18,20. The description of these passages indicates the creation of a new person by means of God's power acting on Mary, and thereby rules out any possibility that Christ personally existed in some manner prior to his birth.

4. The passages used to support the Trinity (i.e., that "God the Son" is the second person in the Godhead, co-equal and co-eternal with God the Father)³ can also be grouped into two classes:

- a) Those which confer divine titles on Christ, e.g., "His name shall be called . . . the mighty God, The everlasting Father." (Isa. 9:6).
- b) Those which record Christ exercising divine prerogatives such as accepting worship and forgiving sins.

In general, both a) and b) passages require an understanding of God-manifestation—the principle outlined in Old and New Testaments in which God carries out his divine activity through accredited representatives who bear His name. For example, an angel went before Israel. The Israelites were instructed: "Beware of him, and obey his voice, provoke him not; for he will not pardon your transgressions: for my name is in him." (Exod. 23:20-21). Although Jesus is worthy of divine honour as the manifestation of God in the flesh (1 Tim. 3:16), it must be shown that he is not a person within the Godhead, co-equal and co-eternal with the Father.

SUGGESTED STRATEGY

The following approach is an attempt to order a discussion on the relationship of Jesus to his Father:

1. Jesus Christ cannot be "Very God" (i.e., of "one person" with the Father) since statements about Jesus Christ are contradictions of statements about God, his Father. Consider the following:

Jesus Christ

God, (his Father)

- | | |
|----------------------------|--|
| a) Was tempted (Heb. 2:18) | Cannot be tempted with evil (James 1:13) |
| b) Died (Rev. 1:18) | Cannot die (1 Tim. 6:16) |
| c) Seen by men | Cannot be seen by men (1 Tim. 6:16) |
2. Jesus Christ is a separate person from his Father. This is further indicated by the following references:
 - a) Jesus ascended to his Father and his God. (Jn. 20:17). Since Jesus after his resurrection ascended to his God,¹ then clearly he was not himself "Very God".
 - b) He prayed to his Father indicating a distinction and independence of wills. "Not as I will, but as thou wilt." (Matt. 26:39).
 - c) He is referred to as a man after his ascension into heaven. (1 Tim. 2:5).
 3. Jesus is not co-equal with his Father. This is indicated by the following passages:
 - a) God is the head of Christ. (1 Cor. 11:3).

³ The Holy Spirit is also said to be co-equal and co-eternal with the other persons in the Godhead. The Holy Spirit is considered later in this section.

¹ See also Lk. 6:12; Eph. 1:17; 1 Pet. 1:3. Since Jesus has a God, he is not himself "Very God".

- b) Christ is approved by God—the greater. (Acts 2:22).
- c) Christ himself states that his Father is greater. (Jn. 14:28).
- d) Christ is to be subject to the Father. (1 Cor. 15:28). This passage is often the single most effective quotation in setting forth the relationship of Jesus to God. It shows his position of delegated authority in the kingdom (vs. 27) and subsequent subjection to the Father. (vs. 28). Can one person in the God-head be subject to another and yet all persons be co-equal?
- e) See also Mark 10:18 and John 5:19,30.

GEN. 1:26 "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness . . ."

PROBLEM: It is pointed out that the verse reads, "God said", yet the plurals "us" and "our" indicate a plurality within a unity. It is argued that this refers to the Trinity since Jesus at the time of the creation was a spirit creature.

SOLUTION:

1. The Jews, of all people, have been fiercely monotheistic. The Hebrew word, "elohim" translated "God" and the plurals "us" and "our" never suggested trinitarian ideas to them. Nor is there any New Testament allusion to indicate that in their interpretation of this passage they were mistaken.
2. The trinitarian argument on this passage is only an inferred argument. It is stated that the "us" and "our" refer to either Jesus or to the Holy Spirit.
3. The plurals in the passage refer to God performing his creative work through his angels. Consider the evidence:
 - a) Men bear the physical image of angels. Angels were mistaken for men by Lot.¹ (Gen. 18:2,22 cf. 19:1,15) Hence the admonition: Be not forgetful to entertain strangers: for thereby some have entertained angels unawares." (Heb. 13:2). If faithful, saints will bear the nature of angels in the resurrection. (Luke 20:35,36).
 - b) Divine activity is said to be done by God, although actually executed by the angels. Note the following examples:
 - i. The LORD appeared to Moses in the burning bush. (Exod. 3:4-8). But Stephen says Moses was with "the angel which appeared to him in the bush." (Acts 7:35 cf. vs. 30). The Exodus account also reveals that it was an angel. (Exod. 3:2).
 - ii. God gave the ten commandments to Moses (Exod. 20:1, note "me" vs. 3; "for I the LORD thy God" vs. 5, etc.). But Stephen says it was the angel "which spake to him in the mount Sina, and with our fathers: who received the lively oracles to give unto us." (Acts 7:38).

¹ See also Gen. 32:24—Jacob wrestled with a "man". This "man" was an angel. (Hosea 12:3-4).

- iii. Jacob said that he had “seen God face to face, and my life is preserved.” (Gen. 32:30). Hosea states, however, that he wrestled with an angel. (Hosea 12:3-4 cf. Gen. 32:1,2).
- c) The Hebrew word “elohim” translated “God” is an elastic word, much like “soul” or “spirit”. It is translated “goddess” (1 Kings 11:33), “judges” (Exod. 21:6), and applied to pagan idols in Judges 16:23; 1 Kings 11:33. It is generally acknowledged that it comes from a root meaning “power” or the “strong one”.² The plural “elohim” means “powerful ones” or “strong ones”. This is precisely the description of the angels. “Bless the LORD, ye his angels, that excel in strength, that do his commandments, hearkening unto the voice of his word.” (Psa. 103:20).
- d) Although the usual Hebrew word for “angel” is “malak”, the Hebrew word “elohim” is translated “angels” in Psalm 8:5. Since the writer to the Hebrews quotes this passage in Hebrews 2:7, cf. vs. 9, and translates the word “elohim” by “aggelous” (angels), it can be inferred that the intended meaning of “elohim” in Psalm 8:5 is also “angels”.

ISA. 9:6 “His name shall be called . . . The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace.”

PROBLEM: Since Isaiah refers to Christ as “The mighty God, The everlasting Father”, this passage is quoted to prove the deity of Christ.

SOLUTION:

1. Isaiah states that he “shall be called” (i.e., in the Kingdom Age, vs. 7), not that he is now “The mighty God, The everlasting Father.” Although the work of this kingdom is executed by Christ, it is the zeal of the LORD [Yahweh] of hosts [which] will perform this.” (Isa. 9:7). As Christ said: “I can of mine own self do nothing” (Jn. 5:30).
2. “Mighty God”—Jesus Christ will be the “mighty God” in the Kingdom Age when he comes with the power and glory of his Father. (Matt. 16:27). Christ is altogether worthy of this title. Of an angel, it is written, “my name is in him”¹, (Exod. 23:21). But the Son of God has obtained a more excellent name than the angels (Heb. 1:4, R.S.V.) and is, therefore, worthy to bear the divine titles. But this does not imply he is “Very God” any more than it did for the angel who bore the divine name before the children of Israel.
3. “Everlasting² Father”—Christ in his reign as King will bear the title, “everlasting Father” for at least the following two reasons:

² James Hastings (ed.), Dictionary of the Bible, Revised ed., (New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, 1963), p. 334.

¹ Similarly, Christ came in his Father's name. (Jn. 5:43).

² “Everlasting” means “duration; continuity”. Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965). The same Hebrew word, “ad”, is used of mountains in Hab. 3:6. It does not follow, therefore, that “everlasting Father” means “eternal Father.”

- a) He will be a father to the mortal nations in the Kingdom Age. Isaiah prophesied, "he shall be a father to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and to the house of Judah . . . and they shall hang upon him all the glory of his father's house." (Isa. 22:21-24). Like the relationship between a father and son, Christ will exercise justice, wisdom, might, and knowledge (Isa. 11) toward the mortal population. Father-like characteristics are illustrated in the letters of the Apostle Paul: "I write not these things to shame you, but as my beloved sons I warn you. For though ye have ten thousand instructors in Christ, yet have ye not many fathers . . ." (1 Cor. 4:14,15); "As ye know how we exhorted and comforted and charged every one of you, as a father doth his children." (1 Thess. 2:11).
 - b) Although believers are usually referred to as "brethren" (e.g., 1 Thess. 2:14; Heb. 2:11) it is not inappropriate to term them "children". For example: "I and the children which God hath given me." (Heb. 2:13 cf. Isa. 8:17,18). Christ is the father of these children since he is the means whereby they are born anew. (John 3:3,7).³ This is the seed which Christ shall see and be satisfied. (Isa. 53:10,11 cf. Ps. 45:16—The Messianic character of this Psalm is indicated by vs. 6 and Heb. 1:8,9 where it is quoted in a context referring to Christ.)
4. 1 Cor. 15:22-28 is a commentary on Isa. 9:6. The Father gives the Son delegated authority and power for a limited duration of time. "For he [God] hath put all things under his [Jesus'] feet. But when he saith, all things are put under him, it is manifest that he is excepted, which did put all things under him. And when all things shall be subdued unto him, then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him [God] that put all things under him [Jesus], that God may be all in all." (vs. 27,28). Since the Son is to be subject unto the Father, then he is clearly not "co-equal" with the Father, and by implication not a person within the Godhead.

JOHN 1:1-3 "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made."

PROBLEM: This passage is usually the chief reference on which the pre-existence and deity of Christ are argued.

SOLUTION:

1. Christ was not literally the Word. He was the word "made flesh". (vs. 14). The Greek word "logos" translated "Word" expresses the divine intention, mind, or purpose.¹ Young defines “logos” as “a word, speech, matter, reason.”² In the A.V. “logos” is translated by more than 20 different English words and is used for utterances of men (e.g., Jn. 17:20) as well as those of God (Jn. 5:38).

³ The living word of God is the active agent in effecting the new birth. (Heb. 4:12; James 1:18; 1 Pet. 1:23).

2. “In the beginning was the Word . . . all things were made by him.”³ “Logos” does not in itself denote personality. It is personified by the masculine gender in the A.V., The Diaglott avoids confusion by translating the pronouns in the neuter—“through it every thing was done.”⁴ An Old Testament parallel to the personification of logos is the personification of wisdom: “The LORD possessed me in the beginning of his way, before his works of old. I was set up from everlasting, from the beginning, or ever the earth was.” (Prov. 8:22,23). In this passage, wisdom is personified as a woman. (vs. 1,2).
3. “All things were made by him”—John is apparently alluding to the creation recorded in Genesis. God spoke, and it was done (e.g. “And God said, Let there be light: and there was light.” Gen. 1:3. Notice another allusion—John 1:7,8). But this creation was not accompanied by Christ, but by the “logos” of God. This is indicated by several passages:
 - a) “By the word of the LORD were the heavens made; and all the host of them by the breath of his mouth.” “For he spake, and it was done; he commanded, and it stood fast.” (Psa. 33:6,9). See also Psa. 107:20; 147:15,18,19; Isa. 55:11.
 - b) “. . . by the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth standing out of the water and in the water . . . But the heavens and the earth, which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men.” (2 Pet. 3:5,7).
 - c) See also Heb. 11:3 cf. Jer. 10:12,13.⁵
4. Angels, prophets and Christ have been vehicles by which God has expressed his logos. Christ is the complete manifestation of the logos —“in him dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily.” (Col. 2:9). It was the “logos” which was in the beginning with God, not Christ. When the “word was made flesh” (Jn. 1:14) then, and then only, Christ became the “Word”. Christ is called the Word (Rev. 19:13 cf. 1 Jn. 1:1; Lk. 1:2) since his doctrine and words came from his Father (Jn. 7:16; 17:14). He was the logos lived out in speech and action, not merely written on scrolls.

1 This can be supported by evaluating all references to “logos” in the New Testament and the Septuagint.

2 Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965).

3 It is sometimes argued that the “beginning” referred to in Jn. 1:1 is the beginning of Christ’s ministry. 1 Jn. 1:1 is offered in support of this interpretation. It should be noted, however, that John’s allusions in Jn. 1 are drawn from Genesis 1 as point 3 outlines, thereby implying that the beginning refers to the same narrative and not to the ministry of Christ.

4 Benjamin Wilson, The Emphatic Diaglott, (Brooklyn: International Bible Students Ass., Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, 1942).

5 It is also noteworthy that although the writer to the Hebrews speaks in exalted terms of Christ (e.g. “express image of his [God’s] person”—Heb. 1:3), “logos” is used of God’s message, and not of Christ himself. See Heb. 2:2; 4:2,12; 7:28; 12:19, 13:7,22.

JOHN 3:13 "And no man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven."

PROBLEM: Since Christ is said to have come down from heaven, he must have had an existence in heaven prior to his birth as a human on the earth.

SOLUTION:

1. This passage proves too much. It is argued that "God the Son" pre-existed as a spirit creature in heaven prior to his "incarnation", but the passage in John reads, "even the Son of man which is in heaven". Did the Son of man literally come down from heaven?
 2. This passage is one of the many in John's gospel which employs the Old Testament language of theophany (God appearing). A manifestation of divine power is referred to as "God coming down". The completion of the theophany is God "going up" or ascending. (See Gen. 11:5; 18:21; Exod. 3:7,8; 19:11,18,20; 34:5; Psalms 18:9,10; Isaiah 64:1.)
 3. Christ did not literally come down from heaven. His origin was heavenly, (as the context states—Jn. 3:31), in-so-far as he was conceived by the Holy Spirit sent from heaven and his teaching was not his own but his Father's. (Lk. 1:35; Jn. 7:16; 17:14).
 4. "Even the Son of man which is in heaven" is likely the comment of John and not part of the conversation between Jesus and Nicodemus.
-

JOHN 5:23 "That all men should honour the Son, even as they honour the Father. He that honoureth not the Son honoureth not the Father which hath sent him."

PROBLEM: This verse is cited with Matt. 4:10 in which Jesus says to Satan, "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve", to show that since Jesus instructs men to honour himself, then the Son must be "Very God".

SOLUTION:

1. The context to this verse is sufficiently emphatic that Christ is not co-equal with the Father. Consider the following:
 - a) vs. 19—"The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do." Jesus specifically repudiates the claim that he is making himself "equal with God". (vs. 18).
 - b) vs. 22—"For the Father . . . hath committed all judgment unto the Son."
 - c) vs. 23—" . . . the Father which hath sent him."
 - d) vs. 27—"And hath given him authority to execute judgment also, because he is the Son of man."
 - e) vs. 30—"I can of mine own self do nothing . . . I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent me."
 - f) vs. 36—"For the works which the Father hath given me to finish."These verses indicate that the Father has delegated authority and power to the Son. This power and authority is not the right of the Son by virtue of his being "God the Son", but rather is an exercise of the divine prerogatives of the Father. Even when the Son returns, he does so "in the glory of his Father." (Matt. 16:27).

2. Jesus is worthy of divine honour because he is the "word made flesh". (Jn. 1:14). In his person the wisdom, grace and truth of the divine purpose were embodied. (See Jn. 1:14; Col. 2:3). In honouring the Lord's anointed, men were, in effect, honouring God. But this did not make Christ "Very God".

JOHN 6:33 "For the bread of God is he which cometh down from heaven."
38 "I came down from heaven."
51 "I am the living bread which came down from heaven."
58 "This is that bread which came down from heaven."

PROBLEM: These passages are considered to be proof that Jesus existed in heaven prior to his coming to the earth.

SOLUTION:

1. The words of this chapter were an "hard saying" (vs. 60) and as a result "many of his disciples went back and walked no more with him". (vs. 66). An understanding of the analogy with the manna provides the key to the right understanding of this passage.
2. The bread "from heaven" (vs. 31) did not mean that it was actually manufactured in heaven and descended through the atmosphere, but rather that it was produced on the earth by God's Holy Spirit power. "From heaven", therefore, emphasizes the divine origin of the bread.
3. Similarly, Christ came down from heaven, not literally, since it was the Holy Spirit which descended upon the virgin Mary to effect the conception. (Lk. 1:35). "From heaven" emphasizes his divine origin as a person (i.e., his father was God) and the divine origin of his teaching. Unlike the manna which profited only temporarily, his words were "spirit" and "life". (vs. 63).

JOHN 6:62 "What and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where he was before?"

PROBLEM: It is argued that if the Son of man could ascend up to where he was before, then clearly he must have pre-existed before his "incarnation" on earth.

SOLUTION:

1. This passage proves too much. It is argued that "God the Son" pre-existed as a spirit creature in heaven prior to his "incarnation", but the passage in John reads, "What and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where he was before?" Did the Son of man literally come down from heaven?
2. The context indicates that verse 62 is part of a discourse in which Jesus compares himself to the manna which God provided for Israel. The fact that this manna was referred to as "bread from heaven" (vs. 31) did not mean that it actually descended from heaven through the great expanse of space to the earth, but rather that it had its origin in heaven. Similarly, Christ was of divine origin—"from heaven", since the Holy Spirit was sent from heaven to effect his conception in the womb of Mary. (Luke 1:35). He later ascended to heaven. (Acts 1:10,11).

JOHN 8:23 " . . . Ye are from beneath; I am from above: ye are of this world; I am not of this world."

PROBLEM: It is argued that since Christ was not of this world but rather came from above, he must therefore have existed prior to his birth on earth.

SOLUTION:

1. Jesus said, "I know whence I came, and whither I go." (Jn. 8:14), but he did not literally come down from heaven. It was the Holy Spirit which came down from heaven and overshadowed the virgin Mary. The result was the conception of Jesus. (Lk. 1:35). Jesus referred to his divine origin when he declared: "If God were your Father, ye would love me: for I proceeded forth and came from God; neither came I of myself, but he sent me." (Jn. 8:42).
2. Jesus was also "from above" in the following ways:
 - a) The things he spoke came from his Father: "I speak to the world those things which I have heard of him." (Jn. 8:26 cf. vs. 28).
 - b) His Father honoured and bore witness to him: "The Father that sent me beareth witness of me . . . It is my Father that honoureth me . . ." (Jn. 8:18,54).
3. Jesus instructed his followers that they too must be "born from above". (Jn. 3:3 mg., 7 mg.). Obviously believers could not be born from above physically, as was Jesus. Only in a spiritual sense could they be born from above. By contrast, the Pharisees were motivated by the wisdom which did not come down from above, but which was "earthly, sensual, devilish." (James 3:15).
4. Jesus was "not of this world" because its constitution was the "lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life". (1 Jn. 2:16). "If any man love the world," John said, "the love of the Father is not in him." (1 Jn. 2:15). Similarly, Jesus said, "My kingdom is not of this world." (Jn. 18:36). By this he did not mean that it had nothing to do with the earth, but rather that it was a heavenly kingdom whose constitution was not of the Jewish and Roman arrangements¹, but was designed by the Father from the "foundation of the world." (Matt. 25:34).

¹ The meaning of the Greek word "kosmos" translated "world" is "arrangement, beauty, world". Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965).

JOHN 8:58 “... Before Abraham was, I am.”

PROBLEM: This passage is connected with Exod. 3:14 where God says to Moses, “I am that I am”. From these references two conclusions are drawn:

- a) Since Christ was before Abraham, Christ must have existed prior to his birth on earth.
- b) Since Christ says, “I am” he is alluding to the divine name, thereby in effect telling the Jews that he is “Very God”.

SOLUTION:

1. Christ’s reference to Abraham is to affirm his (Christ’s) pre-eminence, not pre-existence. The Jews had claimed that Abraham was their father (vs. 39) and so Christ establishes his pre-eminence in the divine purpose by stating that before Abraham was, “I am”. He did not say “before Abraham was, I was” as it is frequently misread. But the Jews, like modern-day trinitarians, misunderstood Jesus. He was not claiming to be literally older in years than Abraham. This is indicated by his prior remark: “Your father Abraham rejoiced to see my day: and he saw it, and was glad.” (vs. 56). Abraham, to whom the gospel was preached (Gal. 3:8), “saw” the day of Christ through the eye of faith. Christ was “foreordained before the foundation of the world, but manifest in these last times”. (1 Pet. 1:20). He was foreordained in the divine purpose, but not formed. Similarly in the divine purpose he was the “Lamb slain from the foundation of the world” (Rev. 13:8) but literally he was not slain until his crucifixion in the time of Pilate.
2. There is no proof that Christ alludes to the divine name (imperfectly rendered by the A.V., “I am that I am”). Jesus simply uses the present tense of the verb “to be”. Even if this verse were intended to be read as an allusion to the divine name, this is not proof that Christ was claiming to be “Very God”. The divine name declared, “I will be what I will be”. (Exod. 3:14 R.S.V. mg.). The name was a prophetic declaration of the divine purpose. Jesus Christ was “God manifest in the flesh” (1 Tim. 3:16), “the word” (Greek: logos) “made flesh.” (Jn. 1:14). As such, he was the expression of the divine character, “full of grace and truth” (Jn. 1:14 cf. Exod. 33:19), and became the “firstborn among many brethren”. (Rom. 8:29). Christ was the result of the word made flesh, not the originator of the divine plan. As he himself said, “I proceeded forth and came from God; neither came I of myself, but he sent me.” (Jn. 8:42).

JOHN 10:17,18 “... I have power to lay it down [my life], and I have power to take it again...”

PROBLEM: It is argued by trinitarians that if Jesus had power to lay down his life and take it again, then the “God part” (“God the Son”) must have continued while the body (the “Son of Man”) lay dead in the grave.

SOLUTION:

1. The trinitarian argument mistakenly rests on the word "power". The Greek word "exousia"¹ translated "power" is rendered "authority" in 29 other references. (e.g. Matt. 7:29; 21:23; Lk. 7:8; Jn. 5:27). Weymouth renders this passage as follows: "No one is taking it away from me, but I myself am laying it down . . . I am authorized to receive it back again."² This translation is in harmony with the following statements of Jesus:
 - a) ". . . The Son can do nothing of himself . . ." (Jn. 5:19).
 - b) "I can of mine own self do nothing . . ." (Jn. 5:30).Jesus had authority to take his life again because, as he himself said: "This commandment have I received of my Father". (vs. 18). It is not, therefore, Jesus who does something for himself.
2. In many places the New Testament writers refer to the resurrection of Christ. Not one writer, however, states that Jesus raised himself from the dead. In every reference it is God who raises Christ, not "God the Son" who raises "the Son of Man". Note the following passages:
 - a) "Whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death . . ." (Acts 2:24).
 - b) "This Jesus hath God raised up . . ." (Acts 2:32).
 - c) See also Acts 3:15; 5:30; 10:39,40; 1 Cor. 15:15.
3. The personal pronoun "him" when referring to the death and resurrection of Christ always means the body which lay in the grave. It never refers in Scripture to "God the Son", who it is hypothesized, survived the death of the body. For example, Acts of the Apostles records the following: ". . . whom they slew and hanged on a tree: Him God raised up the third day, and shewed him openly." (Acts 10:39,40). The "him" that was hanged is the same "him" that was raised. This evidence is fatal to the trinitarian view that the real "him" was "God the Son" who continued to exist after the death of the body. Jesus stated plainly, "I am he that liveth and was dead." (Rev. 1:18). This statement was made after his resurrection.
4. Jesus was unable to do anything for himself once dead because "the dead know not any thing." (Ecc. 9:5).

JOHN 10:30 "I and my Father are one."

PROBLEM: This passage is understood by trinitarians to be a clear assertion that Christ claimed to be a person within the Godhead.

SOLUTION:

1. Jesus said, "I and my Father are one" but the Jews misunderstood him, thinking he was claiming to be equal with God. (vs. 33). Trinitarians make the same mistake. The oneness referred to, is not a declaration by Christ that he is "Very God", but rather unity of purpose. Consider the evidence:

¹ "Exousia" means privilege or authority: Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, 8th ed., (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965). Bullinger gives the meaning of "exousia" as follows: "delegated authority, liberty or authority to do anything." Ethelbert W. Bullinger, A Critical Lexicon and Concordance to the English and Greek New Testament, 8th. ed., (London: Samuel Bagster and Sons Ltd., 1957). p. 593.

² Richard F. Weymouth, The New Testament in Modern Speech, (London: James Clarke & Co., Ltd.).

- a) Jesus subsequently prayed for his disciples, "that they may be one, as we are." (Jn. 17:11,21). These words require that the unity referred to, be also extended to the disciples. Obviously the unity is not that of the powers of the Godhead but unity resulting from sanctification through the word of God. (Jn. 17:14, 17,18).
 - b) See also John 17:22,23: " . . . that they may be one, even as we are one: I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one . . . " Likewise, these words require a relationship between the disciples and Christ which exists between the Son and his Father—a unity, or perfection with the divine purpose.
 2. Elsewhere in John's gospel, Jesus clearly affirms that he is not co-equal with the Father: "The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do." (Jn. 5:19); "I can of mine own self do nothing: as I hear, I judge: and my judgment is just; because I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent me." (Jn. 5:30); "My Father is greater than I." (Jn. 14:28).
-

JOHN 14:9 "Jesus saith, . . . he that hath seen me hath seen the Father . . ."

PROBLEM: This verse is quoted by trinitarians as a clear declaration that Jesus Christ was God Almighty incarnate.

SOLUTION:

1. Jesus did not mean by these words that when men saw him, they were literally beholding his Father. Consider the following:
 - a) Physically, Jesus was not the image of his Father. Isaiah wrote: "he hath no form nor comeliness; and when we shall see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him". (Isa. 53:2). It is unthinkable that the Father would be less comely than His creation.
 - b) Jesus told the Jews that they had "neither heard his [the Father's] voice at any time, nor seen his shape." (Jn. 5:37). This would have been untrue if Jesus were himself the Father.
 - c) The Father dwells "in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see." (1 Tim. 6:16; cf. 1 Jn. 4:12). Those who saw Jesus, did not, therefore literally see the Father.
2. Jesus said, "no man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him." (Jn. 1:18). The Son "declared" the Father by the words which he spoke and the works which he performed. Jesus told Philip: "the words that I speak unto you I speak not of myself: but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works." (Jn. 14:10). It was in this sense that Jesus meant, "he that hath seen me hath seen the Father."

3. Jesus employed the language of "God manifestation" characteristic of the Old Testament. Accredited representatives exercising divine power and authority bore the divine name. (See Exod. 23:20,21—"I send an Angel . . . my name is in him.") Jesus was the supreme manifestation—"God was manifest in the flesh." (1 Tim. 3:16). Although not "Very God" he was justified in saying "he that hath seen me hath seen the Father" since the Father had delegated this authority and power to him. (See Jn. 5:19,22,23,30).

JOHN 17:5 "And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self with the glory which I had with thee before the world was."

PROBLEM: If Christ had glory with God before the world was, then obviously it is argued he must have existed before his birth on earth.

SOLUTION:

1. Stress is often placed on Jesus' statement that he had glory with the Father. The J.W.'s in their New World Translation of the Holy Scriptures translate this verse as follows: "So now you, Father, glorify me alongside yourself with the glory that I had alongside you before the world was."¹ But the Greek preposition "parà" translated "with" in the A.V. and "alongside" in the N.W.T. also occurs in John 1:6: "There was a man sent from [Greek: parà] God, whose name was John." If the preposition in John 17:5 requires the literal pre-existence of Christ, then likewise it requires the literal pre-existence of John the Baptist.² It is interesting that the N.W.T. inconsistently translates John 1:6 as follows: "There arose a man that was sent forth as a representative of God: his name was John." There is no hint of pre-existence here.
2. How could Jesus have glory with his Father "before the world was" if he did not literally pre-exist? An illustration is helpful: An architect sees and knows the beautiful details of his proposed construction before the site is prepared, or the foundation-stone laid. But God is the great Architect and in His divine plan, Christ was "the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world" (Rev. 13:8)—the chief cornerstone "foreordained before the foundation of the world". (1 Pet. 1:20). The building will duly be fitly framed together (Eph. 2:21) to constitute its part in the "kingdom prepared . . . from the foundation of the world." (Matt. 25:34). Christ was "foreordained", but not formed until born of the virgin Mary in the days of Herod the king. Likewise, the glory he had with his Father was in the divine plan of the great Architect. It was the subject of prophetic testimony

¹ New World Translation of the Holy Scriptures, (Brooklyn, New York: Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc., 1961).

² The Greek preposition "parà" in Jn. 17:5 takes the dative case and means "beside and at, with or near a person; with, i.e., in the estimation or power of." But in Jn. 1:6 "parà" takes the genitive case and means "from beside, beside and proceeding from." See Ethelbert W. Bullinger, A Critical Lexicon and Concordance, (London: Samuel Bagster and Sons Ltd., 1957), p. 888.

“when it [the Spirit of Christ] testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow.” (1 Pet. 1:11 cf. Jn. 12:41).

3. Scripture speaks as if others pre-existed, as well as Christ. Consider the following:

a) Of believers, Paul wrote:

- i. “Whom he did foreknow.” (Rom. 8:29).
- ii. “He had afore prepared [note the past tense] unto glory.” (Rom. 9:23 cf. 2 Tim. 1:9).
- iii. “He hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world.” (Eph. 1:4).

b) Of Jeremiah, the LORD said: “Before I formed thee in the belly I knew thee; and before thou camest forth out of the womb I sanctified thee, and I ordained thee a prophet unto the nations.” (Jer. 1:5).

But who would contend for the pre-existence of Jeremiah and other believers because the language employed states that God knew them before they were born? Similarly, the language of John 17:5 must be understood in terms of this background. Unless the principle is recognized that God “callesh those things which be not as though they were” (Rom. 4:17), confusion will result in Biblical interpretation, as it does with the wrested pre-existence interpretation given to this passage in John’s gospel.

4. The context is sufficiently clear that Christ is not “Very God”. His power and authority are derived, not innate: “As thou hast given him [Christ] power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him.” (Jn. 17:2).

JOHN 20:28 “My Lord and my God.”

PROBLEM: Since Jesus is addressed by Thomas as “My Lord and My God”, this passage is considered by trinitarians to prove the “deity of Christ”—that he is “God the Son.”

SOLUTION:

1. Thomas’ confession is an acknowledgement that Jesus had indeed risen from the dead, but it is not a declaration that Jesus is “God the Son”. Thomas, a Jew, used a mode of expression common to the Old Testament in which accredited representatives of God are referred to as “God”. Angels are called “God” in the following passages: Gen. 16:7 cf. vs. 13; 22:8,11,15 cf. vs. 16; Exod. 23:20,21. Moses is referred to as a “god” to Pharaoh. (Exod. 7:1, “god” is translated from the Heb. “elohim”). “Elohim” translated “God” in Gen. 1:26 (and in many other passage) refers to the judges of Israel in Psa. 82:1,6 cf. Jn. 10:34. It is also translated “judges” in Exod. 21:6; 22:8,9 and “gods” (mg. “judges”) in Exod. 22:28.
2. Earlier in this chapter, Jesus told Mary, “I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God and your God.” (vs. 17). Since Jesus was to ascend to his God, then clearly he was not himself “Very God”.

ROM. 9:5 “ . . . Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever.”

PROBLEM: This passage is cited by trinitarians to prove that Christ is “Very God”.

SOLUTION:

1. The trinitarian argument rests on the punctuation of this passage. The R.S.V. translates as follows: “They are Israelites . . . to them belong the patriarchs, and of their race, according to the flesh, is the Christ. God who is over all be blessed for ever. Amen.” There is no evidence in this translation in support of the trinitarian assertion.
2. The passage appears to allude to Psalm 41:13: “Blessed be the LORD God of Israel from everlasting, and to everlasting. Amen, and Amen.” This Psalm concludes Book II of the Psalms and is a fitting climax to the Apostle’s argument in Romans. Paul enumerates the spiritual privileges of Israel: The Sonship, the glory (Shekinah glory), the covenants, the law, the temple worship, the promises, the patriarchs, and the Messiah himself of Jewish lineage. The apostle then concludes with a thankful ascription of praise to God for all that He has done for Israel.
3. Even if it be insisted that the passage be read as in the A.V., the passage is appropriately explained on the basis of God-manifestation. Christ is “over all, God blessed for ever” because this power and authority has been delegated to him. (Jn. 5:19,30; 1 Cor. 15:24-28). Those who act for God are referred to as “God” in the Old Testament. (See Exod. 23:20,21).¹ Paul elsewhere makes it clear, however, that “the head of Christ is God.” (1 Cor. 11:3). The Son is not “co-equal” therefore, with the Father.

PHIL. 2:6,7 “Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: But made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men.”

PROBLEM: Great stress is placed on “morphe” (the Greek word for form) by trinitarians and others like the J.W.’s who teach that Christ had a pre-human existence. It is argued that “in the form of God” means that Christ had the nature of God before his birth, and it was this which he sacrificed in coming to the earth to live as a human.

SOLUTION:

1. If “in the form of God” means the very nature of God, then Christ could not have been “Very God” while on earth, as trinitarians assert,

¹ Angels are called “God” in the following passages: Gen. 16:7 cf. vs. 13. 22:8, 11, 15 cf. vs. 16. Moses is referred to as a “god” to Pharaoh. (Exod. 7:1; “god” is translated from the Heb. “elohim”). “Elohim” translated “God” in Gen. 1:26 (and in many other passages) refers to the judges of Israel in Psa. 82:1,6 cf. Jn. 10:34. It is also translated “judges” in Exod. 21:6; 22:8,9, and “gods” (mg. “judges”) in Exod. 22:28.

- since this is what he is said to have sacrificed and left behind in coming to the earth.
2. The Greek word “morphe” (translated “form”) does not refer to “essential nature” as the trinitarian cause requires. This is proven by the following:
 - a) “Eidos”, not “morphe” is the Greek word which conveys the idea of “essential nature”. As Liddell and Scott point out in their lexicon, “morphe” means form, shape, fine, beautiful form or shape, figure, fashion, appearance, outward form or semblance. It is opposed to “eidos” which means “true form”.
 - b) In the context of this passage, it is stated that Christ “took upon him the form of a servant” (vs. 7). But what is the form of a servant (Grk. “doulos”, a slave)? The “essential nature” of a slave is the same as that of any other human being. The form, therefore, must refer to the semblance or demeanour of a slave as the distinguishing characteristic.
 - c) “Morphe” occurs in only one other place in the N.T.—Mark 16: 12, and here it clearly does not mean “essential nature”. Jesus appeared “in another form”, but this could not refer to a change of his essential nature since the reason why he appeared to be in another form was because the disciples’ “eyes were holden”. (Luke 24:16 cf. vs. 31). Not even a trinitarian or a J.W. would be prepared to say that Christ’s essential nature was changed after his resurrection and glorification.
 3. How was Christ in the form of God? He had the semblance and demeanour of the Father mentally and morally. His character was the express image of his Father’s person. (Heb. 1:3).
 4. Sometimes trinitarians stress that Christ was originally in the form of God—i.e., “being” in the form of God is taken to mean that he was in fact “Very God” before his “incarnation”. The Greek verb “huparchon” refutes this position since it is in the imperfect tense which expresses action yet, or still in course of performance. Time signified by an imperfect tense is of a continual, habitual, repeated action, so that “being in the form of God” means “being, and continuing to be in the form of God”. Christ never ceased to be in the form of God since in semblance and demeanour from his birth he habitually exemplified his Father’s character. Note the use of “huparchon” in the following passages:
 - a) Acts 2:30—“Therefore being a prophet” does not mean “being originally before birth a prophet”, but rather a prophet and continuing to be such.
 - b) 1 Cor. 11:7—“Forasmuch as he is the image and glory of God” does not mean “being originally before he was born the image and glory of God”, but rather being the image of God and continuing to be.
 - c) Gal. 2:14—“If thou being a Jew” does not mean “being originally before his birth as a Jew”, but rather if you from the start and continuing to be a Jew.
 5. “Thought it not robbery to be equal with God” is generally acknowledged to be a poor translation. The R.S.V. reads as follows: He did not count equality with God a thing to be grasped.” Unlike Eve who grasped after the fruit which was to be desired to make one like God (the "elohim") to know good and evil, Jesus refused to take the kingdoms of the world without the crucifixion of the flesh and the declaration of the righteousness of his Father. In the Garden of Gethsemane he subjected his will to his Father's, not arrogating to himself prerogatives that rightly belonged to his Father. (Matt. 26:39).

6. How did Christ take the form of a servant (slave)? Two passages supply the answer:

a) "If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet; ye also ought to wash one another's feet." (Jn. 13:14).

b) "Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered. And being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." (Heb. 5:8,9).

Although Christ was in the form of God in his semblance and demeanour, he took on him the semblance and demeanour of a slave.

7. "He humbled himself"; "he emptied himself" R.S.V. (vs. 8), refers to Christ's deliberate choice to submit his will to that of his Father. Christ was worshipped (Matt. 8:2; 9:18), performed the works of God (Jn. 10:37-38), and forgave sins (Matt. 9:2), but he never arrogated to himself authority which had not been delegated to him by the Father. In so doing his example was a powerful lesson in humility to the Philippians. But if Christ "being originally, before his birth, while he was in heaven in the form (essential nature) of God thought at his birth, when he descended into the womb, not to be equal with God, but left the form of God",¹ where is humility demonstrated?

COL. 1:15,16 "Who is the image of the invisible God, the firstborn of every creature: For by him were all things created . . ."

PROBLEM: This passage is understood by J.W.'s to teach that "Jehovah" created his Son as his first creative act, and then subsequently performed all creative acts by His Son. Other religious bodies merely assert that this passage proves that Christ existed prior to his birth on the earth, since all the creative acts are ascribed to him.

SOLUTION:

1. The Messianic prophecy in Psa. 89:27 indicates that the J.W. assertion, that "Jehovah" created his Son as his first creative act, is unscriptural. "Also I will make him my firstborn, higher than the kings of the earth"¹ proves that Christ was not the first-born prior to the creation narrative in Gen. 1 and 2, but rather Christ was not to be made first-born until many years after the Psalmist penned his words. (The Messianic character of the Psalm is indicated by comparing the following: vs. 26 cf. 2 Sam. 7:14; Heb. 1:5 and Ps. 89:35-37 cf. Ps. 72:1-8).

¹ This is the way in which Phil. 2:6 is read by trinitarians. See A. B. Bruce, The Humiliation of Christ, (Edinburgh: T. and T. Clarke, 1889), pp. 1-23.

¹ The force of this point is obscured in the J.W. New World Translation of the Holy Scriptures, (Brooklyn, New York: Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of N.Y., Inc., 1961). It reads as follows: "Also, I myself shall place him as first-born, The most high of the kings of the earth."

2. "The firstborn of all creation" is qualified in verse 18 to be "the first-born from the dead". Frequently an apparently absolute declaration is limited in application. Consider the following examples in which "all" is clearly to be understood in a restricted sense:
 - a) "... there went out a decree from Caesar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed." (Lk. 2:1). The "all" refers to the Roman world, not the areas of South, Central and North America.
 - b) "All that ever came before me are thieves and robbers . . ." (Jn. 10:8). The "all" does not refer to John the Baptist and other prophets.
 - c) See also Gen. 3:20 ("all living" did not include the beasts); Gen. 6:13 ("all flesh" did not include Noah and the creatures taken into the ark).
3. The creation of which Christ is the first-born is the "creation" of new men and women, and not the creation of light, dry land, etc. of Genesis. "Create" and "creation" are used of the work of Christ in this regenerative sense. Consider the following:
 - a) "For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them." (Eph. 2:10 cf. 4:23,24).
 - b) "... for to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace." (Eph. 2:15).
 - c) See also Col. 3:9,10 R.S.V.; Gal. 6:15; James 1:18; 2 Cor. 5:17.
4. The inspired Apostle, employing the Old Testament background of the first-born, is ascribing to Christ his position, rank, and status in the divine purpose. The following is a summary of this background:
 - a) The first-born succeeded his father as head. (2 Chron. 21:2,3).
 - b) He received a double portion of the inheritance. (Deut. 21:17).
 - c) A younger son could be elevated to the position of first-born if there were personal unworthiness in the eldest. (1 Chron. 5:1). Adam lost this privilege because of his personal unworthiness, but the last Adam became perfect, through things which he suffered, and inherited the "double portion". He became the "firstfruits of them that slept"—the "firstborn among many brethren"—"the head of the body, the church . . . that in all things he might have the preeminence." (Col. 1:18; 1 Cor. 15:20; Rom. 8:29).
5. "Who is the image of the invisible God." This is an obvious allusion to Gen. 1:26, "Let us make man in our image". Christ who was "full of grace and truth" demonstrated that he was the "image of the invisible God" by his faithfulness to death. In him both earthly and heavenly creatures are "created" because in him they have a new function in the divine purpose. The angels who "minister for those who shall be heirs of salvation" (Heb. 1:14) have been instructed to pay him homage—"let the angels of God worship him." (Heb. 1:6).
6. Colossians 1, rather than supporting the trinitarian doctrine, is opposed to it. Consider the following:

- a) If Christ is the “image of the invisible God” (Col. 1:15), then he is a replica, not the original.
 - b) Christ is the “firstborn of every creature”. (Col. 1:15). “First-born” implies a beginning, therefore Christ is not the “Eternal” Son of God of the trinitarians.
-

EPH. 4:8-10 “Wherefore he saith, when he ascended up on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men . . .”

PROBLEM: This verse is connected with 1 Pet. 3:18-20 in an attempt to prove that when Christ died the “divine” part survived the death of the body, and preached to disobedient spirits and took “a host of captives on high” R.S.V. (alleged to be Old Testament worthies) to Paradise. If Jesus were able to preach and release these individuals, then, it is argued, he must have been conscious when dead, and hence “Very God”.

SOLUTION:

1. At his resurrection, Jesus did not take Old Testament worthies to “paradise”, since David, who is commended as “having obtained a good report through faith” (Heb. 11:39 cf. vs. 32), did not go there. Peter, on Pentecost (about 7 weeks after Christ’s resurrection), said explicitly: “Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day . . . For David is not ascended into the heavens . . .” (Acts 2:29,34).
2. The interpretation outlined in the problem nullifies the power of the resurrection of Christ. Jesus said: “. . . I lay down my life, that I might take it again.” (Jn. 10:17). But according to the above interpretation, the real Jesus Christ never did die. Jesus said plainly: “I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen . . .” (Rev. 1:18). To die, in the Biblical sense, means to go to one place—the grave (Eccl. 3:20), and to be without consciousness (Ecc.9:5,6; Ps. 146:4). At death Jesus was therefore, without life and dependent upon resurrection for life.
3. Scripture never refers to Jesus as a “God part” and a “body”—the “human part”. The personal pronouns in Acts of the Apostles indicate that Jesus—the person was dead, and that he became alive by resurrection when God raised him by His Holy Spirit power. Note the following:
“And when they had fulfilled all that written of him, they took him down from the tree, and laid him in a sepulchre. But God raised him up from the dead . . . But he whom God raised again, saw no corruption.” (Acts 13:29,30,34,37). Who would be so bold as to assert that the pronoun “him” refers, in the former, to the body, and in the latter to the “God part”?
4. Eph. 4:8 quotes Ps. 68:18, and an understanding of this passage requires an examination of the Psalm. The following attempts to show the significance of the Psalm in the context of Ephesians 4:

- a) "When he ascended up on high"—When God exercised His power for the deliverance of His people, it is said in Scripture, to be God "coming down". Note the following:
- i. "And the LORD said, I have surely seen the affliction of my people . . . and I am come down to deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians . . ." (Exod. 3:7,8).
 - ii. "And be ready against the third day for . . . the LORD will come down in the sight of all the people upon mount Sinai". (Exod. 19:11).
 - iii. "And mount Sinai was altogether on a smoke, because the LORD descended upon it in fire . . . And the LORD came down upon mount Sinai, on the top of the mount . . ." (Exod. 19:18,20).
 - iv. See also Exod. 33:9; 34:5; Neh. 9:13 cf. Acts 7:34; Psalms 47:5. At the conclusion of the deliverance, it is said in Scripture, to be God "going up". Cf. Psalm 47:5. God "descended" on Sinai to deliver natural Israel from Egyptian bondage and captivity (Psalms 68:17, 31-35). He descended by His Holy Spirit power (Lk. 1:35) to effect the miraculous birth of His Son (Lk. 1:35), and to instruct his Son in the things which he spoke (Jn. 7:16) and the works which he performed (Jn. 10:36,37). The work of redemption was effected by which bond-slaves of sin (Rom. 6:16-20) could come out of that which is "spiritually called Egypt" (Rev. 11:8), and become spiritual Israelites. (Gal. 3:27,29 cf. Gal. 6:16). God then "ascended", in the language of theophany, when Christ was "received up into glory". (1 Tim. 3:16).
- b) "He led captivity captive"—The R.S.V. translates this, "he led a host of captives". Assuming this is the correct translation, the host of captives are those who respond to the invitation to come out of the captivity and bondage of spiritual Egypt. Christ "led" the host of captives since he was the first to destroy the devil and become the firstfruits of them that slept. (Heb. 2:14; 4:15; 1 Cor. 15:20 cf. Col. 1:18).
- c) "And gave gifts unto men"—It is apparent that there is a difference in the wording of the Psalm ("hast received¹ gifts) and its quotation in Ephesians ("gave gifts"). The difference is significant. The Levites were a gift from God to the nation of Israel ("the rebellious also"—cf. 1 Cor. 10:5-10), but they were also a gift to God. (Num. 8:9-19 cf. 3:5-10). It is likely that the Levites are the "gifts" alluded to in Psalm 68:18—"that the LORD God might dwell among them".) The Apostle Paul in his inspired comment brings out what the Psalm does not. Just as the Levites were a gift by God to Aaron and his sons, so God provided for his spiritual Israel by the gift of apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors and teachers, (as distinct from the gifts of the Spirit e.g., tongues, administrations, etc.).

¹ The Hebrew word "laqach" can carry the meaning of receiving and giving. It is translated 62 times "receive" and 793 times "take away". See Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Scriptures, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1967.)

HEB. 1:2 “[God] hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds.”

PROBLEM: This passage is cited to prove the pre-existence of Christ since God made the worlds by him. It is argued that if the worlds were made by Christ, then he must be an eternal Person with the Godhead.

SOLUTION:

1. There is no case in this verse to be made for the contention that the Son was an “eternal Person” within the Godhead. The Son is “appointed heir” (vs. 2)—his position of power and authority is delegated and not innate. It is by “inheritance” (vs. 4) that he has obtained a more excellent name, not by virtue of being, (as is supposed), a co-equal person within the Godhead.
2. “By whom [‘through whom’, R.S.V.] he made the worlds [ages, R.V. mg., Grk.: aión]”. The “worlds” does not refer to the earth and the other planets but rather to the ages or dispensations on the earth. The Greek word translated “worlds” is not the usual word for worlds—“kosmos”, but “aion” which means, “age, indefinite time, dispensation”.¹ Jesus Christ is the chief cornerstone of all ages—whether antediluvian (before the flood), patriarchal (Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, etc.), Mosaic, Gentile, or Millennial. The Seed was promised to Eve (Gen. 3:15) and Abraham looked forward to Christ’s day with the eye of faith. (Jn. 8:56 cf. Gal. 3:8). Even the sacrifices of animals under the Law of Moses only had their effectiveness because they pointed to the sacrifices which would be offered once for all time.² (Heb. 10:4,10). The law was a schoolmaster (custodian, R.S.V.) to bring men to Christ. (Gal. 3:24). The worlds (ages) were made or constituted through Christ since it is in him that they have their meaning and ultimate realization.
3. Although Christ was the “chief corner stone” (1 Pet. 2:6) in the divine purpose, “foreordained before the foundation of the world” (1 Pet. 1:20), he was not formed or manifest until “these last times”. (1 Pet. 1:20). He had no personal existence until he was born of the virgin Mary. (Lk. 1:31-35).

HEB. 1:8 “But unto the Son he saith, Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever: a sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of thy kingdom.”

PROBLEM: Since the Father addresses the Son, “O God”, this is taken by trinitarians as proof that the Son is “Very God”.

¹ Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965).

² Animal sacrifices in the temple of the Kingdom Age (Ezek. 44:27) will point back to the sacrifice of Christ.

SOLUTION:

1. There is some uncertainty as to the precise translation of this verse. Two possibilities exist:
 - a) "Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever" (A.V.)
 - b) "God is thy throne for ever and ever" (R.S.V. mg.)Since only the first of these translations is useful for the trinitarian, it will be assumed that this is the correct translation.
2. "Therefore God, even thy God" (vs. 9) is evidence that Christ is not the "Eternal Son". Since the Father is the God of Jesus, then clearly Jesus is not himself "Very God". (See also Jn. 20:17).
3. Heb. 1:8 is a quotation from Psalms 45:6. In this Psalm the Hebrew word "elohim" is translated "God". The word "elohim" is used of Moses' relationship with Pharaoh: "And the LORD said unto Moses, See, I have made thee a god [elohim] to Pharaoh". (Exod. 7:1). It also is used of the judges of Israel. (Psalms 82:6 cf. Jn. 10:34; Exod. 22:9,28). Persons who are divinely appointed and made strong by Yahweh are referred to as "God", but this does not imply they are persons within the Godhead.
4. In "the world to come" (Heb. 2:5), the Son will be called "The mighty God" (Isa. 9:6), although "now we see not yet all things put under him." (Heb. 2:8). In the Kingdom Age, the Son will reign with the power and authority of his Father. (1 Cor. 15:24-28). The writer to the Hebrews points out, however, that the "more excellent name" obtained by the Son is by virtue of his personal worthiness and elevation by his Father, and not by the Son re-claiming divested powers of the Godhead, as trinitarians assert: "Thou hast loved righteousness, and hated iniquity; therefore God, even thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows." (Heb. 1:9).

HEB. 1:10-12 "And, Thou, Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the works of thine hands: They shall perish; but thou remainest; and they all shall wax old as doth a garment; And as a vesture shalt thou fold them up, and they shall be changed: but thou art the same, and thy years shall not fail."

PROBLEM: The writer to the Hebrews quotes from Psalms 102:25-27. It is argued that the Father is the creator of heaven and earth in this Psalm. Since the writer to the Hebrews applies this Psalm to Christ to show that he has a more excellent name than the angels, therefore, it is argued, he must be the creator of the universe, and hence "Very God".

SOLUTION:

1. The Psalm does not refer to the literal heavens and earth since these will not perish. Many Bible passages either state or imply the continued existence of the earth. (Isa. 45:18, cf. Isa. 11:9, Nu. 14:21, Hab.

2:14; Ecc. 1:4; 1 Chron. 16:30; Psa. 93:1; 104:5). The “heavens and earth” are used figuratively elsewhere in Scripture. (e.g. 2 Pet. 3:12,13 cf. Isa. 65:17; 66:22 where it is apparent that the literal earth is still in existence.)

2. Psalm 102 is Messianic. It was written for the “generation to come: and the people which shall be created”. (vs. 18 cf. vs. 13-16). The Messiah is now making new men and women for his kingdom. In the New Testament, “create” is frequently used in reference to this regenerative work of the Lord. (Eph. 2:10,15; 4:23,24; Gal. 6:15;¹ 2 Cor. 5:17; James 1:18).
3. The heavens and earth which were to pass away, rolled up like a garment, are the Mosaic “heavens and earth”. This is indicated by the following:
 - a) The writer to the Hebrews elsewhere in his epistle alludes to the language of Psalm 102:26 in describing the termination of the Mosaic order: “Now that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away.” (Heb. 8:13).
 - b) The people “that shall be created” (Psa. 102:18) refers to those in the new covenant. It was prophesied of Christ: “Lo, I come to do thy will, O God. He taketh away the first [old covenant], that he may establish the second. By the which will we [believers] are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all.” (Heb. 10:9). Again, the context indicates the termination of the Mosaic order.
 - c) The argument in Hebrews 1 is that the Son hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than the angels. (Heb. 1:4). The reference to the Mosaic “heavens and earth” is an effective argument since angels administered this constitution. (Acts 7:38, 53; Gal. 3:19; Heb. 2:2). This was the constitution to be folded up as a garment by the Son—therefore the Son must have a more excellent name than the angels.

HEB. 7:3 “Without father, without mother, without descent, having neither beginning of days, nor end of life; but made like unto the Son of God; abideth a priest continually.”

PROBLEM: This passage is cited to prove the “deity of Christ”, since the writer says he was “without beginning of days, nor end of life”.

SOLUTION:

1. This passage provides a comparison of the priesthood of Melchisedek and the priesthood of Christ to show that the latter is superior to the Aaronic priesthood. It does not have reference to the nature of the origin of Christ. This can be shown from the following:

¹ The Greek word “ktisis” means “a making, thing made” and is translated by the word “creature” in this passage. See Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1967). In the other references cited, the Greek word is “ktizō”, which means “to make, produce”. Ibid.

- a) Jesus did have a mother (Mary) and a father (God)¹. (Luke 1: 35). His family line is the subject of the early chapters of both Matthew's and Luke's gospels. (Matt. 1; Lk. 3).
 - b) Jesus had an end of life when he died. After his resurrection he declared: "I am he that liveth, and was dead." (Rev. 1:18). He is now alive "for evermore" since his Father raised him from the dead. (Acts 13:29,30).
2. The superiority of the priesthood of Christ is established in the Epistle to the Hebrews by the following arguments:
- a) The Levitical priesthood depended upon descent (e.g. Ezra 2:61, 62), but Scripture is silent about the family tree of Melchisedek. He appears in the Genesis narrative without antecedents and nothing is said about his subsequent life. He is, therefore, a type of the priesthood of Christ. The writer to the Hebrews states that Christ "has become a priest not according to a legal requirement concerning bodily descent but by the power of an indestructible life." (vs. 16, R.S.V.). Hence the superiority of Christ's priesthood—he "abideth a priest continually" (vs. 3); his priesthood is not dependent upon inherited qualifications.
 - b) The Levitical priests received tithes according to the Law. (vs. 5). But their inferior status is implied, since in a figure they paid tithes to Melchisedek while in the loins of Abraham, their father. (vs. 5,9,10).

HEB. 10:5 "Wherefore when he cometh into the world, he saith, . . . a body hast thou prepared me."

PROBLEM: It is argued that since the passage states that a body was prepared for Christ when he came into the world, this implies his existence prior to his "incarnation".

SOLUTION:

1. Even if the passage be read as trinitarians suggest, it results in a negation of the very point the inspired writer is making. The eternal character of the sacrifice of Christ is contrasted with the temporary arrangement under the Law of Moses. (vs. 3-12). But trinitarians assert that by "body" is meant a flesh and bone tabernacle for "God the Son", in which case the sacrifice has no merit, since "God the Father" prepared the body which housed "God the Son". On the basis of this reasoning, "God the Father" did not provide His Son for a sacrifice, but provided merely a flesh and bone body ("God the Son" continuing to exist while the body remained in the tomb).¹ How then is this "sacrifice" any more effective than the shed blood of bulls and of goats under the Law?
2. The writer to the Hebrews quotes Psa. 40:6-8. But this Psalm reads differently in the Old Testament than in the New: "Mine ears hast thou

¹ It is said of Esther that she had "neither father nor mother." (Esther 2:7). Likewise, this did not mean that she had no natural parents, (but rather that they were dead).

¹ Which in effect denies the resurrection of Christ. Scripture states that it was "him" that God raised. (Acts 13:29,30).

opened ["digged" mg.].” It is apparent that the Psalm alludes to the piercing of the ear of a servant who voluntarily desired to serve his master for life. (Exod. 21:2-6). The substance of this Psalm provides the background for the argument in Hebrews. Consider the following:

- a) “Prepared”—“to fit or adjust thoroughly”² Christ willingly complied with the divine purpose. (Matt. 26:39). He “made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant [Greek: “doulou”, a slave³], . . . and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross.” (Phil. 2:7,8). In bringing about this great salvation, Christ “learned . . . obedience by the things which he suffered.” (Heb. 5:8).

Rather than asserting the pre-existence of Christ, this passage is a declaration of the faithfulness of the Son to his Father, like the slave to his master, and hence the merit of his sacrifice “once for all”. (vs. 10).

REV. 3:14 “ . . . These things saith the Amen, the faithful and true witness, the beginning of the creation of God.”

PROBLEM: This passage is usually quoted with Colossians 1 by J.W.’s to prove that Christ was the first of God’s creation, and that all subsequent creation (e.g., trees and animals of Genesis 1) is the work of Christ. Therefore, it is argued, Christ existed before his birth in the days of Herod the King.

SOLUTION:

1. Christ is the “Alpha and Omega” (Rev. 1:11) of God’s creation. This creation is not the creation of trees and animals as recorded in Genesis 1, but rather the “creation” of new men and women. “Create” and “creation” are frequently used in this regenerative sense in the New Testament. See, for example, the following: Eph. 2:10,15 cf. 4:23,24; Col. 3:9,10 R.S.V.; Gal. 6:15; James 1:18; 2 Cor. 5:17.
2. Rev. 3:14 refers to this new creation and not to the creation of Genesis 1. This is indicated by the context:
 - a) “ . . . hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown.” (Rev. 3:11).
 - b) “Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God . . . and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, which is new Jerusalem . . . and I will write upon him my new name.” (vs. 12).
 - c) “To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne . . .” (vs. 21).

The “making”, “writing” and “granting” refer to the “new” Jerusalem and the new name—the ultimate regeneration of believers, and not to the creative acts on the earth of Genesis 1.

² Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965).

³ Ibid.

3. Jesus is the “beginning” of this new creation—the first to live, die, and to receive life for evermore. (Rev. 1:18). As Paul puts it: “And he is the head of the body, the church: who is the beginning, the firstborn from the dead; that in all things he might have the preeminence.” (Col. 1:18). Christ is the “first and the last”, the “Alpha and Omega” (Rev. 1:11)¹ of this new creation.
4. A further proof, (but more lengthy to develop) that “the beginning of the creation of God” refers to Christ as “the firstborn from the dead” and not as the creator of the universe, can be deduced by noting that Rev. 1:18 “I am he that liveth, and was dead; and behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen” is a commentary on Rev. 3:14. If this can be shown then clearly Rev. 3:14 refers to the creation which commenced with Christ’s death and resurrection. The proof rests in a comparison of the introductory statements about Jesus which begin each of the letters to the seven ecclesias with the description of Jesus in the first chapter. Consider the following:
 - i. To Ephesus—“These things saith he that holdeth the seven stars in his right hand, who walketh in the midst of the seven golden candlesticks.” (Rev. 2:1). Cf. Rev. 1:20.
 - ii. To Smyrna—“These things saith the first and the last, which was dead, and is alive.” (Rev. 2:8). Cf. Rev. 1:11,18.
 - iii. To Pergamos—“These things saith he which hath the sharp sword with two edges.” (Rev. 2:12). Cf. Rev. 1:16.
 - iv. To Thyatira—“These things saith the Son of God, who hath his eyes like unto a flame of fire, and his feet are like fine brass.” (Rev. 2:18). Cf. Rev. 1:14,15.
 - v. To Sardis—“These things saith he that hath the seven Spirits of God, and the seven stars . . . ” (Rev. 3:1). Cf. Rev. 1:4.
 - vi. To Philadelphia—“These things saith he that is holy, he that is true, he that hath the key of David, he that openeth, and no man shutteth; and shutteth, and no man openeth.” (Rev. 3:7). Cf. Rev. 1:18.

Therefore,

- vii. To Laodicea—These things saith the Amen, the faithful and true witness, the beginning of the creation of God.” (Rev. 3:14) Cf. “I am he that liveth and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death.” (Rev. 1:18). Clearly, “the beginning of the creation of God”=“I am he that liveth and was dead.” (i.e., “the first-born from the dead”.) (Col. 1:18).

¹ The Alpha and Omega of Rev. 1:8 is the Father—the Almighty. Cf. Rev. 1:4,5 where the distinction is made between “God” and “Jesus”. Note, too, the similarity between the language of vs. 4 and vs. 8.

PERSONALITY OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

PRELIMINARY POINTS:

1. No attempt is made in this handbook to consider each of the passages wrested in an effort by trinitarians to prove that the Holy Spirit is a person with the Godhead. To do so would result in many repetitious solutions. Instead, a list of the evidence against the trinitarian position is tabulated.
2. The Holy Spirit is the power of God. (Lk. 1:35). Consequently, what the Holy Spirit does is really what God is doing. For example, the "Comforter, which is the Holy Spirit . . . shall teach you all things" (Jn. 14:26) means simply: "God shall teach you all things through his divine power." Similarly, although the Scriptures cannot literally "say" anything, it is written: "For the Scripture saith unto Pharaoh." (Rom. 9:17). God said this, and His human penman, guided by Holy Spirit power, reliably recorded it. In this quotation there is a merging of what "God says" with what "Scripture says". Likewise, the Holy Spirit is said to "speak", "bear witness", and to be a "comforter" when in actuality it is God doing the speaking, bearing witness and comforting, by his power—the Holy Spirit.

JOHN 14:26 "But the Comforter, which is the Holy Spirit . . . he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you."

JOHN 15:26 "But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me."

JOHN 16:13,14 "Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will shew you things to come. He shall glorify me: for he shall receive of mine, and shall shew it unto you."

ACTS 5:3 "But Peter said, Ananias, why hath Satan filled thine heart to lie to the Holy Spirit, and to keep back part of the price of the land?"

ACTS 5:9 " . . . How is it that ye have agreed together to tempt the Spirit of the Lord?"

ACTS 5:32 "And we are his witnesses of these things; and so is also the Holy Spirit, whom God hath given to them that obey him."

ACTS 8:16 "(For as yet he was fallen upon none of them: only they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.)"

ACTS 10:19 "While Peter thought on the vision, the Spirit said unto him, Behold three men seek thee."

ACTS 13:2 "As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Spirit said, Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them."

ACTS 15:28 "For it seemed good to the Holy Spirit, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things."

ACTS 16:6 "Now when they had gone throughout Phrygia and the region of Galatia, and were forbidden of the Holy Spirit to preach the word in Asia."

I COR. 12:11 "But all these worketh that one and the self-same Spirit, dividing to every man severally as he will."

HEB. 3:7 "Wherefore (as the Holy Spirit saith, To day if ye will hear his voice . . .)"

PROBLEM: On the basis of these passages trinitarians argue that the Holy Spirit is a co-equal and co-eternal Person within the Godhead.

SOLUTION:

1. The Holy Spirit can be shown to be a power by a careful comparison of the following passages:
 - a) Gen. 1:1,2—"In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth . . . And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters." But other references to creation attribute the work to God's power. Consider the following:
 - i. "I have made the earth, the man and the beast that are upon the ground, by my great power . . ." (Jer. 27:5).
 - ii. "He hath made the earth by his power . . ." (Jer. 51:15 cf. 10:12).
 - iii. "By the word of the LORD were the heavens made; and all the host of them by the breath [Heb. "ruach", spirit] of his mouth . . ." (Psa. 33:6). The latter is understandable if the Holy Spirit is a power, but the language is inappropriate if, in fact, the Holy Spirit is a mighty, omnipotent, and omniscient Personage within the Godhead.
 - b) Heb. 6:4,5—"For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Spirit, And have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come . . ." The Holy Spirit is associated with the "powers of the world to come."
 - c) Luke 1:5—" . . . The Holy Spirit shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee . . ." The parallel structure indicates that the "Holy Spirit" is equivalent to "power of the Highest".
 - d) Isa. 11:2—"The spirit of the LORD shall rest upon him . . ." This is interpreted in the New Testament to be "God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Spirit and power". (Acts 10:38).
2. It was the power of the Highest which "overshadowed" Mary. (Lk. 1:35). But if the Holy Spirit were a Person within the Godhead, then the Holy Spirit, and not the Father, is the real father of Jesus.
3. Jesus breathed on the disciples and they received the Holy Spirit.

- (Jn. 20:22). This language is understandable if a power were conveyed, but inappropriate if the Holy Spirit were a divine Person.
4. Similarly, the Holy Spirit was transmitted by the laying on of hands. (Acts 8:17-19). Was this the transmission of a divine Personage within the Godhead?
 5. The Holy Spirit was given "without measure" to Jesus. (Jn. 3:34). "Without measure" is an appropriate description of Holy Spirit power, but it is not the kind of language ordinarily associated with a person. (Cf. Acts 10:44, "The Holy Spirit fell upon them which heard the word". Also Acts 2:17, "I will pour out of my Spirit".)
 6. God sent the Holy Spirit to anoint Jesus. (Matt. 3:16; Lk. 4:18). Is it credible that "God the Father" sent "God the Holy Spirit" to anoint "God the Son" with "God the Holy Spirit"?
 7. In 17 epistles opening with an invocation of grace and peace, in only one is the Holy Spirit referred to, and then as the means of sanctification,¹ and not the source of grace. Why the invocation to God and Christ, and not to the Holy Spirit, if the latter were a Personage within the Godhead? Similarly, in the 11 occurrences of thanksgiving or blessing which follow the invocations in the epistles, not one contains any mention of the Holy Spirit.
 8. The divine order is set out in 1 Cor. 11:3. "But I would have you know, that the head of every man is Christ; and the head of the woman is the man; and the head of Christ is God." Why is there no mention of the Holy Spirit if he were a person?
 9. Jesus gave commandments by the Holy Spirit, (e.g. Acts 1:1,2) Was this one "co-equal" commanding another "co-equal"?
 10. Although it is stated that the Holy Spirit (i.e., the "Comforter") would make his abode in the disciples, (Jn. 14:16,17), this does not necessarily imply the personality of the Holy Spirit, since both the Father and the Son (in the same context) were also to make their abode in the disciples. (Jn. 14:23). Clearly then, God and his Son would abide through the Holy Spirit power. As Jesus said, "But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me." (Jn. 15:26).
 11. The Holy Spirit appeared as a "dove", (Matt. 3:16), as "cloven tongues of fire", (Acts 2:3), and was accompanied by the sound of a rushing mighty wind, (Acts 2:2). If the Holy Spirit were a Person, why are the theophanies so unlike those of the Father? (Exod. 33:18-23; 34:5-7).
 12. Why is the Holy Spirit not shown as sitting on God's throne? (See Rev. 7:10—"Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb." Also Acts 7:55,56.) Why no mention of the Holy Spirit?
 13. The personality of the Holy Spirit is sometimes inferred from Lk. 12:10—"And whosoever shall speak a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him: but unto him that blasphemeth against the Holy Spirit it shall not be forgiven." But this passage proves too much. Orthodox trinitarians claim that the Holy Spirit is co-equal with the Father and the Son², but their interpretation of this passage places the Holy Spirit above the Father and the Son, since it is a greater offence to sin against the Holy Spirit, than against either the Father or the Son.

1 1 Pet. 1:2.

14. The word "spirit" (pneuma) in the Greek text is neuter in gender, and does not therefore, in itself, denote personality. This point can be illustrated in the text of Acts 8:16: "... who came down and prayed for them that they might receive the Holy Spirit; for it had not yet fallen on any of them, but they had only been baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus." (R.S.V.) The immediate antecedent to the pronoun is "spirit" which is neuter in gender, hence the neuter pronoun. Many other translations give "it" rather than "he" (as does the A.V.). See for example: N.W.T., Diaglott, Rotherham's, The Emphasized Bible.

² The Athanasian Creed reads as follows: "... But the Godhead of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, is all one: the Glory equal, the Majesty co-eternal ... But the whole three Persons are co-eternal together: and co-equal." Reproduced in Percy White, The Doctrine of The Trinity: Analytically Examined and Refuted, (London: "The Dawn" Book Supply, 1937), pp. 49,50.

MIRACLES¹ AND THE UNIFORMITY OF NATURE²

PROBLEM: Many today reject the Biblical accounts of miracles because men of science, having examined nature with great care, have discovered that it has certain laws which it obeys. It is reasoned that if miracles were to be permitted, this regularity would not be observed, and one could never tell what would happen the next day.

SOLUTION:

1. It is not a question of nature obeying laws but of behaving (from the human point-of-view) in a predictable and reducible way. The fact that uniformity is observed in the large is not a reasonable objection against there having been deviations from it on certain exceptional occasions.
2. The concept of order, regularity, and in general, uniformity of the natural order is a Biblical concept. God promises the regularity of seed time and harvest, cold and heat, summer and winter, day and night. (Gen. 8:22). Jeremiah affirms that the sun, moon and stars fulfill their function because they move according to the ordinances which God controls. (Jer. 31:35,36). The regularity of night and day is called a covenant of God which cannot be broken. (Jer. 33:20). See also Job 38:8-11; Psa. 104:8,9; Prov. 8:29.
3. Men have discovered that in most of their researches it is possible to discover nature doing precisely the same things in precisely the same circumstances. But it cannot be assumed from this that "all things have continued as they were from the beginning of creation". (2 Pet. 3:4, R.S.V.). That is, one cannot logically extrapolate to say that there is an inviolable set of laws, which it is impossible for events to transgress. There is not the omnibus of knowledge required to justify such a statement. Scientific law is a systematized approach to the complex interrelations of the universe. It is not a handbook to tell us what cannot happen. The relativity of scientific law is illustrated in the revision of Newtonian laws which was required by Einstein's "theory of relativity".
4. Belief in the "uniformity of nature" is in itself an act of faith and not of logic. It requires the projection backwards of the regularity observed in the present as well as predicting future events on the basis of the past. Although many regularities in nature are observed these observations only cover a minute fraction of the events that actually go on

1 "Miracle" as used here, refers to the direct operation of God's power in such a manner as to be an arresting deviation from the ordinary sequence of nature.

2 Uniformity of nature is the belief that present causes solely have operated in the past. The concept was popularized by Charles Lyell in his text, Principles of Geology, 11th ed. rev.; (New York: D. Appleton and Co., 1892) I, pp. 317-318. Uniformitarianism has been accepted in all major centres of scientific learning. Darwin built his theory of organic evolution upon the uniformitarian foundation.

and have gone on. The observations are, therefore, of no use unless one believes in the uniformity of nature—i.e., that nature behaves in the same way when it is not being observed.³

5. Biblical claims of miracles cannot, therefore, be dismissed a priori (beforehand) as violations of "The law of uniformity of nature". Uniformity of nature is a belief, not a scientific law.

GEN. 1:16 "And God made two great lights . . ."

PROBLEM: In an effort to show the mythical character of the first eleven chapters of Genesis, clergymen of the United and Anglican Churches cite this passage. They point out that on the first day, God made light (Gen. 1:3-5), but God did not make the sun and moon until the fourth day (Gen. 1:16-19). Therefore, it is argued, the days in Genesis 1 cannot be understood as literal days.

SOLUTION:

1. The Hebrew word "asah"¹ translated "made" can be rendered "appoint" or "ordain". It is translated this way in Psa. 104:19—"He appointed the moon for seasons". On the basis of this translation, God did not literally make the sun and moon on the fourth day. These were formed in the "beginning" (an unspecified period of time in the past—Gen. 1:1).
2. The sun, moon and stars were "appointed" on the fourth day to give light upon the earth. It is likely that prior to the fourth day light was diffused on the earth. Light could be distinguished from darkness but not until the fourth day did the atmosphere become sufficiently clear for the appearance of the heavenly bodies.

GEN. 3:1 "Now the serpent was more subtil than any beast of the field . . ."

PROBLEM: Religious bodies (such as United Church of Canada) in an attempt to rationalize the miraculous elements in the Biblical record of Genesis, while retaining the fall of mankind, view the serpent, not as a literal beast of the field, but as part of a myth in which the evil desires within Eve are symbolized.

³ C. S. Lewis in Miracles, (London: Collins Clear-Type Press, 1947) makes the same point as follows: "Experience, therefore, cannot prove uniformity because uniformity has to be assumed before experience proves anything. It is no good saying, 'each fresh experience confirms our belief in uniformity and therefore, we reasonably expect that it will always be confirmed', for that argument works only on the assumption that the future will resemble the past—which is simply the assumption of uniformity under a new name. Can we say that uniformity is at any rate very probable? Unfortunately not, we have just seen that all probability depends on it. Unless nature is uniform, nothing is either probable or improbable, and clearly the assumption which you have to make before there is any such thing as probability cannot itself be probable . . ." pp. 106-107.

¹ "Asah" is also translated "appoint" in Job 14:5. It is translated "ordain" in Num. 28:6, 1 Kings 12:32,33.

SOLUTION:

1. If the literalness of Adam and Eve is retained, but a non-literal serpent suggested, the following questions need answering:
 - a) How is Genesis 3:1 to be understood: "Now the serpent was more subtil than any beast of the field which the LORD God had made"? Are the beasts in this verse also figurative? If the serpent were only a symbol of sinful thinking, why the allusion to "all the beasts of the field"?
 - b) If the serpent is a non-literal element, are the special trees, the disobedient eating, the shameful nakedness, the covering, concealment, subsequent questioning, and expulsion also allegorical?
 - c) If these details are literal (as many religious persons would concede) then why the demand for a non-literal serpent?¹ If a talking serpent is too great a tax on one's credulity, what then of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, and of the tree of life?
 - d) How can one consistently hold a literal Adam and Eve (as some do) and yet have a figurative environment?² This leaves the non-literal serpent position with no alternative but to view the whole narrative as a symbolic fall which actually took some other form than described.³
 - e) How is one to understand the curse on the serpent, "Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattle . . ." (Gen. 3:14).
2. There is a relevant comment by Paul on the serpent in his writing to the Corinthian Ecclesia. He says: "I fear, lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtilty, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ." (2 Cor. 11:3). The full force of Paul's argument requires a literal serpent in the Garden of Eden.

His argument rests on parallels:

Serpent lied — (Gen. 3:4)	False teachers lied — (2 Cor. 11:13)
Serpent was subtil — (Gen. 3:1)	False teachers were beguiling — (2 Cor. 11:3,13)
Eve was seduced — (2 Cor. 11:3)	Corinthians in danger of being seduced — (2 Cor. 11:3)
Eve's fall was disastrous — (1 Tim. 2:14)	Corinthians in danger of disaster — (2 Cor. 11:3)

1 If this is the basis on which a literal serpent is rejected, the problems become cumulative. How is one to interpret Balaam's ass speaking, "And the LORD opened the mouth of the ass, and she said unto Balaam, What have I done unto thee, that thou hast smitten me these three times?" (Num. 22:28). Peter endorses the account: "the dumb ass speaking with man's voice forbad the madness of the prophet." (2 Pet. 2:16).

2 The geographic location of the garden is carefully specified in Gen. 2:9-14.

3 It is not possible to maintain this view since the historicity of the fall of man is reaffirmed in the New Testament. (1 Tim. 2:13,14; Rom. 5:12,14). Allusions to the early chapters of Genesis in the New Testament occur in contexts in which the arguments require a belief in the historicity of the narratives. See, for example, 1 Cor. 11:7-9 (the prior creation of Adam); Matt. 19:4,5; Matt. 23:35; Heb. 11:4; 1 Jn. 3:12 (the death of Abel).

The full force of the parallels requires a literal serpent. If the serpent were merely a symbol of Eve's unworthy thoughts, then Eve (created "very good" Gen. 1:31) was tempted within, yet the Corinthians (fallen descendants of Adam) were tempted from without. What force would there be in Paul's allusion to the serpent?

3. If the primary incitement came of the woman's inner fleshly insubordination to divine law, then how could it be said that she was made "very good"? The next logical step required by those who hold a non-literal view of the serpent would be to have God condemning in Christ, (the seed of the woman) what He had Himself created—the "nature" which Eve bore. Adam described as "very good" could not say as did Paul "in me (that is, in my flesh,) dwelleth no good thing". (Rom. 7:18). Nor could he speak of "the law of sin" which is "in my members". (Rom. 7:23).
4. Sometimes stress is placed on Gen. 3:15 where the seed of the serpent, (sin) is symbolically portrayed. It is then reasoned that the preceding verses referring to the serpent must also be symbolic. To suggest this is to miss the point that a symbol must have its basis in prior fact. The symbolic use of the serpent elsewhere in scripture is intelligible because of the literal serpent in the Garden of Eden.

JOSH. 10:13 "And the sun stood still, and the moon stayed . . ."¹

PROBLEM: If the Bible is a divinely inspired book, why does it use Ptolemaic language implying a geocentric concept of the solar system (i.e. that the sun goes around the earth), rather than Copernican language which would imply a heliocentric concept of the solar system (i.e., that the earth revolves around the sun)?

SOLUTION:

1. The language of the Bible is often phenomenal (i.e., it pertains to appearances). The Bible describes the heavenly bodies, and classifies the animal world by appearance. Likewise data in sociology, education, and psychology, as well as many other disciplines, are collected on the basis of observation. Other attempts to order data may involve classification according to other criteria such as internal structure.

¹ It is reported that there is independent historical confirmation of a long day in the writings of other people. See Arthur Gook, Can A Young Man Trust His Bible?, (London: Pickering and Inglis Ltd.). Gook comments as follows: "There were three ancient nations in the East which kept records of their history—the Greeks, the Egyptians and the Chinese. Each of these nations has a record of an unnaturally long day. HERODOTUS, 480 B.C., a Greek who is called 'the father of history,' tells us that some priests in Egypt showed him a record telling of the lengthening of a day far beyond the twenty-four hours. In the Chinese ancient writings it is plainly stated that such an occurrence took place in the reign of their Emperor Yeo, and their genealogical tables show that an Emperor of this name was reigning in China in the time of Joshua. Lord Kingsborough, who has made a special study of the aboriginal Indians in America, states that the Mexicans, who reached a high state of civilization long before America was discovered by Europeans, have a record that the sun 'stood still' for a whole day in the year which they call 'seven rabbits.' Now, the year 'seven rabbits' corresponds exactly with the time that Joshua and the Israelites were conquering Palestine." p. 43.

2. Popular expressions include the phenomenal approach. The sun is still spoken of as “rising” and “setting,” one still hears idioms like: “From every corner of the earth” and “from all quarters of the globe”. Such expressions are entirely serviceable in everyday communications as vehicles of meaning. Their use does not imply postulation about the actual or absolute relationships of heavenly bodies to the earth. The Bible no more errs in its use of the phenomenal approach than a contemporary person does in his use of similar idioms.

EVOLUTION

PRELIMINARY POINTS

Most Christadelphians, it would seem, are far more comfortable instructing friends who accept the authority of the Bible, rather than those for whom this remains to be demonstrated. But it is likely that the latter group of questioners and students will make up an increasingly large number of contacts.

One of the main factors in the general decline in belief of Biblical inspiration is the widespread acceptance of evolution as the 'scientific' explanation for the origin and development of life.¹ As one writer observed:

The tale could be told a thousand times, of a Christian² church or school or mission society or some other organization, founded by men of strong Biblical faith (belief in the verbal, plenary, and infallible inspiration of Scripture) . . . slowly but steadily drifting off its foundations and gradually sinking in the sands of modernism and secularism. This tragedy repeated times without number, almost always begins with a questioning of Biblical creationism. The Scriptural account of origins must somehow be accommodated to the latest scientific theories of origins (which are always evolutionary). This accommodation inevitably and necessarily leads to a softening of the doctrine of Biblical inspiration and infallibility. Other creative acts of God (that is, the recorded miracles) begin to be questioned, and a view of Biblical inspiration which allows for cultural limitations and even for outright contradictions becomes adopted . . . The proper activity for modern Christians eventually becomes more 'social action', striving to help in the future evolution of the social order into a more advanced and enlightened humanistic society.³

Many Christadelphians feel an uneasiness about tackling an evolutionist on his own ground. There is usually good reason for this, since the Christadelphian may lack familiarity with the specialized language and data of a particular area of science. The Christadelphian is far more competent to 1 Theoretical framework, evolutionary in nature, has been widely employed in the behavioural sciences such as psychology, anthropology, and sociology as well as in biology. Sir Julian Huxley, the famous British biologist, has emphasized the all-inclusive character of evolutionary philosophy: "the concept of evolution was soon extended to other than biological fields. Inorganic subjects such as the life-histories of stars and the formation of the chemical elements on the one hand, and on the other hand subjects like linguistics, social anthropology, and comparative law and religion, began to be studied from an evolutionary angle, until today we are enabled to see evolution as a universal all pervading process." Julian Huxley, "Evolution and Genetics", in What is Science. ed. by J. R. Newman, (New York: Simon and Schuster, 1955), p. 272.

2 The term 'Christian' is used by the author in the popular sense of a person "following Jesus Christ." It is preferable to use the term 'Christian' only for believers in the one gospel, (the basic elements of which are outlined in the Christadelphian Birmingham Amended Statement of Faith).

3 Henry Morris, The Twilight of Evolution, (Michigan: Baker Book House Co., 1963) preface.

expound the great Truths of the written Word. Amateur though he may be, there is no monopoly on logic. Every Christadelphian should equip himself with sufficient knowledge to clearly formulate the kind of evidence which would be required to reasonably support evolution. Any evidence which may be raised (even if previously unknown) may then be considered in terms of a set criterion. Such an approach has the advantage of ordering a discussion on evolution to avoid the wrangling which can occur over insignificant or even irrelevant considerations. The ground can then be cleared for constructive Biblical teaching to follow.

SUGGESTED STRATEGY

1. Insist on a definition of the term evolution. Biology texts use the term in the following three ways:
 - a) The gradual change in the characteristics of species over the course of time. The Christadelphian need not concern himself with this definition of evolution, since minor changes do occur within species without a change in their essential nature. (E.g. humans today are on the average taller and heavier than humans of a hundred years ago.)
 - b) 'Horizontal differentiation'—the diversification of a single type into a number of types of creatures with similar characteristics. Again, the Christadelphian need not concern himself with this definition since different types of dogs may have come from one dog type, but they are still dogs.
 - c) 'Vertical evolution'—the development of existing forms¹ from a few primitive forms with increasing complexity and development through the ages. It is this definition which conflicts with the special creative acts of God outlined in Genesis.

Evidence for a) and b) is often mistakenly advanced in support of c).

¹ It is helpful to know that there are currently about 1,000,000 species of animals and 250,000 species of plants described in biological literature. Taxonomic categories usually follow the structure set out by Linnaeus, a Swedish botanist. The classification uses the following categories:

Kingdom	— either plant or animal
Phylum	— related classes
Class	— families with common fundamental characteristics
Family	— a cluster of genera (the plural of genus)
Genus	— species with common characteristics
Species	— kinds of plants and animals "the individuals of any one kind differing from each other only in minor traits, except sex; sharply separated in some traits from all other species; and mutually fertile, but at least partially sterile when crossed to other species". Edward O. Dodson, Evolution: Process and Product , (New York: Reinhold Publishing Corporation, 1960), p. 28.

The classification of two birds, the red-headed woodpecker and the red-winged blackbird would, for example, be classified as follows:

Taxonomy	Red-winged blackbird	Red-headed woodpecker
Kingdom	Animalia	Animalia
Phylum	Chordata	Chordata
Class	Aves	Aves
Family	Passeriformes	Piciformes
Genus	Icteridae	Picidae
Species	Agelaius phoeniceus	Melanerpe erythrocephalus

2. It is useful to anticipate that the evidence for "vertical evolution" is usually taken from four major areas:¹

A. Paleontology—the study of fossil remains of extinct animals and plants, including traces of their existence (e.g. footprints in slate, clay, or coal). It attempts to establish the order in which things lived.

B. Morphology and Comparative Anatomy—the study of the comparison of living and dead things for resemblances and differences which might suggest relationships between them and indicate whether one form might have been derived from another.

C. Embryology—the study of developing creatures before their birth. Comparisons are made between the adult or developing forms of other creatures.

D. Genetics—the study of how the characteristics of parents are transmitted to their offspring, and how variations in these characteristics can arise. It is also concerned experimentally with breeding research in which new variables are produced and specialized.

3. In general, the evidence produced in discussion can be critically evaluated in terms of the following schema :

A. Paleontological

a) Evidence required—A reasonable argument in support of vertical evolution must show that there is a finely graded sequence from simple to complex over a long period of evolutionary history.²

b) Evidence lacking

i. At best paleontological enquiry can only show that one form of life came after another, (granting the generous assumption that all inverted orders of fossil deposits can be explained). Present paleontological enquiry does not prove descent.

ii. The fossil record does not show a finely graded sequence from simple to complex.¹ Its record is one of discontinuity. Types spring suddenly in the Cambrian deposits.

¹ Evidence for evolution is sometimes taken from biogeography (the study of geographical distribution of plants and animals) and taxonomy (the science of the classification of organisms). These, however, are not usually the crucial arguments. When arguments of classification are advanced by evolutionists it requires stressing that it is the evolutionist, and not the fossils, which orders the single celled amoeba, first, and next to it places a multicellular hydra, a three-layered worm, an amphioxus, and then a fish, an amphibian, reptile, lower mammal, lower ape, higher ape, and man. The order is a synthetic one. It no more proves that one form of life came from another than the arrangement of books on a shelf from simple to complex proves that the books "evolved". Both simple and complex may have been produced simultaneously. Arguments from the classification assume the very thing which must be proved.

² This argument is considered in greater detail in an excellent article by C. E. A. Turner, "Phantom Ancestors". The article is an abstract from a pamphlet published by the Evolution Protest Movement under the title, "Horse Sense about Horse Evolution". See Science Section ed. by D. A. B. Owen, The Testimony, 34, No. 401, (May, 1964), pp. 171-173.

B. and C. Morphological, Anatomical,² and Embryological

a) Evidence required—It must be shown that x and y are part of an historical sequence of progressive changes, or that x can be made to give birth to y by this or that genetic modification.

b) Evidence lacking

- i. Comparing the anatomy of the wing of a bird, the paddle of a whale and the arm of a man, certain similarities of structure can be observed. But resemblances of structure are just as capable of indicating a common designer as ancestry from prior forms.
- ii. Morphological, anatomical and embryological evidence depend on palaeontological and genetic claims. It depends on whether the fossil record shows a finely graded progression from simple to complex, and whether the study of genetics provides the mechanisms by which creatures would move over time from simple to complex.

D. Genetic

a) Evidence required—Experimental evidence to prove that chance factors can elaborate the structural complexities of creatures.

1 Alfred Norris notes, "Of course specific instances to the contrary are claimed. In particular, much is made of the evolution of the horse from a primitive, dog-sized and multitoed eohippus ('dawn horse') to our modern large and single-toed equus. Here we can, if we wish, join 'deceitful delusion', and exploit the differences which exist between those who try to arrange the fossils in sequence. But it is much more profitable, to my mind, to point out that even if the sequence were absolutely demonstrated we begin with a placental mammal of a particular type, and we finish with a placental mammal of the same type. It is bigger in size (but no one calls that evolution), and it has fewer toes (which needs no comment), but it is utterly valueless in providing any sort of presumption that less complex creatures evolve into more complex ones; for nothing of the kind has happened in this instance. Nor has it in any other for which the sequence is claimed to be sufficiently complete to justify a belief in demonstrated descent." Alfred Norris, 'Where Science and Religion Meet: Is Evolution a Fact?' The Christadelphian, 102, No. 1208, (Feb., 1965), pp. 59-62.

2 Sometimes vestigial organs (useless representatives of organs which in other animals serve a useful purpose) are presented as proof of evolution. It is argued that these useless organs like the coccyx (last vertebral column of man and said to be the vestigial tail) or the appendix have no function in humans but functioned in the ancestors of humans. The argument assumes that if no purpose is known for organs that no purpose exists. Weidensham listed 180 of such organs which he considered "useless luggage". Recent research has shown that only a small number of organs now have no known purpose at some stage in the human life. Many evolutionists are critical of the vestigial proof for evolution as the "useless luggage" becomes increasingly smaller. See H. Enoch, Evolution or Creation, (London: Evangelical Press, 1968) pp. 14-21. To make a case for evolution, it must be shown that nascent organs are in evidence (organs newly acquired by an animal, but which did not exist in its ancestors). Such proof has not yet been found.

b) Evidence lacking

- i. Although it is true that selective breeding has produced many varieties of plants and animals which may, under carefully controlled conditions, breed true to their new type, the fact that almost without exception, such new types would not be viable in nature¹ is very strong presumption that evolution is unlikely to have been much helped by such processes.
- ii. Indications of diversity on the same level of organization (e.g., Drosophila—the fruit fly) do not prove that present organization has proceeded from single-celled creatures to complex placentae.
- iii. Years of labour, and millions of dollars of research have gone into unlocking the secrets of genetic codes. If anything, this would indicate deliberate planning and highly intelligent understanding behind its formation. It remains to be proven that it could occur by chance.

¹ It is generally accepted that the genes (heredity determiners) tend to keep species constant. However, the genes are capable of undergoing a change (mutation), so that the trait determined is different from the original and is just as stable. Since mutations form the basis of heredity they are thought by evolutionists to provide the raw material or mechanism for evolution. Nearly all such mutations result in inferior survival chance in nature. "Indeed inasmuch as a living cell is an exceedingly complex, very finely adjusted whole, it is to be expected that any permanent change in cellular properties would be more or less disruptive and harmful." Paul Weisz, The Science of Biology, (New York: McGraw-Hill, 1960), p. 690.

BIBLIOGRAPHY ON EVOLUTION

A) Christadelphian Publications

The Finger of God: Evolution or Creation? Evington, Leicester, The Testimony, 1963.

This 106 page booklet is useful in its analysis of the diverse specializations of the animal and plant worlds. The cumulative effect of the booklet is an argument against the probability that chance factors could produce the highly complex specializations of organic life.

"Creation or Chance?" Herald of the Coming Age. Vol. 16 No. 6, (April, 1966).

This is a compact 15 page booklet designed for distribution to friends. Requests for back copies should be addressed to Logos Publications, West Beach, South Australia.

"The Bible and Modern Thinking—Assent or Dissent?" The Testimony, Vol. 35 No. 417, (Sept. 1965).

This 114 page magazine ought to be read by every Christadelphian. Its articles cover a wide range of the conflicts between "science" and the Bible. On pages 402-403 the magazine has a bibliography of books considered helpful by the editors.

B) Non-Christadelphian Publications¹

Did Man Get Here by Evolution or by Creation? Brooklyn, New York: Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc., 1967, pp. 1-126.

This book costs only 25c and is available from the Jehovah's Witnesses. It is well documented and very easy to read. The latter chapters are predominantly concerned with J.W. theology and form a useful summary of the doctrines of the sect for those who are teaching members of this group or who contend against their wrested scriptures.

¹ It must be realized that these textbooks are recommended only for their analysis of evolution. The books must be read with discernment since the writers (while believing in the verbal, plenary and infallible inspiration of Scripture) have occasionally misunderstood its teaching on basic doctrines. The pages recommended for reading are noted.

Enoch, H. Evolution or Creation. Pennsylvania: Evangelical Press, London, 1968, pp. 172.

For $1.50 this is one of the most thorough and systematic examinations of the claims of evolutionists. This book is a must for every Christadelphian entering university.

Morris, Henry. The Twilight of Evolution. Grand Rapids, Mich.: Baker Book House, 1966, pp. 1-74. This small book has one of the best analysis of the inroads of evolution within the Evangelical movement. Morris is an hydrologist who co-authored the book, The Genesis Flood.

CARBON FOURTEEN DATING

PROBLEM: Dating methods (currently Carbon-14) are cited as definitely proving that man has been on the earth for at least 30,000 years. This age for man conflicts with Biblical chronology which dates the beginning of man's existence on the earth about six thousand years ago.

SOLUTION:

1. In order to critically appraise the claim that C-14 "definitely proves" the age of man to be at least 30,000 years, a description of C-14 dating is required:

The C-14 method of dating is used to determine the age of vegetables and animal remains. The procedure rests on the fact that cosmic radiation in the upper atmosphere leads to the formation of a radio-active isotope of carbon with an atomic weight of fourteen, instead of the normal weight of twelve (C-14 instead of the normal C-12). Atmospheric carbon contains a small amount of radio-active C-14 which decays at a fixed known rate, but is continuously replaced by the formation of more C-14. The rate of breakdown is calculated in terms of the "half-life" which for carbon is 5,568 (plus or minus 30) years. After this amount of time, only half the original amount of C-14 will be left; after about 11,400 years, a quarter. Plants, by means of photosynthesis, and animals, by respiration and feeding on plants and one another, incorporate atmospheric carbon into their tissues, a process that is assumed to cease when the tissues die. As the C-14 disintegrates in the dead tissues and is not replaced, the ratio of non-radioactive carbon-12 to C-14 will slowly change, and its value at any time will depend on the time that has elapsed since the tissues died. Thus the age of the tissues can in principle be determined by comparing the ratio of non-radioactive carbon to C-14 in the tissue and in the atmosphere.¹

2. The C-14 dating method is only reliable if the general assumption of the uniformity of nature² is valid.

Uniformity of nature is the belief that present causes solely have operated in the past. Within this general assumption are two particular assumptions:

1 See John Watts, "Carbon 'Fourteen' Dating", in "The Bible and Modern Thinking—Assent or Dissent?" The Testimony, Vol. 35, No. 417 (Sept. 1965), 352-353.

2 Lyell, sometimes referred to as "the high priest of uniformitarianism" and author of the famous textbook, Principles of Geology, wrote: "... all theories are rejected which involve the assumption of sudden and violent catastrophes . . ." Charles Lyell, Principles of Geology, 11th. ed. rev., (New York: D. Appleton and Co., 1892), 1,317-318. Uniformitarianism has been accepted in all major centres of scientific learning. Darwin built his theory of organic evolution upon the uniformitarian foundation which Lyell had laid. But the Apostle Peter denounces uniformitarianism (i.e., the belief that "all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation" 2 Pet. 3:4). He cites God's divine intervention in the violent catastrophe of the Noahic flood (2 Pet. 3:6) as evidence of its falsity.

- a) That fossilized creatures when living had as much C-14 as similar things have today.¹
- b) That the rate of decay of C-14 has remained constant (i.e., that the rate of decay has not changed in the interval from when the creatures lived to the present day).
3. There are a number of technical problems involved in C-14 dating:
 - a) It requires relatively small effects to change the level of C-14. For example the burning of coal and oil which contain virtually no C-14 has, during the past century, lowered the proportion of C-14 in the atmosphere by an amount equivalent to 400 years. The explosion of hydrogen bombs between 1955 and 1961 increased the amount of C-14 by an amount equivalent to 1500 years.
 - b) The fossils are often contaminated by carbon from their surroundings—carbonates, humic acid, etc. Materials recovered from wet earth inevitably have been invaded by water containing carbonates, humic acid and even pitch. All these must be extracted from the sample with acid, alkali and organic solvents, and even after this some degree of contamination is possible.
 - c) Chemical and/or biological changes may have been going on in the fossil over the centuries changing its composition. The amount of C-14 in a fossil (for example, 6,000 years old) is a very small part of the total carbon, and contamination can have a big effect. It is instructive to notice that ever since the radioactive methods of dating were introduced, almost 50 years ago, their supporters have manifested great confidence in them. Yet most of the ages determined by the uranium methods prior to 1940 and by the C-14 method prior to 1960 have been discarded because it was concluded that the methods then in use were unsatisfactory.
4. Even if it be shown that there is a high degree of correlation between independent dating methods this does not in itself prove the age of man on the earth. The appearance of age may be due to the following factors:
 - a) God's creation was in equilibrium, hence the appearance of age.²
 - b) Conditions have not been uniform on the earth. The record in Genesis 1:6 states that on the second day the waters were divided into two parts, water below the heaven and water above the heaven. The accumulation of water "above the heaven" would form an outer band round the atmosphere. But this does not exist today, therefore it cannot be assumed that the cosmic ray intensity

1 This assumption was noted at a recent conference of radiocarbon experts: "Throughout the conference emphasis was placed on the fact that laboratories do not measure ages, they measure sample activities. The connection between activity and age is made through a set of assumptions . . . one of the main assumptions of C-14 dating is that the atmospheric radiocarbon level has held steady over the age-range to which the method applies." Science Digest, (Dec. 10, 1965), p. 1490.

2 The record in Genesis presents Adam as a fully developed man when newly made. Similarly the birds, animals and plants were created full grown. This implies that the soil in which the plants were to grow was already formed. Similarly the ocean would contain the salt and other chemicals to support its marine life. In other words, there must have been an equilibrium among the innumerable and complex interrelationships between the plant and animal kingdoms, the organic and inorganic realms. This can only mean that the world when created had the appearance of age. Obviously the apparent age of the world would not be the same as the real or actual age of the world.

has been constant. Nor can it be assumed that there has been a stable equilibrium condition between atmospheric $^{14}\text{CO}_2$ (Carbon-14 dioxide) and the reservoirs, primarily the oceans. Genesis 7:12; 8:2 state that in the great Noahic flood the heavens were opened for 40 days and presumably the above-the-heaven water returned to the earth. (Vast quantities of water are now stored as ice in the frozen polar regions.) The blanket of water vapour around the earth prior to the flood would be expected to reduce the ionising power of the sun's rays and the amount of C-14 in living things would be less than now.¹ If C-14 in living things was less than it is now, then the geologists' assumption of the uniformity of nature and hence the age postulated for fossils on the basis of these dating methods will be erroneous—the original amount of C-14 being smaller than they calculate.²

- c) The rate of decay of C-14 may also have been different under conditions before the Noahic flood.

GEN. 1:5 “ . . . And the evening and the morning were the first day.”

PROBLEM: In attempting to reconcile the creative acts of Gen. 1 with the great ages currently postulated for life on the earth, religious persons have interpreted the creative days to mean “geological epochs” or “1,000 year” days.³ Support for this position is taken from 2 Pet. 3:8—“one day is with the Lord as a thousand years”.

SOLUTION:

1. In Exod. 20:11 (also Exod. 31:17) God commanded Israel to observe the Sabbath as a sign of the covenant: “For in six days the LORD made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the LORD blessed the sabbath day, and hallowed it.” Would an Israelite receiving the instruction (to rest one day because God had rested after six days of work), understand the six days as six “geological epochs” of unspecified length, or six one-thousand year periods?
2. If one day=1,000 years, then Adam must have lived at least 1,000 years before dying. Even if he was created at the very end of the sixth day (1,000 year period) it is inconceivable that his fall occurred on the Sabbath (the next 1,000 year period), since God sanctified the Sabbath, Gen. 2:3, and “everything” was declared “very good” on the sixth day. (Gen. 1:31). The record states that Adam lived only

1 Science Digest of Dec. 1960 reported that if the C-14 level in the atmosphere has not remained steady, “ . . . it would most certainly ruin some of our carefully developed methods of dating things from the past . . . If the level of C-14 was less in the past, due to a greater magnetic shielding from cosmic rays, then our estimates of the time that has elapsed since the life of the organism will be too long.” p. 19.

2 See G. Pearce, “The Weakness of Science Concerning the Origin of Man”, Logos, Vol. XXXII, No. 12, (Nov. 1966), 411-419.

3 The J. W.'s for example are among this group. They reason as follows: “ . . . the Bible tells of six ‘days’ during which life appeared. But the Bible’s use of ‘day’ here means a period of time and not a twenty-four hour day.” Did Man Get Here By Evolution Or By Creation?, (New York: Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, Inc., 1967), p. 97.

930 years (Gen. 5:5), therefore, the days of creation cannot be 1,000 year "days".

3. Plants were created on the third day. Gen. 1:11,13, but insects did not appear until the sixth day. (Gen. 1:24-31). If one day=1,000 years, how did certain specialized plants requiring insect pollination (the maple tree, the strawberry, the blackberry, the honeysuckle, and the poppy) continue to exist without the ability to reproduce?
4. Proof is required that Genesis 1:5 alludes to Peter's statement that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day, (2 Pet. 3:8). There is no necessary connection between the two passages.

GEN. 2:4 "These are the generations of the heavens and of the earth when they were created, in the day that the LORD God made the earth and the heavens."

PROBLEM: In attempts to make the six days of Genesis 1 into a longer period of time (in keeping with dates currently postulated for life on the earth), the word "day" in Gen. 2:4 is used to support a longer day than the period bounded by the "evening and the morning" of Gen. 1.¹

SOLUTION:

1. "Day" in scripture is sometimes used to represent an unspecified length of time.² The Hebrew word, "yom" translated "day" in this passage is translated "time" elsewhere. (e.g., Gen. 4:3; 26:8; 38:12). But when second, third, etc., occur as they do in Genesis 1, the word refers to a literal day, defined in Genesis by the "evening and the morning".
2. As used in Gen. 2, "yom" covers the whole period when the LORD God "made the earth and the heavens". (Gen. 2:4). Failure to distinguish between these two uses of "day" have led to faulty interpretations of Genesis 1. The days of Genesis 1 are determined by light and darkness, evening and morning.

GEN. 4:14 "... every one that findeth me shall slay me."

PROBLEM: In an attempt to reconcile the account of creation of Adam with evolutionary explanations, this passage is cited by the clergy of the United Church of Canada and of the Anglican Church to support the idea that pre-Adamites lived on the earth. It is argued that Cain alludes to these pre-Adamites.

1 J.W.'s use this argument: "... the Bible tells of six 'days' during which life appeared. But the Bible's use of the word 'day' here means a period of time and not a twenty-four hour day. Genesis 2:4 indicates this by speaking of the 'day that Jehovah God made earth and heaven when previously it called each one of six periods included in that same time a 'day'." Did Man Get Here By Evolution Or By Creation? (New York: Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc., 1967), p. 97.

2 For example, "the day of temptation" (Psa. 95:8), "the day of adversity" (Prov. 24:10), "the day of vengeance" (Isa. 61:2), but when Scripture refers to "the fifteenth day of the same month" (Lev. 23:6), the seven days of Unleavened Bread, or the fifty days until Pentecost, the word "day" can mean only a 24 hour period.

SOLUTION:

1. There were no pre-Adamites in the earth at the time of Adam. This is indicated from the following:
 - a) "And Adam gave names to all cattle, and to the fowl of the air, and to every beast of the field; but for Adam there was not found an help meet for him." (Gen. 2:20). Two questions arise:
 - i) Why only the mention of beasts which Adam named, if pre-Adamite humans existed?
 - ii) Why no mention of pre-Adamite women?
 - b) Jesus, in reply to the Pharisees' question on divorce, said, "Have ye not read, that he which made them at the beginning made them male and female, and said, For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife: and they twain shall be one flesh?" (Matt. 19:4-5). Jesus states that the "making" was from the "beginning of creation". (Mark 10:6). This is not the kind of language to describe the gradual evolution of man over a 30,000 year period.
 - c) Until the creation of Adam, the narrative states: "there was not a man to till the ground". (Gen. 2:5). Would this be true if there were other man-like creatures?
2. Adam and Eve "begat sons and daughters". (Gen. 5:4). Cain would, therefore, fear death at the hands of his brethren.

GEN. 4:16,17 "And Cain went out from the presence of the LORD, and dwelt in the land of Nod . . . and Cain knew his wife".

PROBLEM: This passage is used to support evolutionary interpretations of the origin of man. It is argued that there were other humans on the earth beside the descendants of Adam and that Cain found one of these in the land of Nod.

SOLUTION:

1. The passage does not say that Cain went to Nod and there found a wife. Cain could have taken his wife with him to Nod.
2. Adam begat sons and daughters. (Gen. 5:4). Cain would, therefore, marry one of his sisters.
3. Other Biblical references make it plain that all humans are descendants from one original pair. Consider the following:
 - a) "And he made from one every nation of men to live on all the face of the earth . . ." (Acts 17:26, R.S.V.).
 - b) Rom. 5:12—"by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin"
Rom. 5:16—"for the judgment was by one to condemnation"
Rom. 5:18—"by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation"
Rom. 5:19—"by one man's disobedience many were made sinners"
 - c) "The first man Adam was made a living soul" (1 Cor. 15:45).

PARTIAL INSPIRATION

PROBLEM: The most widely accepted view of inspiration in Protestant circles is that inspiration was an enlightening of the Biblical authors which, while it gave them moral and spiritual insight and made their work “inspiring” (or, as some say, a vehicle of God’s word to their readers), it did not guarantee doctrinal or historical trustworthiness to all they actually wrote.

SOLUTION:

1. If inspiration of the Biblical writers “did not guarantee doctrinal or historical trustworthiness to all they actually wrote” how does one distinguish the trustworthy pronouncements from those which are not trustworthy? If the writers were liable to err in historical writing, how can they be trusted in anything they wrote?¹
2. The Bible records God’s purpose and interaction with men. As such, the historical facts have a doctrinal content. For example, God revealed himself to Israel as “I am the LORD thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt . . .” (Exod. 20:2). The assertion is not only historical in character but doctrinal.
3. Biblical writers never make a difference between “non-essential detail” and “divine principles”. The New Testament writers frequently allude to historical events (e.g., Matt. 12:42; Lk. 17:27), and regard them as factual records of divine instruction. Historical illustrations are cited as “admonitions” and “examples”. (1 Cor. 10:11; Heb. 3:7-19). As the Apostle Paul expressed it: “Whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning”. (Rom. 15:4).
4. The often recurring expression, “He did evil in the sight of the LORD”, (e.g., 2 Kings 17:2), is history, but it is also a moral judgment from the divine point-of-view. Again, the distinction between “spiritual insight” and “historical trustworthiness” is an abstraction not borne out by the record itself.
5. It is questionable whether the Biblical writers were always, or necessarily, given “moral and spiritual insight.”
 - a) Jonah received revelations from God, yet “it displeased Jonah exceedingly, and he was very angry . . . I do well to be angry, even unto death.” (Jonah 4:1-9).
 - b) Daniel was also the recipient of revelation but the meaning was not fully revealed to him. “The words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end.” (Dan. 12:9).
 - c) Peter stated that the prophets did not fully understand what they wrote. "Of which salvation the prophets have inquired and searched diligently . . . searching what, or what manner of time the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow . . ." (1 Pet. 1:10,11).

¹ Instead of Scripture dictating what human thoughts ought to be, human thoughts are elevated by partial inspirationists to the position of deciding what is human and what is divine in the records. A partly divine and partly human Bible would only be of value if the human mind were sufficiently enlightened and infallible to distinguish between the human and divine parts.

6. It is desirable for the Christadelphian to be able to mount a sustained offence when a "partial inspirationist" is encountered. All too often the Christadelphian is put on the defensive and his inability to explain all difficulties is taken as evidence that no explanation is possible. A discussion of this sort does not do justice to the case the Bible presents for itself. Scripture teaches a doctrine of inspiration just as it contains a doctrine of baptism, resurrection and the kingdom.
7. The following evidence provides ammunition for the Christadelphian arsenal: (Since many religionists reverence Jesus it is usually advantageous to begin with this common ground.)
 - a) Jesus quoted the Old Testament as completely authoritative and definitive. In so doing, he never once regarded the authority of the Law, Prophets, or Psalms as in any way dependent upon the personality of the human writers, or on the conditions under which they wrote.¹
 - b) Jesus cited the Old Testament in such a way as to establish its inspiration as infallible, (without error) verbal, (applying to the words used to convey the message) and plenary (extending to all parts alike). For example:
 - i. Jesus answered the Jews, "Is it not written in your law, I said Ye are gods? If he called them gods, unto whom the word of God came, and the scripture cannot be broken . . ." (Jn. 10:34,35). Jesus argued on the basis of one word in this quotation from Psalms 82:6. He further affirms that Scripture "cannot be broken".
 - ii. Jesus equated what Moses said with what God said:
 Mk. 7:10 "Moses said, Honour thy father and thy mother
 . . ."
 Mk. 7:9,10 "Full well ye reject the commandment of God
 . . ." (also vs. 13, "the word of God")
 Similarly —
 Mk. 12:26,27 "Have ye not read in the book of Moses
 . . . ?"
 Mt. 22:31,32 "But . . . have ye not read that which was spoken unto you by God?"
 - c) The frequency with which Jesus cited Old Testament Scripture and the authority which he gave to it can be shown from the following passages:
 —Mt. 4:4,7,10 "It is written . . ." (citing Deut. 8:3; 6:16; 6:13)
 —Mt. 19:4-6 "Have ye not read . . ." (citing Gen. 1:27; 2:24)

¹ This point is especially noteworthy in terms of the modern interest in hermeneutics, (i.e., the interpretation of Scripture giving consideration to the environment and cultural conditions thought to influence the author's work).

- Mk. 12:10,11 “Have ye not read this scripture . . .” (citing Psalm 118: 22,23)
- Mk. 12:35,36 “David himself said by the Holy Spirit . . .” (citing Psalm 110:1)
- Lk. 4:18-21 “This day is this scripture fulfilled . . .” (citing Isa. 61:1,2)
- Lk. 16:31 “If they hear not Moses and the prophets . . .”
- Lk. 22:37 “This that is written must yet be accomplished in me . . .” (citing Isa. 53:12)
- Lk. 24:25 “O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken . . .” (see also vs. 26,27)
- Lk. 24:44 “All things must be fulfilled, which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the psalms, concerning me.”

d) Four points illustrate the position of the Apostle Paul on inspiration:

- i. Paul wrote, “Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made, He saith not, And to seeds as of many, but as of one, and to thy seed, which is Christ.” (Gal. 3:16). Paul is arguing his case on the basis of one word from the Old Testament. (Gen. 13:15).
- ii. Paul asserts that “All scripture is given by inspiration of God . . .” (2 Tim. 3:16,17). By inspiration, Paul means “God-breathed” Scripture.¹
- iii. Quotations from Moses, the Psalms and Prophets are considered authoritative pronouncements. For example, compare the following:
 - Rom. 15: 9 from Psalms 118:1-9
 - Rom. 15:10 from Deut. 32:43
 - Rom. 15:11 from Psalms 117:1
 - Rom. 15:12 from Isaiah 40:3-5
- iv. Rom. 9:17—“For the Scripture saith unto Pharaoh, even for this same purpose have I raised thee up, that I might shew my power in thee, and that my name might be declared throughout all the earth.” The Scripture cannot literally “say”. God said this, (Exod. 9:16) and Scripture reliably records it.

e) New Testament writers consider the Holy Spirit to be the author of Old Testament passages:²

¹ “Inspiration” is translated from the Greek word, “theopneustos”, which means, “God-breathed”. Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965). In reading poetry one might feel “inspired”, but this is not what the Apostle means when he states the Scriptures are inspired. The Scriptures are inspired because of their divine origin which makes their inspiration independent of the way in which they might affect any given reader.

² The writer to the Hebrews expresses the abiding authority of Scripture in his citation of the words of Psalms 95:7-11 and Jeremiah 31:33. He cites these passages using the present tense—“The Holy Spirit saith, (not said)” (Heb. 3:7). Likewise, the “Holy Spirit bears [not bore] witness to us”. (Heb. 10:15, cf. R.S.V.).

- i. Heb. 3:7—"The Holy Spirit saith . . . " quoting Psa. 95: 7-11.
 - ii. Heb. 10:15—"The Holy Spirit also is a witness to us; for after that he had said before . . . " quoting Jer. 31:33,34.
 - iii. See also Acts 1:16 — "The Holy Spirit by the mouth of David spake . . . " Psa. 69:25; 109:8.
 - iv. Acts 28:25 — "Well spake the Holy Spirit by Esaias the prophet . . . " citing Isa. 6:9,10.
8. The prophets when inspired by God were at times compelled to speak what they spoke. Their human reactions were sometimes either to refrain from speaking or to utter words other than those directed by God. Two prophets serve as examples:
- a) Balaam—"If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, I cannot go beyond the word of the LORD my God, to do less or more . . . have I now any power at all to say any thing? the word that God putteth in my mouth, that shall I speak." (Num. 22:18,38).¹
 - b) Jeremiah—"Then I said, I will not make mention of him, nor speak any more in his name. But his word was in mine heart as a burning fire shut up in my bones, and I was weary with forbearing, and I could not stay." (Jer. 20:9).
9. The "partial" inspiration position outlined in the problem has resulted in skepticism and barrenness. The epitaph of such theologies has already been written by Amos: "They shall wander from sea to sea, and from the north even to the east; they shall run to and fro to seek the word of the LORD, and shall not find it." (Amos 8:12). A spirit of unconcern about doctrine has resulted since on so many issues it is thought to be anyone's guess as to what is true. Perplexities about the Holy Scriptures have discouraged lay reading of the Bible and the idea has spread that the Bible is a book full of pitfalls which only the learned can hope to avoid. Sometimes it is considered virtuous to censure predecessors for being too definite and dogmatic. New thought is complimented as being open-minded, flexible, and free from obscurantism. It should be noted that those who are "tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine" (Eph. 4:14) and "ever learning and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth" (2 Tim. 3:7) are not commended in the New Testament.

1 COR. 7:25 "Now concerning virgins I have no commandment of the Lord: yet I give my judgment, as one that hath obtained mercy of the Lord to be faithful."

PROBLEM: This verse is interpreted by the clergy of the Anglican and United Churches to mean that Paul is giving a personal opinion which may or may not be the right advice. Therefore, it is argued, the Bible cannot be plenary (fully, completely) inspired.

¹ See also Ezek. 2:7. To put words in someone's mouth is to tell him exactly what to say. (See, for example, 2 Sam. 14:2,3,19).

SOLUTION:

1. Paul's point is not that he is giving advice which may, or may not be right, but that he cannot quote the Lord Jesus as having already pronounced on this subject. Notice the context:
 - a) Verse 10—"And unto the married I command, yet not I, but the Lord, Let not the wife depart from her husband." (Paul refers to the Master's teaching in Matt. 19.) Paul then deals with a matter concerning which the Lord has made no particular pronouncement. So he says, "I have no commandment of the Lord: yet I give my judgment, as one that hath obtained mercy of the Lord to be faithful."
 - b) Verse 40—"I think also that [as well as others] I have the Spirit of God." Paul points out that although there was no specific commandment of the Lord he can be trusted.
2. The Apostle Paul, in 1 Cor. 14:37 sets forth his claim to Holy Spirit guidance as a criterion by which other claimants to Spirit possession might be judged: "If any man think himself to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things that I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord."
3. Plenary inspiration affirms that "all scripture is given by inspiration of God". (2 Tim. 3:16). It does not assert that statements made by wicked men and recorded in Scripture are inspired, but only that their statements are recorded because God in His wisdom chose such to be the case for the reader's learning and admonition. (Rom. 15:4; 1 Cor. 10:11). It is inspired that such should be recorded.

"NON-PROPOSITIONAL" REVELATION

PROBLEM: Most of the clergy of the United and Anglican Churches (Episcopalian in the U.S.A. and the Church of England in the U.K.) hold the following view of revelation expressed by William Temple:

"There are truths of revelation, that is to say propositions which express the results of correct thinking concerning revelation, but they are not themselves directly revealed."¹

God is viewed as revealing Himself by illuminating chosen observers of "significant events" so that they perceived what the events meant in terms of the divine character and plan. The events, therefore, are considered to gain revelatory status through the divine enlightenment (i.e., through the observer's heightened intuitive and reflective capacities, and sharpened moral and spiritual perceptions). Revelation is not considered to be the act of God communicating words, i.e., propositions. This view of revelation is sometimes referred to as "non-propositional".

SOLUTION:

1. The non-propositional view of revelation destroys Biblical faith which honours God in trusting what He has said. When Abraham (whom the New Testament sets forth as an example of the man of faith par excellence) believed God, "it was counted unto him for righteousness". (Rom. 4:3; Gal. 3:6 cf. Gen. 15:6). The object of Abraham's faith was a specific promise, a seed which would become as numerous as the stars of heaven. (Gen. 15:1-6). But according to Temple's theory of revelation there never was an objective revelation of promise to Abraham. However, the Abrahamic promise consisted of informative statements, but informative statements are propositional; therefore, revelation is propositional.
2. If revelation is in the event rather than in the interpretation, revelation can be re-shaped according to one's subjective whims. For example, C. Dodd dismisses the divine words of commission which Jeremiah heard (Jer. 1:4-19) as "actual hallucinations".² Dodd's view requires that a "thus saith the Lord" be read as "I feel quite certain that if God spoke He would say . . ."³
3. The view of revelation outlined in the problem nullifies the claim of Scripture for its prophecies. In fact, it must disallow even the claim made in Isaiah, "I am God, and there is none else . . . declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are

1 William Temple, Nature Man and God, (New York: St. Martin's Press, 1934), p. 317.

2 C. Dodd, The Authority of the Bible, (London: Harper, 1958), p. 83.

3 The "death of God" theology is the legitimate offspring of its liberal parents who fed upon such views of the non-objective character of divine revelation.

- not yet done . . . ” (Isa. 46:9,10). It might prove enlightening for such expounders to account for the prophecies concerning the Jew in Deut. 28 and Lev. 26, or Tyre (Ezek. 26), and Babylon (Isa. 13).
4. The non-propositional view of revelation in effect makes Jesus a fraud. If there were no revealed truths, then the statements made by Jesus Christ are not revealed truths. But Jesus claimed to have received revealed truths:
 - a) “My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me . . . ” (Jn. 7:16).
 - b) “I do nothing of myself; but as my Father hath taught me, I speak these things.” (Jn. 8:28).
 - c) “For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak . . . whatsoever I speak therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak.” (Jn. 12:49,50).
 5. Since revelation is not considered to be a direct communication of information, (in the non-propositional view of revelation), reliance is usually placed on the “assured results” of criticism. This amounts to a kind of papalism—the “infallibility of the scholars” from whom one can learn the “assured results”.¹ The task of the clergy then becomes that of reconstructing Biblical history (i.e., what really happened). From the Biblical narratives and the reconstruction, assessment is made of the adequacy of the interpretation of history which Biblical writers have recorded. Attempts at reconstruction, from the “modern” point of view square more easily with a naturalistic, evolutionary, anti-miraculous, uniformitarian outlook than it does with belief that Biblical history has been checkered by God revealing information (content) otherwise unknowable.
 6. The Greek word for “reveal” is “apokalupto” which means to “uncover” or “unveil”.² Revelation is the process whereby God disclosed to chosen men things otherwise unknowable. (e.g., Dan. 2:22; 8:27; 10:1; 1 Cor. 2:9,10; Eph. 3:3,4,5; Rev. 1:1).
 7. Revelation is a divine activity, “God . . . hath . . . spoken”. (Heb. 1:1,2). It was a verbal (“hath spoken”) and cumulative (“by the prophets . . . by his Son”). Revelation is not, therefore, a human flash of insight or the emergence of a bright idea.
 8. The chief fallacy in viewing revelation as other than propositional is the assumption that man can read God’s mind, learn his character, guess his motives and predict his movements by unaided brainwork.³ “Modern” theology has yet to learn, “My thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the LORD. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts.” (Psa. 55:8,9). “How unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out! For who hath known the mind of the Lord . . . ? ” (Rom. 11:33,34).

¹ This point is expanded in J. I. Packer, God Hath Spoken: Revelation and the Bible, (London: Hodder and Stoughton, 1965), pp. 12-18.

² Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965).

³ Denial of the Virgin birth of Jesus, his miracles and his bodily resurrection is the end-product of current theological speculations.

ALLEGED CONTRADICTIONS AND INACCURACIES

PRELIMINARY POINTS

1. Many of the alleged contradictions in the Bible do not qualify as such since a contradiction requires an affirmation and denial of the same proposition. The inscriptions on the "cross" are often cited as contradictory. Upon an examination of the accounts in the Gospels, it will be seen that none of the writers denies, what one of the other Gospel writers affirms. The claim that the accounts are contradictory is a spurious one, since the evidence does not satisfy the definition of a contradiction.¹ If, however, one talks about a sun that is always light, yet dark, contradictory statements are made. By definition that which is always light cannot be dark. Nor can one talk about a square circle, since by definition a circle is round and not square. The property of squareness precludes the possibility of a square being a circle.
2. Many of the alleged inaccuracies (between parallel narratives in the Gospels, for example) which are argued against belief in the verbal and infallible inspiration of Scripture, indicate a misunderstanding of the nature of verbal inspiration. Divine penmen were not obliged to record all details of an event. For the purposes of his Gospel, Mark only refers to the healing of one blind man as Jesus left Jericho (Mk. 10:46-52), whereas Matthew includes the healing of two blind men. (Matt. 20:29-34). All writers are selective in the information they record. John commented: "And there are also many other things which Jesus did, the which, if they should be written every one, I suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written." (Jn. 21:25). Similarly, a contemporary "un-inspired" historian may choose to ignore certain data and include others which are relevant to his purpose and classification.
3. Most apparent contradictions are easily resolved by a careful reading of the passages in question in their contexts, and by clearly defining what is, and what is not, said. For example, it is written of both Hezekiah and Josiah that "after him was none like him among all the kings of Judah, nor any that were before him". (2 Kings 18:5; 23:25). As these statements read, they appear contradictory until it is noted in what respect "after him was none like him . . . nor any that were before him". It will be seen that Hezekiah is commended because he trusted, and Josiah because he turned to the LORD. Since mutually exclusive statements are not made, the two statements are not contradictory. The problem is resolved by merely noting precisely what the records do say.
4. In certain instances not all problems may be resolved by a careful reading of the contexts and a clarification of what is, and what is not, claimed by the narratives. Such ought not to be the source of undue embarrassment. The fact that no resolution of a problem is immediately possible is not proof that the right solution is not available. Humility is required that one does not confine the divine inspiration of Scripture to the level of one's intellectual attainments.

¹ Contradiction: "The act of denying the truth of something, or stating the opposite of something . . ." Webster's Illustrated Dictionary, (New York: Books, Inc., 1955).

EXOD. 6:3 "And I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac and unto Jacob, by the name of God Almighty, [Ail Shaddai] but by my new name Jehovah [Yahweh] was I not known to them."

PROBLEM: There is an apparent contradiction between what God says to Moses in this passage and Abraham's use of the divine name in Gen. 14:22. (The divine name, Yahweh, occurs 165 times in Genesis.)

SOLUTION:

1. It is not said that Abraham, Isaac and Jacob did not use the divine name, but that they did not know it. Pharaoh said, "Who is the LORD, [Yahweh] that I should obey his voice to let Israel go? I know not the LORD, neither will I let Israel go." (Exod. 5:2). Pharaoh came to know the power of the name when the Egyptians said, "Let us flee from the face of Israel; for the LORD fighteth for them against the Egyptians." (Exod. 14:25). Yahweh had declared: "The Egyptians shall know that I am the LORD [Yahweh] when I stretch forth mine hand upon Egypt . . ." (Exod. 7:5 cf. also 8:10, 22; 14:18).
 2. The apparent contradiction is resolved once it is seen that Ail Shaddai was the name by which God was known to the patriarchs and although "Yahweh" was in use, the import of the name was not known in the way in which God was about to manifest Himself to Israel.
-

EXOD. 33:11 "And the LORD spake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend . . ."

EXOD. 33:20 " . . . Thou canst not see my face: for there shall no man see me, and live."

PROBLEM: These two references are cited as contradictions in the Bible. The one verse says that God spoke to Moses face to face and yet nine verses later the writer says that no man can see God's face and live.

SOLUTION:

1. Moses did not see Yahweh (the LORD) literally "face to face". This is indicated by the following New Testament passages:
 - a) "[God] who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see . . ." (1 Tim. 6:16).

- b) "Now unto the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God . . ." (1 Tim. 1:17 cf. Heb. 11:27).
 - c) "No man hath seen God at any time . . ." (Jn. 1:18).
2. It is clear from Stephen's exposition in Acts 7 that Moses spoke face to face with God's accredited representative, an angel, and not to God, Himself. Note these verses:
 - a) vs. 30—"there appeared to him . . . an angel"
 - b) vs. 35—"the angel which appeared to him in the bush"
 - c) vs. 38—"the angel which spake to him in the mount Sina"
 - d) vs. 53—"who have received the law by the disposition of angels" (cf. Gal. 3:19 "ordained by angels")
 3. The principle of "God-manifestation" is illustrated in Exodus 33, and elaborated in Stephen's commentary in Acts 7. When God acts through accredited representatives, the work is accomplished by God although executed by chosen messengers. An example is recorded in Exod. 23:20,21: "Behold, I send an Angel before thee, [Israel,] to keep thee in the way, and to bring thee into the place which I have prepared. Beware of him, and obey his voice, provoke him not; for he will not pardon your transgressions: for my name is in him." Moses, therefore, conversed with an angelic messenger, "face to face" and not with the invisible Creator who dwells in light unapproachable by mortal man.
 4. God-manifestation in the angel which spoke unto Moses is illustrated in Acts 7 in the shift from "an angel" (vs. 30), to "the voice of the Lord" (vs. 31), and "then said the Lord to him". (vs. 33).

1 SAM. 15:35 "And Samuel came no more to see Saul until the day of his death . . ."

1 SAM. 19:24 . . . "[Saul] . . . prophesied before Samuel . . ."

PROBLEM: If the Bible is an inspired record from God, how are these two passages (apparently contradictory) to be explained?

SOLUTION:

1. A contradiction requires an affirmation and denial of the same proposition. The two passages are not the same proposition. One says Samuel came no more to see Saul, but this is not the same as saying Samuel saw Saul no more.
2. When Saul prophesied before Samuel, the narrative makes it clear that it was Saul who went to Ramah where Samuel lived (1 Sam. 19:22,23), and not Samuel who went to see Saul.

1 KINGS 15:14 "But the high places were not removed . . ."

2 CHRON. 14:5 "Also he [Asa] took away out of all the cities of Judah the high places and the images . . ."

PROBLEM: These two passages are cited as contradictions in the Bible. The one passage says that the high places were not removed. The other passage says they were removed.

SOLUTION:

1. In I Kings 15:14 and 2 Chron. 15:17 the reference is to the complete removal of the high places. Notice 2 Chron. 15:17 says the high places were not taken out of Israel. This implies that in Judah, where the King had authority,¹ the high places were removed, but in Israel where he did not have control, the high places remained.
2. Asa, therefore, took away out of all the cities of Judah the high places and the images (2 Chron. 14:5), but was unable to complete his reform in Israel, hence: "But the high places were not taken away out of Israel . . ." (2 Chron. 15:17). The allusion might also be to the high places not removed in the country areas as distinct from the cities of Judah.

2 KINGS 18:5 "He [Hezekiah] trusted in the LORD God of Israel; so that after him was none like him among all the kings of Judah, nor any that were before him."

2 KINGS 23:25 "And like unto him [Josiah] was there no king before him, that turned to the LORD with all his heart, and with all his soul, and with all his might, according to all the law of Moses; neither after him arose there any like him."

PROBLEM: It is argued that mutually exclusive statements are made, therefore, both statements cannot be true. Both kings cannot "be like no other king before or after" in the same respect.

SOLUTION:

1. A careful reading is all that is necessary to indicate that there is no contradiction. Hezekiah is commended because he "trusted", 2 Kings 18:5. Josiah is commended because he "turned", 2 Kings 23:25. Mutually exclusive statements are not made.
2. It is also noteworthy that David is the rule by which the later kings are evaluated, e.g., 1 Kings 11:33,38; 14:8. He is, therefore, excluded from comparative statements about Josiah and Hezekiah, that "like unto him was there no king before him."

¹ A state of war existed between Asa, King of Judah, and Baasha, King of Israel (I Kings 15:32), as there had been between Abijam, King of Judah (the father of Asa) and Jeroboam, King of Israel. (I Kings 15:7).

THE DEATH OF JEHOIAKIM

2 KINGS 24:6 *"So Jehoiakim slept with his fathers . . ."*¹

2 CHRON. 36:6 "Against him came up Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and bound him in fetters, to carry him to Babylon."

JER. 22:18,19 "He shall be buried with the burial of an ass, drawn and cast forth beyond the gates of Jerusalem."

JER. 36:30 " . . . and his dead body shall be cast out in the day to the heat, and in the night to the frost."

EZEK. 19:9 *"And they put him in ward in chains, and brought him to the king of Babylon: they brought him into holds, that his voice should no more be heard upon the mountains of Israel."*²

PROBLEM: It is argued that these passages are apparently contradictory since Jehoiakim is said to be carried off to Babylon and yet cast beyond the gates of Jerusalem.

SOLUTION:

The passages are capable of being harmonized. Consider the following:

- a) Jehoiakim was captured by Nebuchadnezzar and taken to Nebuchadnezzar's headquarters near Jerusalem, (but not to Babylon).
- b) Jehoiakim was put in a cage and bound in fetters to be carried to Babylon. (None of the passages asserts that he was actually taken to Babylon.)
- c) Jehoiakim died before leaving for Babylon³ so his body was dumped outside the walls of Jerusalem.⁴

MATT. 2:1 " . . . Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judaea in the days of Herod the king . . ."

LUKE 2:4 "And Joseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judaea unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem . . ."

PROBLEM: Matthew indicates that Mary and Joseph lived at Bethlehem, but Luke says that they returned to Bethlehem for the census. Therefore, it is argued, there is an apparent discrepancy.

1 In Scripture, "he slept with his fathers" means "he died". See, for example: 2 Kings 13:9,13; 14:16; 15:7,38.

2 Although Jehoiakim is not specifically mentioned it is almost certain that he is the one to whom Ezekiel refers.

3 Perhaps he died from exposure while awaiting transportation to Babylon. It has been suggested that the A.V. of 2 Chron. 36:8 "Now the rest of the acts of Jehoiakim, and his abominations which he did, and that which was found in him" be read literally, "that which was found upon him." The abomination upon him might refer to extraordinary tattooing which would explain why he would be put into a cage and transported as a museum piece to Babylon.

4 This would serve as a further humiliation to the Jews.

SOLUTION:

1. Jesus' birth in Bethlehem is no more proof that his parents lived there, than the statement that "I was born at sea" implies that mine lived in a ship.
 2. A reading of Luke 2:1-7 shows that while at Bethlehem for the census, Jesus was born. Mary had lived at Nazareth in Galilee before the journey to Bethlehem. (Lk. 1:26,27).
-

MATT. 17:1 "And after six days Jesus taketh Peter, James, and John his brother, and bringeth them up into an high mountain apart."

MARK 9:2 This is the same as Matthew's account.

LUKE 9:28 "And it came to pass about an eight days after these sayings, he took Peter and John and James, and went up into a mountain to pray."

PROBLEM: If the Bible is indeed an inspired revelation of God to man, then why the discrepancy between the numbers of days in Matthew, Mark, and Luke?

SOLUTION:

1. Notice that Luke says "about"—an approximation.
 2. There are several ways of accounting for the difference in the number of days. The most probable one is that Luke uses the Jewish method of counting in which case he would count the remaining part of the day on which Jesus spoke(see vs. 27) as one day, as well as the early part of the day before they went up into the mountain. These two days, plus the intervening six of Matthew and Mark's record, account for the eight days.
-

MATT. 19:16 " . . . Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life?"

MARK 10:17 and LUKE 18:18 " . . . Good Master, what shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?"

PROBLEM: It is argued that the Bible cannot be verbally inspired since the gospel writers do not quote the same words in the dialogue between Jesus and the young man.

SOLUTION:

1. Verbal inspiration does not require a writer to record a complete conversation unless this is essential to the purpose of the record.
2. The Biblical doctrine of inspiration requires the writers to faithfully record the information selected, although for the purpose of the narrative only a section of a dialogue may be reproduced. The complete request of the rich young man may have been: "Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may inherit eternal life?"

MATT. 20:29-34 "And as they departed from Jericho, a great multitude followed him. And, behold, two blind men . . . cried out . . . so Jesus had compassion on them, and touched their eyes: and immediately their eyes received sight, and they followed him."

MARK 10:46-52 "And they came to Jericho: and as he went out of Jericho . . . blind Bartimaeus . . . began to cry out . . . And Jesus said unto him, Go thy way; thy faith hath made thee whole."

LUKE 18:35-43 "And it came to pass, that as he was come nigh unto Jericho, a certain blind man . . . cried, saying, Jesus, thou Son of David, have mercy on me . . . And Jesus said unto him, Receive thy sight: thy faith hath saved thee."

- PROBLEM:
- (a) In Matthew's account two blind men are healed, whereas in the accounts of Mark and Luke only one blind man is mentioned.
 - (b) Matthew and Mark place the healing when Jesus was departing from Jericho, whereas Luke places the healing when Jesus was coming to Jericho.

SOLUTION:

1. If two blind men were healed, then certainly one was healed. The Gospel writers did not include all that Jesus did and said. (cf. Jn. 21:25).
2. It is perfectly possible that Jesus healed "a certain blind man" as he was come nigh to Jericho (Luke's account), and then healed two more blind men (one of whom was blind Bartimaeus, Mark's account) as he was leaving Jericho.

MATT. 27:6,7 "And the chief priests took the silver pieces, . . . and they took counsel, and bought with them the potter's field to bury strangers in."

ACTS 1:18 "Now this man [Judas] purchased a field with the reward of iniquity . . ."

- PROBLEM: If the Bible is a divinely inspired record, why does Matthew state that the chief priests bought the field, whereas in the Acts account, Judas is said to have purchased the field?

SOLUTION: There are two possible solutions:

1. Two different purchases are involved. The word for "field" in Matthew's account is "agros",¹ which is the usual word for field in the New Testament. The chief priests purchased this field with the 30 pieces of silver. Judas purchased a different field a "little space or place", (Greek: chóron).² The money for this purchase need not have come from the 30 pieces of silver, but from the money Judas had stolen from the bag. (Jn. 12:6). The account merely states that the field was purchased "with the reward of iniquity" without specifying where the money came from.

¹ Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965).

² Ibid.

2. "This man purchased a field" might be elliptical for the more lengthy explanation that the money Judas had obtained from the betrayal of the Master was used to purchase a field, although the actual transaction was effected by the chief priests. In everyday speech ellipses of this kind are used. The emphasis in Acts lies in the fact that the field purchased by Judas' money was obtained by the reward of iniquity.

MATT. 27:37 "And set up over his head his accusation written, THIS IS JESUS THE KING OF THE JEWS."

MARK 15:26 "And the superscription of his accusation was written over, THE KING OF THE JEWS."

LUKE 23:38 "And a superscription also was written over him in letters of Greek, and Latin, and Hebrew, THIS IS THE KING OF THE JEWS."

JOHN 19:19 "And Pilate wrote a title, and put it on the cross. And the writing was, JESUS OF NAZARETH THE KING OF THE JEWS."

PROBLEM: It is argued that the Bible cannot be verbally inspired since the Gospel writers do not quote the same superscription on the cross.

SOLUTION:

1. Verbal inspiration does not require the writers of the Gospels to record the complete inscription unless such would be relevant to the purpose of their Gospels.
2. There is no contradiction in the words of the inscription. This can be seen by the following comparison:

Matt. 27:37—THIS IS JESUS	THE KING OF THE JEWS
---------------------------	----------------------

Mark 15:26—	THE KING OF THE JEWS
-------------	----------------------

Luke 23:38—THIS IS	THE KING OF THE JEWS
--------------------	----------------------

John 19:19—JESUS OF NAZARETH	THE KING OF THE JEWS
------------------------------	----------------------

The complete superscription probably read: "THIS IS JESUS OF NAZARETH THE KING OF THE JEWS."

MATT. 28:7 " . . . he [Christ] goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him . . . "

LUKE 24:33 "And they rose up the same hour, and returned to Jerusalem, and found the eleven gathered together, and them that were with them."

PROBLEM: There is an apparent contradiction, for how could the disciples be in both Galilee and Jerusalem at the same time?

SOLUTION:

1. Neither passage implies that the disciples were to be in Galilee and Jerusalem at the same time.
 2. Jesus was forty days upon the earth after his resurrection (Acts 1:3). Since it is not more than a two or three day's journey between Galilee and Jerusalem, appearances in both places are perfectly possible.
-

MARK 2:26 “ . . . [David] went into the house of God in the days of Abiathar the high priest, and did eat the shewbread, which is not lawful to eat . . . ”

1 SAM. 21:1-6 “Then came David to Nob to Ahimelech the priest . . . so the priest gave him hallowed bread . . . ”

PROBLEM: Mark quotes Jesus as saying that Abiathar was the high priest, but the account in Samuel to which James refers, says that Ahimelach was the high priest. Therefore, it is argued, one, or both accounts, is in error.

SOLUTION:

1. The apparent inaccuracy is resolved once it is realized that Abiathar and Ahimelech were names of both father and son. This can be seen by a comparison of the following passages:
 - a) 1 Sam. 14:3—“And Ahiah, [mg. called Ahimelech] the son of Ahitub . . . ”
 - b) 1 Sam. 22:20—“And one of the sons of Ahimelech the son of Ahitub, named Abiathar, escaped, and fled after David.”
 - c) 2 Sam. 8:17—“And Zadok the son of Ahitub, and Ahimelech the son of Abiathar, were the priests . . . ”
 - d) 1 Chron. 18:16; 24:6—same as 2 Sam. 8:17.
2. The following diagram illustrates the point:

Ahitub (1 Sam. 14:3)	Ahitub (2 Sam. 8:17)
father	father
of	of
Ahimelech (1 Sam. 14:3; 22:20)	Abiathar (2 Sam. 8:17; 1 Chron. 18:16)
father	father
of	of
Abiathar (1 Sam. 22:20)	Ahimelech (2 Sam. 8:17; 1 Chron. 18:16; 24:6)

Jesus and the account in Samuel refer to Ahimelech (or Abiathar, his other name), the son of Ahitub. There is, therefore, no inaccuracy. Jesus uses one name, and the Samuel account uses the other name, for the same individual.

Mark 16:7,8 “[Mary Magdalene, Mary, the mother of James, and Salome] . . . tell his disciples and Peter that he goeth before you into Galilee: there shall ye see him, as he said unto you. And they went out quickly, and fled from the sepulchre; for they trembled and were amazed: neither said they any thing to any man; for they were afraid."

LUKE 24:8,9 "And they remembered his words, and returned from the sepulchre, and told all these things unto the eleven, and to all the rest."

PROBLEM: The Mark record says the women said nothing "to any man", and yet the Luke narrative says the women "told all these things unto the eleven and to all the rest". It is argued, therefore, that the two accounts are contradictory.

SOLUTION: The apparent contradiction is resolved by the following:

1. The Lord's first appearance was to one woman only—Mary Magdalene. (Jn. 20:13-17; cf. Mrk. 16:9).
2. The other women had only seen the bodiless tomb with a young man in it. As these women were on their way to tell the disciples, ("with fear and great joy"), they were met by Jesus. (Matt. 28:9). It was Jesus who further encouraged the women to tell the news to the disciples. (Matt. 28:10). Until this encounter with Jesus, they had not said "any thing to any man; for they were afraid".

THE CLEANSING OF THE TEMPLE

JOHN 2:13-16 “ . . . Take these things hence; make not my Father's house an house of merchandise.”

MATT. 21-12,13 “ . . . My house shall be called the house of prayer; but ye have made it a den of thieves.”

PROBLEM: Since John places the cleansing of the temple at the beginning of Christ's ministry, and Matthew, and the other Gospels, place it at the end of his ministry, it is argued that the compilations of the Gospels could not have been divine.

SOLUTION:

1. It is true that John places the cleansing at the beginning of Christ's ministry and the other Gospels place it just prior to the crucifixion. The reason for this is that there were two, and not just one, cleansing of the temple.
2. A comparison of the contexts of these two passages indicates the contrast in events preceding and following the temple cleansings. In John's Gospel the cleansing occurs at the beginning of Christ's miracles at Cana of Galilee. (Jn. 2:11). Jesus journeyed from Capernaum to Jerusalem in this Gospel. The cleansing is then followed by the Jews' request for a sign. In Mathew's Gospel, Jesus comes to Jerusalem from Judea beyond Jordan (Matt. 19:1), and enters Jerusalem on an ass to the cries of “Hosanna” from the populace. (Matt. 21:9). The cleansing of the temple is then followed by the cursing of the fig tree. (Matt. 21:18,19). It follows, therefore, that two different cleansings occurred.
3. It is appropriate that the cleansing of the temple at the end of Christ's ministry should prohibit the carrying of vessels in the temple: “And [he] would not suffer that any man should carry any vessel through the temple.” (Mk. 11:16). The outer court of the temple was called “The Court of the Gentiles.” It was a large open area, the only area of the temple to which the Gentiles had access. But this area had become a shortcut route for persons travelling to and from the north end of the city. The prohibition of Jesus was in effect a symbolic declaration that the outer court was also holy, and that the Gentile as well as the Jew was now acceptable before God. There was to be “neither Jew nor Greek, neither bond nor free”—all the baptized were to be “one in Christ Jesus”. (Gal. 3:28).

JAMES 1:13 “ . . . God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man.”

GEN. 22:1 “ . . . God did tempt Abraham . . .”

PROBLEM: Apparently contradictory statements are made since James says God tempts no man, and yet in Genesis God is said to have tempted Abraham.

SOLUTION:

1. The Greek word "peirazó" and its Hebrew equivalent, "nasah" carry the meaning of "to try, prove",¹ as well as to "tempt". The R.S.V. translators preserve the distinction between "test" and "tempt", thereby removing the confusion: "After these things God tested Abraham . . ." (Gen. 22:1, R.S.V.).
2. The R.S.V. also makes a distinction in James 1:2,3 between "trial" and "temptation": "Count it all joy, my brethren, when you meet various trials [temptations, A.V.], for you know that the testing of your faith produces steadfastness." This translation is in harmony with a similar point made by Peter. (cf. 1 Pet. 1:6,7).
3. Similarly, an apparent contradiction exists between James 1:13 and Psa. 78:18,56; 95:9; 106:14, but in each of these O.T. references the R.S.V. renders the Hebrew word "nasah" by "tested" rather than "tempted", (as does the A.V.).

¹ Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Holy Bible, (London: Lutterworth Press, 1965). According to Young, "nasah" is rendered in the A.V. 20 times "prove" and 12 times "tempt". "Peirazó" is rendered in the A.V. 4 times "try" and 29 times "tempt".

INDEX

GENESIS

	PAGE		PAGE
1	185, 190, 228	6:9	171
	209, 229	6:13	83, 130, 202
1:1	216	6:14	143
1:1, 2	212	7:12	228
1:2	201	7:21	130
1:3	190	7:21, 22	111
1:3	175	7:23	116
1:3-5	216	8:2	228
1:5	228, 229	8:21	44
1:6	227	8:22	215
1:11, 13	229	9:4	66, 105
1:16	216	11:5	45, 191
1:16, 17	116	12:3	172, 173
1:16-19	216	13:10	118
1:24-31	229	13:14, 15	70
1:26	187, 198, 199, 202	13:15	82, 83, 128, 233
1:27	232	14:22	239
1:31	218, 228	15:1-6	236
2	229	15:6	236
2:2, 3	40	15:13	83
2:3	228	15:18	82
2:4	229	16:7	198, 199
2:5	16, 230	16:13	198, 199
2:7	138	17:5	70
2:8	119, 124, 171	17:8	70
2:9-14	217	18:2, 22	187
2:16, 17	143	18:21	45, 191
2:20	230	19:1, 8	113
2:24	232	19:1, 15	187
3	183	19:24	134, 135
3:1	165, 216, 217	19:24, 25	173
3:4	217	22:1	248, 249
3:4, 5	164	22:8, 11, 15, 16	198, 199
3:12	165	25:8	108
3:13	165	26:5	143
3:14	165, 217	26:8	229
3:15	205, 218	28:18	75
3:20	83, 202	28:22	75
3:22	103	30:27	148
4:3	229	32:1, 2	188
4:10	26, 115	32:24	113, 187
4:14	229	32:30	188
4:16	167	35:11	69, 70
4:16, 17	230	35:12	70
4:26	166	35:18	103
5:4	230	38:12	229
5:5	229	39:5	172
5:24	129	39:5, 6	148
6:2	165, 166	49:24	68
6:4	166	49:26	132

EXODUS

3:2	187	7:1	198, 199, 206
3:4-8	187	7:5	239
3:7, 8	45, 191, 204	8:10, 22	239
3:8, 12	83	9:16	233
3:14	194	12:17	132
4:19	104	12:48, 49	67
5:2	239	13:21	129
6:3	239	14:18	239

	PAGE		PAGE
14:19	129	22:8, 9	198, 199
14:25	239	22:9, 28	206
19:5, 6	100	22:28	198, 199
19:11	204	23:20, 21	65, 186, 197, 198, 199, 240
19:11, 18, 20	191	23:21	188
19:18, 20	204	25:19, 20	172
20:1	187	31:15	40
20:2	231	31:17	40, 228
20:3	42, 187	32	183
20:4, 5	42	33	240
20:4-17	23	33:9	204
20:5	187	33:11	239
20:7	42	33:18-23	213
20:8	42	33:19	194
20:11	228	33:20	239
20:12	42	34:5	129, 191, 204
20:13	42	34:5-7	213
20:14	42	34:28	41
20:15	42	37:7-9	172
20:16	42	39	109
20:17	42	39:2, 24, 29	109
21:2-6	182, 209	39:10-14	172
21:6	132, 188, 198, 199	39:14	172
21:23	104	40:15	132
21:30	104

LEVITICUS

3:17	66	20:6	26
4:7	115	23	63
9	120	23:6	229
10:1, 2	134, 135	23:10	63
10:2	173	23:17	63, 64
12:3	40	23:40	64
17:10	67	26	60, 183, 237
17:11	105, 115	26:14-39	83
19:31	105	26:33, 34, 35, 43	95

NUMBERS

3:5-10	204	16:22	113
8:9-19	204	16:31-33	180
9:15, 16	129	16:35	134, 135
13:33	166	22:18, 38	234
14:21	78, 131, 206	22:22	162
15:32	27	22:28	217
15:34	41	23:19	50
16	180, 183	27:16	113
16:2	180	28:6	216
16:9	180	28:9, 10	40
16:10	180	31:21	39
16:10, 38	180

DEUTERONOMY

4:2	18	9:10	98
4:10	98	10:4	98
4:13	41	10:13	118
5:3	41	11:8, 13, 28	118
5:15	40	11:24	83
6:6	118	12:23	105
6:13	232	14:1	166, 167, 180
6:16	232	14:21	67
7:11	118	18:16	98
8:1	118	18:18	83
8:3	232	18:18, 19	142

	PAGE		PAGE
19:17	167	29:29	129, 168
21:17	202	32:43	233
28	60, 183, 237	33:13-15	25
28:1-14	83	33:15	24, 25
28:15-68	83	33:15, 27	132
29:23	132, 134, 135	34:5	116

JOSHUA

1:3	83	21:43	82
6:2, 4	160	21:45	82
10:13	218	23:6, 12	39
10:28	19	23:14	82, 83
15:8	133	23:15, 16	83
19:9	72	24:2	108

JUDGES

8:26	109	16:23	188
9:7-15	108

RUTH

4:11	146
------------	-----

1 SAMUEL

14:3	246	28	104
15:35	240	28:12	104
19:22, 23	240	28:14	104
19:24	240	28:15	104
21:1-6	246	28:15-19	104
22:20	246	28:19	104
25:1	104

2 SAMUEL

5:11	171	8:17	246
7	73	12:22, 23	146
7:12, 13, 16	78	14:2, 3, 19	234
7:12-14	73	24:1	162
7:14	202

1 KINGS

2:4	73	12:17	72
2:11	69	12:32, 33	216
5:1, 6, 7, 10	171	13	105
5:1-12	172	14:8	241
5:12, 17, 18	171	15:7	241
8:9, 21	41	15:14	240, 241
8:11	129	15:32	241
11:14	162	17:10	27
11:33	188	17:21	105
11:33, 38	241	17:21-23	145

2 KINGS

1:10	134, 135	18:5	238, 241
2:11	116	20:5	119
3:10, 11	116	23:10	133
6:6	27	23:25	238, 241
13:9, 13	242	24:6	242
14:16	242	24:8	85
15:7, 38	242	24:15, 17	75
17:2	231	25:7	76
17:6	69, 70	25:27-30	85

	PAGE		PAGE
1 CHRONICLES
3:16	85	11:4, 5, 7	78
5:1	202	16:30	207
9:1	69	18:16	246
9:3	69	21:1	162
10:13, 14	104	24:6	246
11:4, 5	78, 81, 84	28:5	78
2 CHRONICLES
11:3	72	21:2, 3	202
11:13, 16	72	28:3	133
11:16, 17	72	30:13	98
14:5	240, 241	31:3	39
15:9	72	33:6	133
15:17	241	36:6	242
19:6	167	36:8	242
21:1, 9-12	116
EZRA
1:5	71	2:62	182
2:1	71	6:16, 17	71
2:61, 62	208	8:35	71
NEHEMIAH
1:2	69	7:73	69
2:1	69	9:8	82, 83
2:10	69	9:13	204
5:1, 8, 17	69	13:19	43
ESTHER
2:7	208	8:15	109
8:8, 9	70
JOB
1	162	10:18, 19	146
1:6	166, 167	14:5	216
1:7	167	19:21	168
1:12	167	34:14, 15	111
2:7	167	38:7	166, 167
2:10	168	38:8-11	215
3:11-13	146	42:11	168
3:17	104
PSALMS
2:6	120	40:6-8	208
2:8	93	41:13	199
5:4	184	45:6	189, 206
5:4, 5	167	45:16	61, 189
8:5	188	47:5	204
16:10	12, 108, 114	48:1, 2	25
18:9, 10	191	49:19, 20	147
18:49	233	50:5	141
22:12, 13	178	55:8, 9	237
33:6	212	57:4	178
33:6, 9	190	68:17, 31-35	204
36:7	172	68:18	203, 204
37:9	133	69:25	234
37:10	133	72	84
37:9, 34	131	72:1-8	202
37:11, 22, 29	128	72:4, 12-14	78
40:6	114, 182	78:18, 56	249

	PAGE		PAGE
82:1, 6	198, 199	103:20, 21	166
82:6	167, 180, 206, 232	104:5	207
88:5	147	104:8, 9	215
89:7	142	104:19	216
89:26	202	106:14	249
89:27	201	107:20	190
89:35-37	202	109:8	234
91:4	172	110:1	84, 87, 233
92:7	20	110:1, 2	98
93:1	207	110:2	84
95:7-11	233, 234	110:2, 5, 6	97
95:8	229	115:16	19, 116, 120
95:9	249	117:1*	233
102	207	118:22, 23	233
102:13	134	119:130	141
102:13-16	207	125:1, 2	25
102:18	171, 207	146:3, 4	123, 131
102:25-27	206	146:4	112, 136, 203
102:26	207	147:15, 18, 19	190
103:20	174, 188	147:19, 20	67

PROVERBS

8:1, 2	190	24:10	229
8:22, 23	190	28:15	178
8:29	215

ECCLESIASTES

1:4	131, 207	9:5, 6	112, 203
3:19, 20	106	9:5, 6, 10	106
3:20	126, 203	9:5, 10	104
9:5	114, 123, 126, 131, 136, 195	12:7	105, 113

ISAIAH

1:26	61	11:9	25, 78, 206
2: -	43	11:10	233
2:14: -	23	13: -	237
2:1	36	14:4	169
2:2, 3	25, 43, 172	14:8	169
2:3	120	14:9, 10	169
2:13	36	14:11	169
3:1	36	14:12	169, 170, 175
3:8	36	14:12-14	168, 175
3:12	37	14:13	169
3:16	36	14:15	169
3:16-24	37	14:16	169
3:17-26	23	14:17	169
3:25	36	14:20	169
4:1	36, 37	22:21-24	189
4:3	36	24:1, 3, 19	43, 44
4:4	37	24:6, 10, 11, 14	43
4:5	36	24:23	43
5:25	23	26:13, 14	149
6:9, 10	234	26:14	22, 147
6:13	23	26:14: 19	38
8:17, 18	189	26:19	138, 149
8:18	114	29: -	26
8:19, 20	26	29:1	26
9:6	186, 188, 189, 206	29:3, 7	26
9:6, 7	82, 96	29:4	25, 26
9:7	188	29:9	26
11: -	189	34:4	27
11:2	212	34:6	135
11:2, 3	30	34:10	135

	PAGE		PAGE
34:11	135	53:10, 11	189
38:10, 17, 18	5	53:12	233
38:18	114	55:11	190
40:6, 7	149	56:7	172
40:17	149	59:20, 21	61
41:22, 23	60	61:1	113
42:1	28	61:1, 2	233
42:6	28	61:2	229
42:6, 7	113	62: -	60
43:3	60	62:2	59
43:10	59	62:4	60
43:10-12	59	62:7	60
43:22, 24	60	64:1	191
43:23	60	65: -	43
45:18	131, 206	65:16	44
46:9, 10	185, 237	65:17	124, 130, 207
51: -	26	65:17-20	43, 96
51:3	118	65: 17-25	78
51:17	26	65:18-25	130
51:19, 23	26	65:19-25	130
51:21	26	66:1	84
51:23	26	66:20	133
52:9	26	66:22	130, 207
53:2	196	66:24	133
53:9	38

JEREMIAH

1:4-19	236	31:33	233
1:5	198	31:33, 34	234
3:8	61	31:35, 36	215
3:12, 13-15	61	32:35	133
4:1-3, 5, 6	44	32:37	60
4:7, 23	44	33:14	73
7:20	134	33:15, 16	74
10:12, 13	190	33:17	73
10:12	212	33:18	73
16:19	29	33:20	215
17:9	162	33:21, 22	73
17:27	134	36:30	242
20:9	234	40:7	76
22:18, 19	242	43:5-7	74
22:29	76	43:7	75
22:30	84	44:2, 6	44
24:1	85	44:8	75
25:15	135	44:12	75
27:5	212	44:14, 28	75
30:12-15, 32-42	146	44:15	75
30:17	146	44:16, 18	75
30:18	61	44:28	75
31:3, 4	146	51:15	212
31:8, 10, 28	146	51:39, 57	38, 149
31:11-13, 16, 21	146	51:53	169
31:13	146	51:53, 57	159
31:15, 16	146	51:57	147
31:15, 18, 28	146	52:5, 7, 8	44
31:16	146	52:15, 16	44
31:20	146	52:16	44
31:31-34	61

LAMENTATIONS

2:1	169	4:6	132, 134, 135
-----	-----	-----	---------------

	PAGE		PAGE
EZEKIEL
2:7	234	28:13-15	170
18:4, 20	19	28:13, 15	171
19:9	242	28:13-18	168, 171, 175
20:40	172	28:14	170, 172
21:26	73, 76	28:14, 15	170
21:26, 27	78, 81	28:15	171
21:27	61, 76, 84	28:16	170
21:30	171	28:17	170
26:-	170, 237	28:18	172, 173
26:2	172	28:18, 19	171
26:14	170	31:2, 3	171
27	170	31:8, 9, 16, 18	171
27:23	171	34:-	80
28:2	170	34:2-4	110
28:2, 9	170	36:-	146
28:3	171	36:35	118, 124
28:4, 5	170, 171, 172	37:-	146
28:5	171	37:19	27
28:10	171	37:21,22	27
28:12	170	38:8, 16	88
28:13	124, 171, 172	44:27	205

DANIEL
2:-	86	7:21, 22	87
2:22	237	7:22, 27	92
2:33	85	7:23-27	86
2:44	85, 86, 92, 96, 120, 124	7:27	19, 124
4:15	87	8:14	57
4:30	169	8:27	237
4:32	173	10:-	124
7:7-9	86	10:1	237
7:10	87	11:40	88
7:12	86	12:1, 2	88
7:13	87, 128	12:2	111, 121, 132, 158
7:14, 27	94	12:2, 3	126
7:18-27	128	12:7	57
7:20	86	12:9	231
7:20, 21	85

HOSEA
1:10	166, 167, 180	3:5	74
3:4	74, 76	12:3, 4	187, 188

JOEL
2:32	88

AMOS
8:12	234	9:13	94
9:11, 12	94	9:15	95

JONAH
2:6	132	4:1-9	231

MICAH
1:4	130	4:1-3	78
3:12	88, 95	4:2	21, 87
4:-	119	4:7	88
4:1,2	87, 119, 130	4:8	84

HABAKKUK
1:13	167, 184	3:6	132, 188
2:14	78, 131, 206, 207

	PAGE		PAGE
ZEPHANIAH
3:8	130	3:9, 10	130

ZECHARIAH
3:2	182	14:4	64, 65, 95
3:4	182	14:4, 5, 9, 14-17	21
9:2	171	14:4, 9, 12-19	96
9:9	90, 92	14:10	65
12:10	66	14:16, 17	44
13:6	66	14:16-18	78
14:1-5	95	14:17	43
14:3	65

MALACHI
2:7	100	4:2	24
3:2	13	4:1-3	13
3:6	20, 50	4:3	133
3 & 4 -	23	4:5	88
4:1	133	4:5, 6	90

MATTHEW
1: -	208	7:22, 23	79, 100, 139
1:1-11	85	7:29	195
1:11-13	75	8:2	201
1:18, 20	185, 186	8:11	64, 90
2:1	29, 114, 242	8:11, 12	142
2:13	106	8:12	131
2:17, 18	146	8:14	14
3:2	89, 90	8:28	178
3:2, 7-10	109	9:2	201
3:5, 6	174	9:14	108
3:9	110	9:18	201
3:15	152	9:32, 33	178
3:16	151, 173, 174, 213	10:5, 6	50
4: -	162	10:6	72
4:1-11	173	10:22	155, 161
4:4, 7, 10	232	10:26	106
4:8	173	10:28	106
4:10	42, 191	10:40	151
4:17	89	10:40-42	80
5:7: -	23	11:10	179, 184
5:4	96	11:11	89, 90
5:5	128	11:12	89
5:12	115	11:14	88, 90
5:21, 22	42	11:23	169
5:27, 28	42	11:28	41
5:34	120	12:5	40
5:34, 35	42	12:14	106
5:35	21, 64, 78, 134	12:18-21	28
5:39	22	12:20	92
5:44	22	12:22	162, 163, 178
5:48	127	12:27	105, 108
6:9	120	12:28	90
6:10	120, 127, 168, 184	12:32	12
6:24	173	12:36	13, 142
6:33	96	12:40	111, 118
7:13, 14	2	12:41	175
7:21	80	12:41, 42	143
7:21-23	47, 53, 159	12:42	231
7:22	13, 80	12:43-45	174

	PAGE		PAGE
12:44	174	21:43	71
12:45	175	22:7	106
13:23	137	22:31	117
13:30, 40-42, 49-50	131	22:31, 32	232
13:39	138	22:32	117
15:19	29	23:13	5
15:24	28, 72	23:23	108
15:27	110	23:28	92
16:16	4	23:33	165
16:18	1, 4, 6	23:35	217
16:19	5	23:37	172
16:21	118	23:37, 38	59, 60
16:22, 23	5	23:39	61
16:23	162	24:3	65
16:25, 26	106	24:13	96, 113
16:27	81, 115, 119, 125, 188, 192	24:20	42
17:1	91, 243	24:24	53
17:3	116	24:26, 27	65
17:9	91, 116	24:30	128, 129
18:1	5, 6	25:21-34	87
18:3, 4	150	25:31	80, 81, 84
18:4	150	25:31, 32	121
18:10, 14	150	25:31, 32, 34, 46	79
18:18	5	25:31, 34, 46	97, 102
19:-	235	25:31-34, 46	138
19:1	248	25:31-46	29, 79, 96, 119,
19:4	1		139, 149, 158
19:4, 5	217, 230	25:33	159
19:4-6	232	25:34	93, 99, 112,
19:12	14		185, 193, 197
19:16	243	25:41-46	159
19:24	80	25:46	131, 138, 140, 158
19:27, 28	9, 78, 80, 120, 149	26:26	10
19:28	78, 80, 99	26:33, 34	9
20:20-23	6	26:39	186, 201, 209
20:23	120	26:64	87
20:29-34	238, 244	27:6, 7	244
21:5, 9	90, 92	27:20	106
21:9	248	27:37	245
21:12, 13	109, 248	28:1	89
21:18, 19	248	28:7	245
21:23	195	28:9	247
21:41	106	28:10	247
21:42	4

MARK

1:13	173	9:1	90
2:26	246	9:2	91, 243
3:11	178	9:17-22	178
3:21	164	9:17-27	163
3:29	12	9:34	6
4:11, 12	107	9:43-48	133
4:28	137	10:6	230
4:34	107	10:14	150
5:1-5	163	10:14, 15	150
5:7, 9	164	10:15	150
5:9	178	10:17	243
5:15	164	10:18	187
7:4	150	10:24	150
7:4, 8	151	10:46-52	238, 244
7:9, 10, 13	232	11:9, 10	90, 92
7:10	232	11:16	248
7:19	21	12:10, 11	233
7:20-23	162	12:26, 27	232

	PAGE		PAGE
12:35, 36	233	16:15	50
15:26	245	16:15, 16	152
16:7, 8	246	16:16	152, 153
16:9	247	16:17, 18	51
16:12	200	16:20	50

LUKE

1:2	190	12:47, 48	131
1:5	212	13:3, 5	159
1:17	88	13:10-17	176
1:26, 27	243	13:11	176
1:31-33	134	13:11-17	163
1:31, 35	20, 185	13:16	176
1:31-35	29, 205	13:22	89
1:32	78, 84	13:24-30	149
1:32, 33	64, 74, 78, 81, 120, 121	13:25-30	159
1:34, 35	186	13:26, 27	159
1:35	191, 192, 193, 204, 208, 211, 212	13:28	64
1:69	137	13:29	90
1:72, 73	92	15:27	66
2:1	147, 202	16	108
2:1-7	243	16:1	107
2:4	242	16:8	171
2:11	118	16:14, 15	108
2:21	185	16:16	89, 109
2:23	147	16:16, 17, 18, 19	109
2:36, 37	72	16:18	110
3	85, 208	16:19-31	105, 107
3:31	85	16:20	109
3:38	166, 167, 180	16:21	109
4:5	173	16:22	107
4:18	213	16:23	107
4:18-21	233	16:22-31	110
4:34, 41	178	16:24	107
6:12	186	16:26	107
6:21	96	16:27	107
7:8	195	16:31	1, 233
7:24, 27	179, 184	17:20, 21	91
7:28	90	17:27	231
7:29, 30	109	18:12	108, 109
8:21	80	18:18	243
9:27	243	18:35-43	244
9:28	91, 243	19:11	93
9:52	179, 184	19:11, 12	90
10:1, 17	7	19:12	93
10:3	7	19:38	90, 92
10:4	7	20:27-38	110
10:9	7, 92	20:33	144
10:11	92	20:35, 36	132, 164, 166, 184, 187
10:16	7, 28, 151	20:36	171, 180
10:17	175	20:38	117
10:18	168, 169, 175	21:27	129
10:20	176	22:3	176
11:14	175	22:24	6
11:14-23	175	22:25-30	6
11:17, 18	175	22:31	176
11:20	92	22:32	1, 8
11:20-22	175	22:34	118
11:38	150	22:37	233
11:52	5	22:55-62	9
11:52, 46	109	23:38	245
12:1-9	142	23:42	117, 124
12:10	12, 213	23:43	117, 118, 124
12:16	107	23:46	111

	PAGE		PAGE
24:4	117	24:26	157
24:8, 9	247	24:31	200
24:16	200	24:33	245
24:23	117	24:37, 39	113
24:25, 26, 27	233	24:44	233

JOHN

1:1	190	6:53	11
1:1-3	189	6:54	157, 158
1:6	197	6:57	11
1:7, 8	190	6:58	192
1:11	174	6:60	192
1:12	166, 167, 180	6:62	192
1:14	189, 190, 192, 194	6:62, 63	11
1:18	196, 240	6:63	11, 45, 192
1:21	88	6:66	192
1:28	109	6:68	11
1:42	4	6:70	20, 29, 162
2:11	248	7:16	190, 191, 204, 237
2:13-16	109, 248	7:22, 23	40
2:16	119	7:33, 34	120
2:24, 25	30	7:37	142
3:3	193	8:14	193
3:3, 7	45, 189	8:18, 54	193
3:5	152, 153	8:21	120
3:7	193	8:23	193
3:12	217	8:26	193
3:13	116, 129, 191	8:28	193, 237
3:16	132, 148, 159	8:31-59	107
3:19-21	141	8:39	194
3:22	151	8:42	193, 194
3:23	151	8:44	168, 175
3:31	191	8:48	178
3:34	213	8:56	194, 205
3:35	157	8:58	194
3:36	157	9:4	13
4:2	151, 153	9:41	141, 142
4:23, 24	28	9:42	142
4:47	66	10:1-28	80
5:18, 19, 22, 23, 27, 30, 36	191	10:7	10
5:19	195, 196	10:8	147, 202
5:19, 22, 23, 30	197	10:12	128, 159
5:19, 30	187, 199	10:16	27
5:21	42	10:16, 27	29
5:23	191	10:17	203
5:24	147	10:17, 18	194
5:27	195	10:18	191
5:28, 29	139, 146	10:20	164, 178
5:29	119, 132, 148	10:27	159
5:30	188, 195, 196	10:28	158
5:37	196	10:28, 29	124, 159
5:38	190	10:29	128
5:43	188	10:30	195
6:14, 15	174	10:33	196
6:17	89	10:34	1, 198, 199, 206
6:31	45, 192, 193	10:34, 35	232
6:33	192	10:36, 37	204
6:38	192	10:37, 38	201
6:39	158	10:40	109
6:39, 40, 44, 54	87, 88, 119, 125, 142	11:6	109
6:40	158	11:9	13
6:47	157	11:11, 14, 24, 25	111
6:51	192	11:11-14	159
6:52	11	11:11, 24, 25, 44	104

	PAGE		PAGE
11:24	87, 88, 142, 159	16:11	176
11:25	159	16:13, 14	211
11:26	159	16:33	157
11:47-57	110	17:2	198
12:1	137	17:3	11, 29
12:6	176, 245	17:4	157
12:24, 25	138	17:5	197, 198
12:31	176	17:5, 24	185
12:32	177	17:9	93
12:41	198	17:11	93
12:48	13, 142	17:11, 21	196
12:49, 50	237	17:12	11
13:2	176	17:14	93, 190, 191
13:14	201	17:14, 17, 18	196
13:27	176	17:14-18	93
13:33	120	17:17	11
13:36	120, 121	17:20	190
14:1-3	120	17:22	157
14:2	119, 120	17:22, 23	196
14:3	120	17:24	157
14:9	196	18:36	93, 193
14:10	196	18:37	78
14:12	120	19:19	245
14:16, 17	213	20:13-17	247
14:23	120, 213	20:17	111, 118, 186, 198, 206
14:26	211	20:20	13
14:28	120, 187, 196	20:22	13, 213
14:30	176	20:22, 23	5
15:1	10	20:23	12
15:3	11	20:28	198
15:6	131, 133	21:15-17	1
15:13	67	21:16	9
15:22	141, 142	21:18, 19	121
15:26	211, 213	21:25	238, 244

ACTS

1:1, 2	213	2:29, 34	94, 203
1:3	246	2:30	200
1:6	81, 92	2:31	12
1:9	128	2:32	195
1:10, 11	65, 193	2:34	146
1:11	65	2:38	99, 145, 151, 152, 153
1:15	10	2:38-39	48
1:16	234	2:38, 41	161
1:18	244	2:40	160
1:22-26	10	2:40, 41	153
2	5, 54	2:47	155
2:2	213	3:15	195
2:3	213	3:19-21	81
2:4	54	3:22	83
2:5	70, 88	3:26	145
2:7, 8	55	4:11	4
2:8	54	4:17	85
2:9	70	4:27	180
2:14	91	5	5
2:15-17	87	5:3	211
2:16	88	5:3, 4	176
2:17	213	5:3-10	50
2:21	153	5:9	211
2:22	187	5:12-16	5
2:24	195	5:17, 18	85
2:26, 27	114	5:30	195
2:27	111	5:31	145
2:27, 31	108	5:32	211

	PAGE		PAGE
6:2	10	13:29, 30, 34, 37	203
7	240	14:19	123
7:5	70, 82, 83	14:22	96, 101
7:30	116, 187, 240	14:27	5
7:31	116, 240	15	41
7:33	240	15:1, 24	41
7:34	204	15:13, 19	8
7:35	187, 240	15:14	149
7:38	98, 187	15:14-17	94
7:38, 53	207, 240	15:15, 16	81
7:55, 56	213	15:16	74, 78
7:58	85	15:18	113, 185
7:59	110	15:28	212
7:60	110	16:6	212
8	50	16:12	127
8:1	85	16:22, 23	85
8:5	153	16:30-33	153
8:7	48	16:31-33	152
8:12	153	17:2	42
8:14	8	17:11	2, 47
8:14-18	48	17:26	230
8:16	211, 214	18:6	28
8:17-19	213	18:28	77
8:37	153	19:13	53
8:38	151, 152	20:7	42
8:38, 39	151	20:10-12	13
8:39	116, 128	20:26	118
8:39, 40	105	20:28	9
9:1, 2	85	20:28-30	159
9:15	28	20:29, 30	3, 10
9:17	48	21:39	69
9:32-35	5	22:3	69
9:40	50	22:10	152, 156, 161
10	5	22:16	145, 152, 153, 156, 161
10:3, 10-17	116	23:6	125, 144
10:10, 11, 17	124	24:14, 15	125
10:19	211	24:15	143
10:38	212	24:22	143
10:38, 40	111	24:25	143
10:39, 40	195	25	141
10:44	213	25:17	141
10:47, 48	152	26:7	72
10:48	151, 152	26:13-18	117
11:18	5	26:18	177
12:9	117, 124	26:19	117
12:11	124	26:29	118
13:2	211	27:40	89
13:11	13	28:3-5	13
13:22	137	28:14	89
13:23	137	28:14-31	6
13:29, 30	208	28:25	234

ROMANS

1:1, 7	6	2:29	41, 61, 62
1:7	147	3:20	141
1:11	8	3:21	160
1:25	42	4:3	236
2:1	143	4:13	128
2:7	103	4:15	141
2:8	143	4:16, 17	70, 112
2:12	22	4:17	70, 185, 198
2:12-16	142	4:17-21	158
2:16	143	4:24	112
2:21	42	4:25	56

	PAGE		PAGE
5:1	160	8:24	49, 156, 158, 160
5:6	56	8:29	185, 194, 198, 202
5:8	56	9:5	199
5:12	230	9:6-8	62
5:12, 14	217	9:17	137, 211, 233
5:13	141	9:23	198
5:14	129, 173	10:9	152
5:16	230	10:13	152
5:18	230	10:19	71
5:19	230	11:1	61, 69
5:21	160, 162, 177	11:16	147
6:3, 4	112	11:25	61
6:4	151	11:30, 31	143
6:3-5	152	11:33, 34	237
6:6	138, 182	12:4-8	50
6:16-20	204	13:9	42
6:17	177	13:11	158
6:17, 18	112	14:1-4, 14	21
6:23	162, 177, 180	14:5	42
7	183	14:5, 6	21, 41
7:7	141	14:10	138, 141
7:11	173	14:11	54
7:17	177	14:17	21, 82, 95
7:17, 18	162	15:4	231, 235
7:18-25	145	15:8	98, 143
7:18	218	15:9	233
7:23	218	15:10	233
8:2	145	15:11	233
8:3	177	15:12	233
8:23	122	15:31	143
8:23-25	125

1 CORINTHIANS

1:10	13	8:9-13	21
1:12, 13	153	8:11	138
1:14, 15	153	9:5	14
1:14-16	153	9:22	48
1:17	153	9:24	96
1:18	155	9:27	138, 156
2:6	49	10:4	4, 10
3:3-8	13	10:5-10	204
3:4	14	10:11	231, 235
3:11	4	10:14	42
3:12	13	10:15	2
3:13	13	11:3	186, 199, 213
3:15	13, 14, 155	11:7	200
3:17	138	11:7-9	217
4:2-5	31	11:25	10
4:3-5	140	11:29	11
4:4	139	12	50
4:4, 5	159	12:1-3	47
4:5	139	12:1, 9, 10	48
4:14, 15	189	12:8	48
5:3	111	12:9	51
5:5	155	12:10	48
6:9, 10	42	12:11	50, 212
7:1	14	12:13	101
7:6-9	14	12:28	51
7:10	235	12:31	48
7:14	147, 148	13	48
7:17	6	13:8	48
7:25	234	13:8-12	54
7:34	112	13:10	48, 49
8:6	29	13:11	50

	PAGE		PAGE
13:12	50	15:23	87
13:13	49	15:23-28	64
14	55	15:24-28	64, 158, 199, 206
14:2	54	15:25	96
14:20	49, 150	15:26	96
14:26	102	15:27	187
14:27	55	15:27, 28	189
14:32	55	15:28	187
14:27, 28	55	15:29	37
14:33	23	15:31	138
14:34, 35	55	15:32	103
14:37	55, 235	15:35	137
14:37, 38	6	15:35, 36	153
14:40	55	15:37	137
15:1, 2	161	15:39	137
15:2	155, 160	15:42	138
15:3	56, 157	15:42, 43	138
15:4, 5	111	15:44	122, 138
15:4-19	38	15:45	137, 230
15:6, 18	111, 159	15:46	185
15:6, 18, 20, 51	121, 126	15:50	81, 122
15:15	195	15:50-54	90
15:17	56	15:51	138, 159
15:17, 18	103	15:51-53	122, 126
15:19-22	122, 125	15:52	137
15:20	137, 202, 204	15:53-55	5, 122
15:20-28	38	15:55	111
15:22	138, 145	16:2	42
15:22, 23	63, 96, 111	16:17	65
15:22-28	44, 189

2 CORINTHIANS

1:23	112	10:11, 12	123
2:11	177	11:1, 17	123
2:15	155	11:3	165, 217
3:6-9	41	11:3, 13	217
3:14, 15	118	11:3-26	177
4:2	77	11:4, 5-13	123
4:14	121, 122, 126	11:4, 12-15	123
4:16-18	122	11:7	123
5:1, 2-4	122	11:13	217
5:4	121, 122	11:13-15	177
5:8	121	11:14	177
5:9, 10	80, 138	11:21-29	123
5:10	66, 112, 121, 125, 126, 138, 141	11:23-29	126
5:14	38	11:28	6
5:17	202, 207, 209	11:30-33	123
5:20	28	12:1-4	124
6:2	13	12:2, 3	123, 124
7:1	112	12:2-4	122
7:6, 7	65	12:7	123, 139
10:2, 10-18	177	12:11	123
10:10	65	12:12	13
10:10, 11	123	13:3	123
		13:10	6

GALATIANS

1:4	56	2:21	160
1:8, 9	29, 48	3:1	143
2:7	8	3:6	236
2:11	5, 6	3:8	98, 194, 205
2:14	200	3:16	233

	PAGE		PAGE
3:19	40, 207, 240	4:10, 11	21
3:24	78, 98, 205	5:19, 21	161
3:27	114, 152, 153, 161	5:21	21, 81
3:27-29	128	5:24	138
3:27, 29	204	6:7, 8	138
3:28	248	6:15	67, 202, 207, 209
3:29	80	6:16	204

EPHESIANS

1:3	97	2:21, 22	97
1:4	45, 185, 198	3:3, 4, 5	237
1:17	186	3:10	97, 98
1:21	97	4: -	203
2:1, 2	93, 97, 113	4:6	42
2:2, 3	177	4:8	203
2:6	97	4:8-10	203
2:8	161	4:12	50
2:8, 9	160	4:14	234
2:10	202	4:18	148, 149
2:10, 15	207, 209	4:18, 19	147
2:11, 12	147	4:23, 24	202, 207, 209
2:12	22, 97, 148	4:25	42
2:12-16	64	4:28	42
2:13, 17	48	5:3	42
2:15	45, 202	5:19	102
2:19	127	6:1	42
2:19-22	120	6:4	148
2:20	4	6:12	98
2:21	197

PHILIPPIANS

1:6, 10	126	2:12	160
1:21-23	125	2:16	126
1:24-26	126	3:9-12	112
1:26	65	3:10-13	156
1:27	112, 127	3:11	126, 127
2:6	201	3:15	49
2:6, 7	199	3:19	127
2:7	200	3:20	127
2:7, 8	209	3:20, 21	122, 126, 127, 144
2:11	54	4:3	139

COLOSSIANS

1: -	202, 209	2:14-17	41, 67
1:5	125	2:16, 17	21, 41, 42
1:11	99	2:17	40
1:13	97, 98, 99	2:20	99
1:15	203	2:20-22	21
1:15, 16	201	3:2-4	115
1:16	99	3:3	106, 122
1:18	202, 204, 210	3:3, 4	111, 125
1:21	99	3:4	99, 106
1:22	99	3:5	42
1:23	28, 125	3:9	42, 99
1:27	125, 157	3:9, 10	202, 209
2:3	192	3:10	99
2:9	190	3:16	102
2:11, 12	99	3:20	42
2:12	151	3:24	99
2:13	99	4:11	99

	PAGE		PAGE
1 THESSALONIANS
2:8	112	4:13-17	144, 159
2:11	189	4:15	97, 102
2:14	189	4:15-17	144
2:19	14	4:16	128
3:2	8	4:17	126, 128, 129
4:13	22, 132, 147,	5:8	158
	149, 159	5:21	2, 19, 46
4:13, 14	121, 126	5:23	111
4:13-16	111

2 THESSALONIANS
1:8-10	13	2:9	47
1:9	66, 131, 132

1 TIMOTHY
1:1	125	3:8-11	42
1:17	29, 240	3:11	20, 29, 162
1:19, 20	153	3:16	157, 186, 194,
2:5	29, 186		197, 204
2:7	28, 50	4:1-3	3, 14
2:11-15	55	4:4, 5	21
2:13, 14	217	4:16	155
2:14	217	6:16	186, 196, 239
3:2	14

2 TIMOTHY
1:9	154, 198	3:16, 17	233
1:10	103, 158	4:1	81, 87, 96, 97,
1:11	50		102, 122, 126, 180
2:10-12	157	4:1, 8	117, 121
2:12	62, 78, 98	4:6	115
2:17, 18	153	4:7	139
3:1, 13	54	4:7, 8	96
3:3	42, 162	4:8	122, 126, 144
3:7	234	4:10	90
3:11-13	179	4:14	90
3:15-17	2	4:16, 17	179
3:16	235	4:17	179

TITUS
1:2	125, 158	2:13	125
1:6	14	3:5	155
1:14	153	3:7	125, 156, 158
2:3	29, 162

PHILEMON
v:15	132

HEBREWS
1:1, 2	237	2:7	188
1:2	88, 205	2:8	157, 206
1:3	190, 200	2:9	56, 188
1:4	188, 205, 207	2:11	189
1:5	73, 78, 202	2:12	102
1:6	202	2:13	114, 189
1:7	113	2:14	162, 204
1:8	205, 206	2:15	114
1:8, 9	189	2:18	186
1:9	206	3:1-6	120
1:10-12	206	3:5, 6	119
1:14	158, 166, 202	3:7	212, 233, 234
2:2	190, 207	3:7-19	231
2:5	206	3:12-14	155, 161

	PAGE		PAGE
4:2, 12	190	10:5	114, 182, 208
4:3	185	10:9	207
4:8, 9	83	10:10	10, 209
4:9, 11	41	10:11, 12	67
4:11	41	10:12	13, 56
4:12	189	10:14	113
4:15	173, 185, 204	10:15	233, 234
5:8	201, 209	10:26-29	155
5:8, 9	201	11:-	64, 128
5:9	160	11:1	49
5:13, 14	49	11:3	190
6:2	131	11:4	217
6:4, 5	92, 212	11:5	129
6:4-6	155	11:7	114
6:6	156	11:8, 13	82
7:3	207, 208	11:8-16	70
7:5, 9, 10	208	11:8, 9, 39, 40	117
7:12	132	11:8, 13, 39, 40	107
7:16	208	11:13	117, 129
7:18, 19	21	11:13, 39, 40	64
7:25	56	11:27	240
7:27	10	11:32	203
7:28	190	11:39	203
8:8	61	11:39, 40	112
8:13	41, 42, 132, 207	12:1	128
9:10	151	12:9	113, 142
9:12	131	12:19	190
9:24	66	12:23	112
9:26	66, 88, 162	12:24	115
9:27	38, 114, 148	13:2	187
9:28	120, 125	13:4	42
10:1	21, 112	13:7, 22	190
10:3-12	208	13:8	50
10:4, 10	205	13:20	143

JAMES

1:1	81	2:7	152
1:2, 3	249	2:14-18	178
1:13	186, 248, 249	2:19	178
1:13-15	29, 162, 173	2:24	160
1:17	20, 50	2:25	179, 184
1:18	45, 63, 189, 202, 207, 209	3:15	193
1:25	49	5:12	42
2:5	80, 81, 96, 100	5:14	14
		5:15	15

1 PETER

1:1	70	3:18-20	203
1:2	213	3:19	113, 114
1:3	186	3:19, 20	114, 165, 166
1:4	115	3:20, 21	152
1:4, 5	122, 125	3:21	114, 152, 153, 160
1:5	100	4:3-6	143
1:6, 7	249	4:6	114
1:10, 11	232	4:12	179
1:11	114, 198	4:16-19	179
1:20	88, 194, 197, 205	5:1	6
1:23	100, 189	5:1-3	9
2:1, 2	150	5:2	9
2:2	100	5:3	6
2:5	21, 100, 119	5:4	66, 80, 115
2:6	205	5:8	178
2:6-8	4	5:9	179
2:9	13, 40, 70, 100

PAGE

PAGE

2 PETER

1:1	81	2:5-7	181
1:5-7	82	2:6	132, 134, 135
1:5-11	140	2:10, 11, 12	181
1:9	145	2:11	181
1:10	100, 161	2:16	165, 217
1:10, 11	81, 96, 100	3:2, 3	181
1:11	96	3:4	215, 226
1:13-15	10	3:5, 7	190
1:18	91	3:6	130, 226
1:21	114, 180	3:8	228, 229
2:1	180	3:10	130
2:1, 2	3, 10	3:10, 12	130
2:2, 3	181	3:12	130
2:4	179, 180, 181	3:12, 13	207
2:4, 5	180	3:13	124, 130
2:5	114	3:16	121, 126
2:5, 6	180

1 JOHN

1:1	190	3:15	42
1:7	160	3:18	54
1:9	140	4:1	3, 19, 113, 53
2:2	148	4:1-3	153
2:15	193	4:2, 3	47
2:15, 16, 17	93	4:12	196
2:16	193	4:18	132
2:24, 25	158	5:11	115, 157, 158
3:1	166, 167, 180	5:13	157
3:2, 3	125	5:19	177
3:12	217	5:21	42

III JOHN

v:9	90
-----	----

JUDE

3	181	8, 9	181
5	154	9	181
5, 6	180	16, 19	181
6	179, 180	17, 18	181
7	132, 134, 135	23	182

REVELATIONS

1:1	97, 100, 101, 183, 237	2:25	66
1:1, 19	101	2:26, 27	44, 64, 78, 81, 96, 98, 113
1:4	210	3:1	210
1:4, 5	210	3:2	8
1:4, 8	210	3:5	139
1:7	66, 92, 128	3:7	210
1:8	210	3:11	209
1:9	63, 101	3:12	119, 209
1:11	209, 210	3:14	209, 210
1:11, 18	210	3:17	139
1:14, 15	210	3:21	78, 84, 96, 99, 209
1:16	210	3:21, 22	81
1:18	149, 186, 195, 203, 208, 210	4:10	149
1:20	210	5:9	54, 144
2	183	5:9, 10	78, 97
2:1	210	5:10	19, 44, 45, 62, 64, 100, 101, 128, 131
2:7	118, 124	5:14	149
2:8	210	6:9	115
2:12	210	6:10	64, 115, 131
2:18	210	6:11	115

	PAGE		PAGE
7:1	64, 131	14:10	135
7:4	62, 63	14:10, 11	134
7:9	54, 63, 64, 149	15:7	149
7:10	213	16	57
7:14	144	17:8	64, 131
9:17	135	17:9	10
10:6	149	17:14	135
10:11	54	17:15	54, 135, 136
11:8	204	17:18	135, 136
11:9	54	18:8-10, 15, 18	135
11:10	64, 131	18:13	182
11:15	101	18:16	109
11:18	81	19:3	134, 135
12	162, 166, 183	19:13	190
12:1	184	19:20	135
12:3, 4	184	20:4	149
12:5, 7-10, 12	183	20:4, 6	62, 149
12:7	184	20:4-6	96
12:7-9	170, 182	20:5	149
12:9	179, 182, 183, 184	20:6	44, 45, 64
12:17	59	20:10	134, 169
13:7	54	20:12	30
13:8	112, 194, 197	20:14	20, 135, 136
13:14	64, 131	21:8	29, 131, 135, 136, 143
14:1	63	21:10	45
14:1-5	149	21:14	9
14:3	62	22:12	96, 115
14:4	63, 64	22:18	18
14:6	54, 64, 131		